Alumni Banquet

Awards and

The election of a new president, the inauguration of annual awards to undergraduate students in recognition of superior scholastic attainment, the naming of the Distinguished Alumnus of the year, and the acknowledgement of a special gift from the Class of 1911 highlighted the annual Alumni Association banquet held April 29.

Attending one of the final events on the Alumni College-Parents Day schedule, over 150 alumni elected the organization's slate of officers for the coming year.

Named as president for 1961-62 was Henderson McGee '27. Stepping up from the vice-presidency, McGee was a member of Rhizomia and yell leader while an undergraduate and now is assistant chief of the engineering division of the U.S. Army Engineer District, Sacramento.

Jerald Kirsten '47, who has served this year as treasurer, will become vice-president. The Rhizomia alumnus and former graduate manager of athletics at Pacific is now manager of Lyman and Keister, a Lodi public accounting firm.

Janet Lancaster '57 of Modesto will take on a dual role as secretary and member of the Board of Directors. She is a teacher at El Vista Elementary School in Modesto.

Bernard Piersa '48 of Stockton once again will have charge of the purse strings. Treasurer from 1957 to 1960, the certified public accountant was the recipient of the Association's Outstanding Service Award at the Alumni Banquet last year in recognition of his service to the organization and the work he had done in stimulating and investing alumni funds.

Elected to the Board of Directors were Norman Harris '54, Philip Comfort '54, and Ernie Reed '39, all of Stockton, and Don Smith '52 of Turlock.

New members of the Alumni Fund Council are Eugene Weston '45, Bill Klein '29, John Travaille '40, and Dr. John Blinn '40 of Stockton; Asa Clark '48 and Richard Johnsen '45 of Sacramento; and Clarence Royce '28 of Oakdale.

During the banquet event, the Association presented certificates to the youth and coed in each undergraduate class having the highest cumulative grade point average, a recognition of scholarly achievement that will become an annual project of the organization.

Freshman recipients were Lois Koller, elementary education major from Santa Clara, and Norris Carlson, Spanish major from Gillette, Wyoming. Sophomores honored were Martha Grannell, economics major from Bakersfield, and Timothy Groves, pharmacy major from Tracy.

Richard Corson, history major from Millbrae, took the junior men's award, while Carla Eubank, German major from Stockton, was honored as the top woman scholastically in the class. Awards for the senior class went to psychology major DeAna Choisser from Phoenix, Arizona, and pharmacy major James Zimmerman of Lodi.

Among the proud parents accompanying the honorees to the banquet were Jim and Dorothy (Hoover) Corson, who are both members of the Class of 1927. In addition to their ties to the institution as alumni, Corson also served as dean of men and dean of student personnel for Pacific and Stockton College before accepting a position as superintendent of Modesto city schools. He now is executive secretary of the California Association of School Administrators.

Dick is the latest of the Corson sons to study at Pacific. Jim, Jr., graduated in 1952 and John, a former PSA president, received his sheepskin in 1957.

A special award went to Beck Parsons, outgoing Alumni Association president, for his outstanding leadership. Supervisor of child welfare and attendance in San Jose Unified School District, Parsons has proved the "like father-like son" adage, for his father was alumni president in 1924, Pacific's memorable last year on its San Jose campus.

Bishop Kennedy, who delivered the benediction at 1961 Distinguished Alumnus Award.

Bishop Kennedy, who delivered the benediction at the Baxter Stadium groundbreaking ceremonies earlier in the day and gave the banquet address, was cited for "notable achievement reflecting honor upon alma mater."

A member of Pacific's Board of Regents, the alumnus is bishop of the Los Angeles area, has served as president of the Council of Bishops of the Methodist Church, and is a recently appointed member of the State Board of Education. Author of several books, he was honored in 1952 by his alma mater with a Doctor of Sacred Theology degree.

Others who have been selected as distinguished alumni are Dr. Rockwell Hunt, 1956; L. Eugene Root, 1957; Jo Van Fleet, 1959; and Dr. Richard F. Pedersen, 1960.

