VOLOUNTEERS PREPARE FOR ACTION AT CAMP SHELBY

CAMP SHELBY, Miss., June 11—Newly-inducted volunteers from the relocation centers are arriving daily, in groups and individuals, heading to the Combat Team. They are immediately assigned to companies and their training starts. The new men already have been inducted and processed at various relocation centers before they arrive here. Company commanders here check their equipment, replenish what necessary, and send them to special recruitment centers where they are put through a program designed to catch them up with their regular companies who are already well into their basic training.

Company Headquarters has started a series of schools for non-commissioned officers and applicants for Officer Candidate Courses. Completion of these courses document that the students will go to Officer Candidate Schools but the studies should prove highly advantageous.

The Mainland youths appear particularly keen and eager to get on with their training. Early opportunity to enter Officer Candidate Schools offers a distinct incentive but beyond that is the desire of the soldier to gain proficiency in condition as early as possible and master the rudiments of Combat Team training.

hommies spent in serious study of military and technical manuals. "Go for Broke," in the regimental motto and the newly-recruited soldiers are quick to subscribe to its unit. It means "Shoot the Works" or "Risk All." Proud of their volunteers with a strong desire to make a name for itself, the United States military, the men from the Relocation Centers are definitely determined to go for broke in the war against Axis enemies.

Next to getting in fighting trim, the newly-arrived soldier seems most anxious to get in touch with volunteers from other Relocation Centers. As soon as they arrive, there is a lively bit of herram-er at the regional area to see whether "Wise" or "Tom" from another center is here, and if they locate each other there are impromptu, joyful reunions.

The new men from the Mainland—also seem anxious to get acquainted with their comrades from Mainland. They are mingling together in the various companies with regard to their geographic origin.

LETTER DESCRIBES LIFE AT BOISE

Writing from Boise, Idaho to James Lewis, garbage foreman, were three former volunteers, Harry Tanaka, Stanley Okada, and Richard Hamada. They wrote:

"At first we were very doubtful as to a happy outlook here but a day or so of shopping around the town of Boise quickly changed our point of view. We are surprised, but talking to the people in Boise we need no reminder..."After only being here for a day we felt we should come here sooner."

"If all should go as well as now we expect to make this our permanent residence.

Mrs. A. Kuma moto's Girl Reserves came to the office like waves of locusts through a cornfield and completed the work which would have required the regular staff a week. TRI-STATE THEATRE PLANS

The high school thespians gave a good account of themselves in their first production during the last week at the Little Theater. Under direction of Miss Jeannette Sager, dramatic instructor at Tri-State high school, the young performers offered three one-act plays.

"Love in Bloom," a short comedy, concerned with Cynthia, an adolescent girl, infatuated with her professor who in turn is in love with her mother. Scenes were light provoking and the student actors apparently enjoyed participating in the play. Mary Goishi as Aunt Judith and Jane Iinikawa as Cynthia putting finesse in their roles were outstanding.

Moree Saito and George Arian dressed up as colored washwomen in the howling skit, "Nigger Heaven," studied with "corns" of highest quality.

"Two Crooks and a Lady" was a detective thriller with full of thrilling punches and suspense. Ado Nakagiri ably portrayed an invalid lady who outwitted a crafty thief (George Hiraga) and his accomplices (Kime Huige).

Student directors were Doity Sato, Allen Nagawa, Mary Ito and Lillian Hasegawa. Ado Sakamoto was in charge of the make-up.
