School Community GOES BEHIND THE SCENES of Future San Francisco Campus

University of the Pacific's plans for a dynamic dental school campus in the heart of San Francisco are moving from paper to the real world.

The recently purchased seven-story structure is located at 155 Fifth Street (between Mission and Howard Streets) in the South of Market, or SoMa, neighborhood. The building offers nearly 400,000 square feet of space and a large footprint, making it particularly well suited for the needs of the dental school.

In December and March, alumni, students, faculty and staff had opportunities to get behind-the-scenes tours of the pre-renovated space and a chance to experience the school's future neighborhood.

The first-floor design plans include a great hall, café, flexible auditorium, and separate entrances for patients and tenants. On the second and third floors, the plans call for eight small group practices to replace the existing four large group practices. Other changes include redesigned spaces for orthodontics, pediatrics, oral surgery, special needs and other clinical services. The fourth and fifth floors will feature flexible learning environments, a new simulation laboratory and space for research, offices and administration. The building will be designed to meet the LEED Gold standard, making it among the greenest dental schools in the world.

The University's Facility Planning Committee is working with lead architect SmithGroupJJR and numerous planning groups involved in clinic equipment, learning environments, technology and office areas.

Renovations have begun on the interior of the building, which has been completely stripped down to its structural core. Next will be exterior renovations to remove the building's existing façade, which will be completely replaced. Interior renovations are expected to continue up to another year and a half, with the school planning to take occupancy in mid-2014.

The new campus will also provide space for University of the Pacific to use for non-dental programs. Two floors of the building will initially be rented out to commercial tenants, but will provide future space into which the University can expand in later years.

"This new campus is being designed to serve not only students of today, but future generations to come," said Dean Patrick J. Ferrillo, Jr.

The generosity of the Dugoni School community will be a vital part of making the project a reality. The school is currently in the leadership gift stage of a major capital fundraising campaign to support the project.

How will the future campus impact the Pacific Dugoni family? School community members share their perspectives.

"One of the most exciting aspects of the new campus project is knowing that Pacific will have nothing but state-of-the-art equipment, and be a forerunner in dental education. Technology has created many advancements in the dental field, and as future dentists, our education needs to not only keep up with the changes, but also stay ahead! The Pacific upgrade will keep our institution at the forefront, allowing us to continue turning out some of the best doctors in the country."

—Ms. Poppy Montana-Marie Carlig
Class of 2014

"The new campus location will greatly benefit families who travel to our clinics from around the Bay Area. SoMa has so many public transportation options. The new location, combined with the quality of care we provide, will really make a difference in the lives of many families in need."

—Mr. Emmanuel Boyd, Manager
Hutto Patterson Pediatric Dentistry Clinic

"Pacific Dugoni has a reputation for innovative teaching in both the classroom and the clinic. The new campus will enable Pacific to continue to lead dental education by providing the flexibility to teach in a variety of class size venues, allowing for more individualized active learning. The new dental clinic will provide for training with the latest technology that our graduates can bring to their practices and patients."

—Dr. Terry Hoover, Vice Chair
Department of Dental Practice

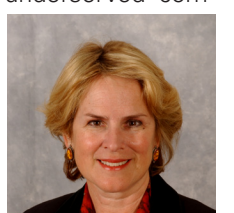

"The new campus will bring students and faculty closer to diverse and underserved communities who can really use our services. It will also offer opportunities for enhanced community partnerships and service-learning education and research."

—Ms. Christine Miller, Director
Community Programs

"The new campus will be a comfortable home for our students, faculty, staff, patients and alumni alike. It will offer learning environments for our continuing education courses, and it's right next to the Moscone Center where major CDA and ADA meetings are held. It will be a cutting-edge campus that alumni will feel proud to claim as their own."

—Dr. Eugene Santucci, President
Alumni Association

 CONSTRUCTION KICKOFF MARCH 9, 2012

Big Bash: Construction Kickoff

A “Construction Kickoff” reception during the March Alumni Association meeting commemorated the move forward on building renovations. Attendees who took a swing at a faux wall included University President Pamela A. Eibeck, Dean Patrick J. Ferrillo, Jr., Dean Emeritus Art Dugoni, Alumni Association President Dr. Gene Santucci and Pacific Dugoni Foundation President Dr. Steve Rose ’79. Alumni, students, faculty and others at the event were invited to sign a commemorative wall to make their mark on the historic project, and take photos in a construction-themed photo booth.

Donor Insight – John Cagnone

Many students, faculty, staff and patients eat in Café Cagnone at the dental school every day. Could you share with us the Cagnone family connection to the school?