Hanging above the speaker's table on public display for the first time at the banquet event was a new University of the Pacific banner, a gift of the Class of 1911. The 50-year graduates, who were completing their schooling at the time the University of the Pacific changed its name to the College of the Pacific, took on the project under the chairmanship of Dr. Samuel Staub of San Jose to commemorate the institution's transition back to its "University" name. Representing the class at the presentation was Mrs. Emory Phillips (Anna Quarnstrom) of Templeton.

Ground Breaking

"TOO LOW THEY BUILD..."

Inscribed on a wall of the Library of Congress in Washington, D.C., is a quotation from Edward Young's "Night Thoughts"; "Too low they build, who build beneath the stars."

This has been Pacific's theme as it has led out with its unique idea for a system of cluster colleges that will incorporate the best qualities and traditions of English education with the best that the American system of higher education has to offer.

The University took another step towards the transition of this dream into reality when ground was broken in Baxter Stadium April 29 for the first cluster college quadrangle living units.

Standing on the floor of the athletic bowl that includes in its history the great football reigns of C.E. "Swede" Righter and Amos Alonzo Stagg, President Robert E. Burns called the event "a great day in American education" that had been preceded by a great deal of thinking and dreaming.

Then, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Raymond of Knights Landing, Ted Baun, president of the Board of Regents, Dr. Burns, and other University and community dignitaries turned over the first symbolic shovelsful of dirt.

The first of the cluster colleges, which is scheduled to open in September, 1962, will be named in honor of the Raymonds, who have given Pacific 3,500 acres of rich Sutter County land valued at $1,500,000.

THE DREAM: Mr. and Mrs. Walter Raymond, for whom the first cluster college will be named, and President Burns display the architect's drawing of the buildings to be completed during the first phase of construction.

The construction cost of the project will be $1,947,147. Financed by a $2,115,000 Federal Home and Housing Agency loan, the estimated project cost is $2,205,000.

The initial construction will consist of four dormitories, a dining hall, commons room, and administrative unit for Raymond College. Also scheduled for the first building phase are two dormitories and a dining hall that will make up part of the living accommodations for the second cluster college when it is established.

The residence halls, each of which will house approximately 65 students, will be three-story structures. Each will have a lounge, study room, recreation room, and head resident's apartment. The dining halls and commons room will be one story, with wood paneling used in the interiors. All the buildings will be of Collegiate Gothic architecture with brick veneer, harmonizing with the architecture of the existing campus.

The living facilities will complement the academic features of the cluster college idea. The 250 students who will compose the student body of each of the colleges not only will enjoy the graciousness of living but also will be able to carry the intellectual stimulation and searching that they find in their studying into the dining room, where they will be sitting down together for meals; into the commons room, where they can meet informally with each other or with their professors; and into their dormitory lounges.

A Look at Mexican Education

The differences in teacher training and school control are two of the most striking contrasts in American and Mexican education, according to Ramiro Montes, an instructor in the Escuela Normal Superior in Mexico City, who visited the campus in late April.

The educator, who explained he could best show the differences in teacher education by outlining the process in Mexico City, said that every child attends six years of grade school, the equivalent of our primary school.

Then, the grammar school graduates take an entrance examination to enter the three-year secondary school program, which has a curriculum that is more advanced than that in United States junior high schools, according to Montes. The school shortage necessitates this paring down, he said, giving as an example Mexico City, which has roughly 1,600 elementary schools and only 100 secondary schools.

After completing secondary school, those who wish to be teachers enter the normal school for elementary teachers where they take a three-year course and emerge as fullfledged instrucors.

If an elementary teacher wishes to do graduate work or become a secondary school teacher, he may take an examination to enter a normal superior school, such as the one in which the visiting educator teaches, or a similar institution, such as the College of Philosophy and Letters at the University of Mexico. At Montes' institution, the students take courses in one of the 13 schools devoted to specific academic disciplines. Thus a person who wishes to teach biology in a secondary school or university will take all of his courses, aside from those fulfilling a foreign language requirement and general education courses, in the school of biology.

