MEAT CONSERVATION HITS AMERICAN PUBLIC, COLONY

A proclamation on meat conservation by Governor Olson on Oct.10 has been forwarded to the Project by the California State Council of Defense, it was announced by the administration. It says in part that "in a necessary war measure to provide meat for our armed forces and fighting allies, an order has been made by the Federal government restricting supplies of meats for civilians."

Meanwhile, the Proclamation states it is essential that citizens act voluntarily for their share of available meat supplies, limiting the individual's weekly allotment of meat to 2 lbs. per person.

It is important that colonists realize that the American public is continually being asked to make sacrifices in food-stuffs and other essentials. Life in the Project sometimes clouds these sacrifices and colonists sometimes feel they are not getting all the foodstuffs they want, declared the project authorities.

Mr. Ralph Phek, Project Steward, reports that required to make sacrifices, it is no more than the people throughout the country are required to do.

KEEP 'EM LEARNING

year-long spring fever which sets nisei workmen and activities in the colony into a whirl of schooling from dance to dance, has finally come to a standstill.

Now that the frivolous novelty has worn off, or that it's simply too cold to go out, it'll be a good idea to pause a bit for serene reflection.

Even from our rather sheltered existence, there can be no escape from the dark picture that strikes us in the face. We are constantly being dogged by the spectre of post-war resettlement problems.

The task is large but not insurmountable. An early preparation is the eventual solution to these problems, and the task is the logical place to start.

Vocational and educational opportunities are abundant here. Failure to take advantage of these may spell the end of self-development because we are only getting 18 or 16 dollars a month.

Yesterday we were students, farm laborers, grocery delivery boys, civic service clerges and laundry workers who had specialized training but lived and continued to live - as though we had never known anything - except the work we did at the moment. Today we are engineers, school teachers, departmental supervisors, business managers, editors, architects, and technicians of all kinds.

In the course of these activities, it will unconsciously prepare us for the reality of the outside world.

And this is our last editorial until the temporarily shared desk before Editor Imazeki takes over Monday. Sun shines rarely at the corner of the office of the Colony's editorial office. From the second story window, a show in the snow on the surrounding mountains and the golden sunset. I even smiled to myself as I whistled a little tune from "Little Lamb" back home in the farmer colony.

This seems to be the common experience of many of us evacuee workers here. They say the first three days are the toughest. From the second week on, the work becomes much easier. I even smiled to myself as I whistled a little tune from "Mary Had A Little Lamb" back home in the farmer colony.

We are leaving Imazeki an unsightly, messy desk.

But we're sure he'll clean it up.

SCHOOLS ASK PARENT, STUDENT ATTENDANCE

A serious problem concerning attendance is facing the school with coast of winter's bitter weather, it was reported at the Tri-State High.

During the first part of the week when a minor blizzard was raging in the Colony, the school reported an absence of 800 to 900 students. This puts the attendance at only one third of the total enrollment.

If this should keep up as long as the weather remains cold not only the students, but also the school program will suffer stated the office. Unless the attendance of these students are kept up, the school will not receive state appropriations which it hopes to receive.

Teachers realize the students living in "Alaska" have a long distance to walk and that many are not properly clothed. In order to prevent absences which create a great deal of work and confusion in the school office, the teachers ask that full cooperation of the students and parents be given to prevent these pare regular attendance.

1. CONQUERED

It seems the composition of your crew has much to do with the difficulty of the beet work. Of necessity, the pulling, toping and loading of sugar beets must be done by a team of four, six, eight, or 12. The bigger the gang, the easier the pulling. Therefore, there have been some. Now, some members of the crew may work fast and the others slow. Where there is a lack of understanding among the members of the crew before they go on a contract, it is apt to cause friction in the midst of the work. For, the fast ones begin to think they are "helping out" the slow ones to make the same amount of money, which is not making. It seems best, therefore, to make up a crew of about the same speed and strength. Or, have it understood by each member of the crew that there will be no squawking whether one goes fast or slow, that everyone does his best and shares in the total wages paid to the crew.

This year, the recruiting was done on a handicap basis. I think the next year will be much better since the boys themselves have gained some knowledge as to the complicated system of higher-wage, faster-wage, sugar company, and farm unit wage labor relations.

"A" LEAGUE BEGINS
TITLE RACE SUNDAY
Tula Lake's top basketball players will go into action Sunday afternoon as the "A" league begins its season.

Sitting as pre-season favorites to cop the "A" title are the Sacramento Mikan, who have already become the team to beat. But the question of the moment is whether any team can be too highly favored on an outdoor court when, with the wind whistling through the nets and the sun shining into the players' eyes, shooting becomes a game of chance and dribbling becomes an obstacle race.

But, anyhow, the Mikan are favored and they begin their season against the Placer-All Stars, an aggregation composed of players from the Newcastle Golden Raiders and Fairly, Green Devils, Golden Raiders and the Grey-Devils were deadly rivals before coming here, but they combined their squads to enter the league.

Marysville's "Crismon Tide", one of the powerful league contenders, meet the Pluma Clippers. "Crismon Tide", with their famed "French Bowl twins", are expected to be in the thick of the battle for the championship.