My association with the school is through my late brother, Dr. Leroy Cagnone. Leroy graduated from this dental school, then the College of Physicians & Surgeons, in 1959. After serving 29 years as a member of the faculty and later as the associate dean for academic affairs, he retired in 1989. Leroy was one of the founders of the Cioppino dinner for incoming dental students and began the humanistic teaching model along with others at the school. Upon his retirement, we established the Dr. Leroy D. Cagnone Scholarship Endowment in his honor. Leroy passed away in 1998 and the dental school’s café was renamed in his memory in 2004. It is a tribute to his involvement with the school and his dedication to students.

What motivates you to give to the school on a regular basis? Why are you supporting the campaign for a new building?

I’ve supported the dental school because I consider it an honor for me and my family to have been a small part of this truly outstanding Dugoni School of Dentistry. I also feel it’s a good investment in the future to support this wonderful institution. The new building provides a great opportunity to contribute and be a part of the future success of the school. This worthy endeavor will play a significant role in student education for many years to come. It will be a better school and will offer more to the students. It’s a big project and the new school won’t be built unless we support it!

When you talk to others about the Dugoni School, what comes to mind? How do you describe the school to others?

I describe the family atmosphere of the school. Everyone is happy—students, staff; the school has a wonderful humanistic approach and such good people working there. I’ve stayed in contact with members of the school community for many, many years now since they’re such outstanding people.

I feel good about supporting a school that acts like a family.

Anything else you would like to share about your personal motivations for engaging in philanthropy?

It has been gratifying to support the Dugoni School over the years and to receive letters of appreciation from the students who have benefitted from my family’s scholarship endowment. Many of them expressed their satisfaction with the educational experience they received, and their intention to support the school in the future themselves. My brother, Leroy, was very fond of the school. It’s good to support something in life, and I feel the dental school is a worthy cause.

Mr. Cagnone is retired and was formerly a printer and typesetter at University of California, Berkeley. He lives in El Cerrito. The Cagnone family have been generous and loyal donors to Pacific Dugoni and involved with the school for more than five decades.

Honor Someone Special This Summer

Looking for a unique gift idea? Make a gift in honor of your special person and they will receive a hand-signed letter of acknowledgement.

Is there someone in the Pacific Dugoni family who is special to you? Perhaps one of your instructors was a mentor who inspired you. Or your best friend today was the person sitting next to you in a lecture hall during your first year. Maybe your spouse is a successful dentist who supports your family using the skills learned in dental school. The Pacific Dugoni family is sustained by these very special individuals.

Show your special Dugoni School family members what they mean to you by making a gift that will mean something to them. A gift to the Arthur A. Dugoni School of Dentistry says, “Thank you for all that you have done for me” as no other gift can.

Whether for a birthday, anniversary, reunion, or other special occasion, make a gift to the Pacific Dugoni Annual Fund in honor of your friend, colleague, mentor or loved one.

As with all donations made in honor of those you care about, we will send your appreciation to them in the form of a special, hand-signed letter acknowledging your gift.

Kids in the Clinic— Vino de Mayo Raises Funds for Children in Need

Celebrating Cinco de Mayo, friends and supporters of the Dugoni School of Dentistry gathered at Vino de Mayo, a biennial fundraising wine auction and gala supporting the school's Kids in the Clinic program. Kids in the Clinic provides funds to help disadvantaged families meet their children's dental care needs.

More than $100,000 was raised through this year's event held at The Ritz-Carlton, San Francisco on Saturday, May 5. The event included champagne, margaritas and wine tastings poured by renowned California vintners. A silent auction was followed by a gourmet dinner and live auction, and the opportunity to Fund-A-Need — and help put a smile on a child's face with a direct donation to the Kids in the Clinic fund.

Honorary chairs for this year's event were entrepreneur Julio Bermejo, chef Gerald Hirigoyen, chef Hubert Keller and television host Liam Mayclem.

Participants helped ensure that underserved children have access to care at the school's Hutto Patterson Pediatric Clinic and Redmond Family Orthodontic Clinic. Kids in the Klinic funds allow students, residents and faculty to expertly treat children in the community regardless of the family's ability to pay for that care.

In California, 500,000 children miss one or more days of school each year due to dental problems. More than 24 percent of children in California have never seen a dentist. The Dugoni School is a lifeline for low-income families with nowhere else to go for their children's oral health care. Thanks to the generosity of alumni and friends, Pacific Dugoni continues to do its part to help provide care to those in need.