Those desiring a doctorate in education can study for an additional two years at a normal superior school.

Montes, who has studied in the United States and worked at a Mexican consulate, pointed out the control of American schools by local boards as the second main difference he observed during his month-long tour of the United States.

Ramiro Montes, Mexican educator, and Pedro Osuna, Pacific assistant professor of education who recently completed plans for the Mexican student teaching program, talk in front of Martin Library.

In Mexico, most of the schools are controlled by the federal government, except in some of the large cities or towns where they are city or state-controlled, he explained. The advantage of this system is that they can get more money more quickly, he added candidly.

Montes was one of eleven educators comprising the first group to be brought to the U.S. by the Inter-American Education Foundation, a private organization founded by John Penery, former faculty member at San Diego State, to acquaint Mexican educators with the school systems and ways of life found "north of the border."

Starting in New York City, the group veered up to New England before beginning their sojourn across the nation.

One of the programs that most interested them, according to Montes, was the Antioch College four-quarter plan in which a student works a quarter and studies a quarter, alternating on the job with another student so an employer has his position constantly filled.

They were also impressed, the Mexican educator said, with the cooperation of business and industry with education and the programs outlined for them by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce to inform schools about business and business about schools.

They hope to reestablish a similar program in Mexico, he said, and also are starting a campaign to have business people help reconstruct school buildings. The federal government is interested in building new schools, but the old ones also are in need of repair.

Turning to the educational problems of his own country, Montes said they are now in the midst of an 11-year plan which has as one of its main goals provision for a primary education for every child in Mexico. About 45 per cent of the country's population does not have any schooling, he said, a percentage which rises in some of the extremely mountainous areas.

One of the things of which Mexico is most proud is its system of schools in rural areas which had its inception in the Mexican Social Revolution. In every state in the republic, there is one normal school to train teachers specifically for work in these rural areas, Montes said. The school adds to its regular curriculum courses in areas such as agriculture and first aid so that the teachers are able to fill various needs in the community.

The 11-year program also includes a building program for rural areas. Prefabricated schools are set up, along with a prefabricated home for a teacher which is, in most cases, the nicest house in the area. This is an effort, Montes said, to make the teacher as comfortable as possible so that he or she will stay at the rural school.

Commenting on higher education, the visitor said one of the things that Americans fail to realize is that there are some superior institutions of higher learning in Mexico and South America, some of which had been established long before the Mayflower.

Many people "north of the border" also think that the National University of Mexico is the only university in Mexico, Montes observed. In reality, every state has at least one university or state college, in addition to some private institutions. He listed as examples of some of the better known institutions the Polytechnic Institute in Mexico City, the University of Monterey, and Monterey Institute of Technology.

Commenting on the beauty of the Pacific campus, Montes remarked that the Mexican universities are in a state of transition in the location of their campuses. In years past, he said, the universities were located downtown, making use of any available buildings. Now the trend is to build outside the cities, such as they are doing in Hermosillo, he said.

STUDENT TEACHERS TO GO TO MEXICO

University of the Pacific has completed arrangements to send four teachers a semester to Mexico next year for their practice teaching experience, a "first" in California teacher education.

The students will be teaching at Colegio Americano de Torreon, a 460-student school which last fall moved into a new plant consisting of 18 classrooms, gymnasium, and library. Offering classes from kindergarten to the 12th grade, the school is a private organization and incorporated under Mexican law as a non-profit organization and operated by a board of directors. It is accredited in Mexico and the United States. There are 58 students of American parentage in the school; the rest are Mexican.

The institution is located in Torreon, a town about the size of Stockton in the state of Coahuila in north central Mexico. One of the few planned cities in Mexico, it is mostly a mining and agricultural community.

