Evacuees May Ask For Job Placement

Obrien gets New Post; Scores Chronicle Report
For Job Placement

Those With Specialized Skills Should Apply

Evacuees who are interested in outside employment not covered by job offers received at the project are urged by the War Relocation Authority to discuss their situations with a representative of the project employment office, especially where they have specialized skills or professions. It may be possible to refer their applications for special placement effort by field relocation officers in the cities where employment is desired.

Job offers received at the project are not altogether indicative of actual employment opportunities for evacuees, especially in the less common trades and professions. Relocation supervisors are equipped to make special efforts to place a limited number of persons provided they know the particular type of employment for which the applicant is fitted.

While the relocation officer may not always find an employer willing to make an employment offer sight unseen on the basis of correspondence alone, the general employment market may be so good in the applicant’s particular line of work that, on the relocation officer’s recommendation, WRA will issue indefinite leave to permit the evacuee to go to the area to secure work with the assistance of the relocation officer and the local office of the U. S. Employment Service.

EDITORSIAL:
THIS MEMORIAL DAY

Tomorrow civic and religious organizations throughout the country are solemnly observing Memorial Day in tribute to those who have died in the battlefields. A floral wreath will be placed on the grave of the unknown soldier and melancholy notes of taps will be sounded.

This is a fine symbolic gesture but Memorial Day this year has a deeper significance. In the last war, men fought and died in the belief that war will no longer be a plague in the world. Today we are again in the midst of a terrible struggle. The oft-repeated phrase "that they shall not have died in vain" should, after the suffering of the last war and the untold suffering which will come before the successful completion of this present war, become a reality and not just a poetic phrase.

The world condition must be such that in the future it will no longer be possible for men like Hitler, Mussolini or Tojo to breed war. Only in this way can faith with the dead be kept.

LA POINTE WILL BE HERE TUESDAY

Primarily for the benefit of the people leaving the Project, and also to serve the need for ladies' clothing, the Co-op Management announces that La Pointes, Klamath Falls ladies apparel shop, will bring their merchandise to Cantoon #5 this coming Tuesday, June 1, between the hours of 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

La Pointes will bring ladies coats, suits, dresses and hats, it was revealed.

CAPITOL CHEVROLET WILL BUY USED CARS

With price ceilings on used cars expected to be put into effect soon, Wallace Mason of the Capitol Chevrolet Co. of Sacramento announced that he would buy only a few more days.

Any residents wishing to sell their used cars or trucks may do so by contacting Mr. Mason at the Evacuee Property office in the Ad. bldg.