At Colegio Americano, kindergarten and first grade have an education pattern similar to most U.S. schools and are taught by English-speaking teachers with Spanish-speaking assistants. The second through the seventh grades are taught half-day by Mexican teachers, following the required government courses. American teachers, using an outline much like that of California schools, instruct the other half-day.

The practice teachers, who do not need to speak Spanish, will be selected on the basis of their ability to deal with the situation, their scholarship, and their personal characteristics, such as sympathy for bi-cultural people and their affection for children.

Dr. Lloyd King, chairman of the elementary education department, will go to Torreon for a week in the fall and spring semesters to evaluate the progress of the practice teachers, who will be registered as full-time Pacific students.

The idea of the student teacher exchange was first suggested by Donald D. Jameson, director of the school. Following preliminary arrangements via mail, Pedro Osuna, assistant professor of education, spent two days at Colegio Americano completing the plans.

The Mexican program, which promises to be a continuing opportunity, will provide a widening perspective in teaching experience, according to Dean J. Marc Jantzen of the School of Education.

NAMES in the NEWS

RAYMOND COLLEGE CHANCELLOR

Dr. Warren B. Martin, chairman of the department of religion at Cornell College, Mount Vernon, Iowa, has been named provost of Raymond College of the University of the Pacific, the first of the institution's cluster colleges.

Dr. Martin's appointment ends a search of over a year for the person best qualified to serve as provost of the institution, which is scheduled to open in September, 1962, according to President Robert E. Burns.

"A man of outstanding scholarship, administrative experience in one of the outstanding colleges of the mid-West, imagination, and enthusiasm, Dr. Martin is eminently suited to assume the leadership of an institution which we feel will be an outstanding academic innovation in the United States," the Pacific president said.

The new provost said he "will guide the establishment of the new academic program, implement that program by the recruitment of a faculty dedicated to the liberal arts ideal and skilled in the interdepartmental approach, and encourage the social and cultural ideals in the community that will help to identify and demonstrate the character of Raymond College."

"We will seek to establish at Raymond a total educational experience that will combine the proven excellence of certain aspects of our academic heritage with the measure of innovation and creativity necessary to meet the contemporary educational challenge in California. While we acknowledge the need for mass education and the development of excellent and huge universities, we also see the need to preserve the small liberal arts college where the program of academic excellence is realized through the interplay of ideas and personalities working freely in an atmosphere of quiet dignity and culture. We hope to provide at Raymond a setting, within the general structure of the University, that will encourage this creative exchange without depreciating the personalities or commercializing the ideas," he said.

A well-known speaker, Dr. Martin appears regularly on the Cornell chapel program, frequently addresses civic, social, and religious groups, and lectures each year at major colleges and universities. His campus speaking schedule this year included Morningside College, Hamline University, Iowa State University, and the University of Wisconsin.

The provost has published in The Christian Century, Pulpit Magazine, and The Christian Advocate. A book on Christianity and politics is in process for Thomas Crowell publishers. A graduate of Asbury College, Dr. Martin also holds a bachelor of divinity degree from Nazarene Theological Seminary and a doctorate from Boston University. He has done additional study at Boston University and Harvard.

He is a member of the American Society of Church History, American Historical Association, National Association of Biblical Instructors, Faculty Christian Fellowship, Fellowship of Reconciliation, American Association of University Professors, and Kappa Phi Kappa, professional education fraternity.

COMMENCEMENT SPEAKER

Dr. Arnold E. Joyal, president of Fresno State College, will deliver the commencement address on June 11 when approximately 450 graduates receive degrees bearing the title "University of the Pacific" for the first time since 1910.

Commencement exercises are set for 7 p.m. in Pacific Memorial Stadium.

A graduate of the University of California, where he also obtained his master's and doctoral degrees, Dr.

Joyal began his teaching career as a high school instructor in Wheatland, California. He then was an associate specialist in school finance with the U.S. Office of Education before returning to the teaching profession as a lecturer in education at the University of California. The commencement speaker has held teaching and administrative positions at the University of Denver and University of Maryland and came to the Fresno State presidency in 1948 from a position as dean of the College of Education and director of summer session at the University of Oklahoma.

Dr. Joyal has served as associate editor of the Review of Educational Research, as chairman of the Committee on Tax Education and School Finance of the National Education Association, as president of the California Council on Teacher Education, National Commission on Accreditation, and Commission on Teacher Education, California Teachers Association.

He is currently president of the Association for Higher Education, a member of the executive committee of the Western College Association, and a member of the Board of Trustees of the Educational Testing Service, Princeton, New Jersey.

NATIONAL CONTEST WINNER

Ernie Vrenios, Pacific junior from Turlock, won the men's voice student audition sponsored by the National Federation of Music Clubs in April and sang at the national convention of the organization in Kansas City, Missouri.

Vrenios, a voice major, took first place in the Northern California, state, and regional contests before participating with eight other finalists in the national competition.

A student of Miss Elizabeth Spelts, associate professor of voice, the tenor has received all his formal vocal training at Pacific. He also has done all his operatic study under Dr. Lucas Underwood at the University Conservatory.

Vrenios' 15-minute contest performance included arias from Puccini's "La Boheme" and Mendelssohn's "Elijah," two 18th Century classic Italian songs, "Il Mio Tesoro" from "Don Giovanni," "Love in the Dictionary" by Dougherty, "Sure on the Shining Night" by Barber, and "By a Lonely Forest Pathway" by Griffes.

The audition winner also was winner of the voice division of the Young Artists Contest sponsored by the Stockton Symphony last fall. He is a member of the Pacific A Cappella Choir, Phi Mu Alpha music society, and Alpha Kappa Phi fraternity and has appeared in campus opera productions. He also is soloist at the First Presbyterian Church in Stockton and frequently performs for local clubs and organizations.

NEW PRESIDENT

Dr. Robert J. Smutny, head of the department of ancient languages, was elected president of the Classical Association of the Pacific States, Central Section. An immediate past vice-president, he will serve a one-year term.

The central section division is composed of approximately 110 teachers of classics at all educational levels from junior high school to university and others interested in the classics.

INTER-AMERICAN CONVENTION SPEAKER

Dr. William D. Nietmann, chairman of the department of philosophy, will give an ontological address on objectivity and subjectivity to the general assembly of the Second Extraordinary Inter-American Convention of Philosophers at San Jose, Costa Rica, in July. His paper on pedagogy of philosophy also has been accepted for presentation at the didactics section of the convention.

Dr. Nietmann received a travel grant for the convention from the American Council of Learned Societies through the American Philosophical Association's Committee to Advance Original Work in Philosophy.

THE EDUCATED MAN

"Education is not identical with schooling," Dr. John Baird '47 told those in attendance at the annual Honors Convocation on campus recently.

Speaking on "The Educated Man," the alumnus said that schooling is only a part of education. Education, he explained, must deal with the whole child, while schooling cannot encompass all of life.

Education also must not be confused with the trappings of learning, such as degrees and grades, the speaker, who is now a professor of speech at Modesto Junior College, warned. Drawing from his own field of academic life for an example, Dr. Baird said the Associate of Arts degree may represent hard work or may represent "the physical presence of a potentially human vegetable" in a chair in the right series of classrooms on campus for a given length of time.

"Whatever education is, it's absolutely essential to our free and democratic society," Dr. Baird said. "We must maintain faith that the great bulk of citizens can be educated in the broad sense to make wise individual decisions based on accurate facts with clear reasoning."

In trying to picture an educated man, the convocation speaker defined four attributes.

First, the alumnus said, he must know something of the culture in which he lives and be able to fit it into the pattern of history.

Second, he should have a range of appreciations and not necessarily restrict himself only to those areas which he finds interesting. This does not mean he should be a jack-of-all trades, however, Dr. Baird cautioned. He should be acquainted with his spiritual heritage, too, he added.

This also involves looking in the library occasionally, the speaker said. The student would be silly to limit himself to "mind-to-mind" contact with his teachers when the minds of the great from throughout the ages can come alive through the process of reading, he explained.

Third, he should be a man of convictions. Because he has these, he will be able to get along with people and be sensitive to their convictions, he said. He will be open-minded and humble enough to be willing to examine without prejudice new ideas.

Fourth, he must have the ability to communicate with his fellow man.

"In reality, this is the center of education itself," Dr. Baird said. This is the inter-action, known as the communication process, between student and teacher, the circular process that involves both. He should also be able to communicate not what he knows, but what he is; not telling, but serving, he said.

The prayer of man can be the Old Testament supplication of Manoh, "O my Lord, let the man of God which thou didst send come again unto us, and teach us . . ." he concluded.

BUILDING THE RECORD

The transition from "college" to "university." The celebration of the 110th anniversary of the founding of the institution. The plans for Raymond College.

All these have fired the imagination of people throughout the nation; perhaps those who have most felt a part of the events have been Pacific alumni, however; and they have shown their keen interest and their desire to be a part of the forward-looking team through their gifts to the Pacific Alumni Annual Fund.

"Participation" is the magic word for the Fund this year, for participation not only gives each alumnus the feeling that he is doing his part to maintain the program of his alma mater, but also means that he is doing his share to meet the challenge which the alumni have set up for themselves.

In 1959-60, 24.5 per cent of all those alumni listed in the Association's office backed up their belief in their institution with contributions to the Alumni Fund. This year, a "Committee of 100"—100 alumni who have volunteered to challenge their fellow alumni—will contribute $20 for each every percentage point of increased participation over the 24.5 per cent mark, a total of $2,000 to reach point. This means that, with a minimum goal of a five per cent increase, an extra $10,000 will swell the formal contribution of the alumni body to Pacific.

At the moment, 81 people have joined the "Committee of 100," with the few remaining places going quickly. The committee members are "ready, willing, and waiting" to begin their $20 contributions and are hopeful that, at the end of the year, they each will have added $100 toward a record year.

Some may ask, "What about the size of the gift?" According to Clyde Jones, Alumni Fund chairman, gifts have ranged from $1 to $1,000.

"We hope each alumnus will give what he can. The most important thing is that he give," Jones has said.

Alumni soon will be receiving a progress letter giving numbers, percentages, and amounts, the third in a series of mailings designed to keep them informed about the progress of their project.

Listed on the honor roll below are the names of those who have contributed to the Fund as of May 6.

If you have not made your gift yet, there is a place left for you!

NSF HIGH SCHOOL INSTITUTE SET

Pacific received a $9,905 grant from the National Science Foundation for a summer institute in chemistry, biology, mathematics, and physics for 32 high school juniors and seniors.

The six-week institute, which begins June 12, will combine a lecture-demonstration program with directed study and individual research projects.

Students will select an interest field of biology-chemistry or physics-mathematics and will attend two 45-minute classes each morning in their chosen field. During the afternoons, the participants will do laboratory and library work in one of the areas of specialization, such as mathematics. In addition, each student will work on an individual project, with the four-man institute faculty available as consultants.

The purpose of the program is to acquaint promising high school students with qualified persons in the scientific fields, develop their interests in these fields, and allow them to gain some insight into the nature of research in one of them, according to Dr. Jesse S. Binford, institute director.

PACIFIC 1st: MENTAL HEALTH WORK-STUDY PROGRAM

Pacific will score another "first" this summer when it becomes the first California institution to participate in a mental health summer work-study program in co-operation with the California Department of Mental Hygiene.

Following the general framework developed by the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education (WICHE) for workshops held at the University of Colorado and University of Washington last year, the 10-week internship program, which will begin June 19, will introduce 40 qualified college students to mental health work.

Participants will spend one week in intensive academic orientation at Pacific before going to eight-week work assignment in state mental hospitals where they will be designated Student Professional Assistants, with the salary for the grade and California civil service status, and will be assigned as trainees to various professional services. They thus will get a well-rounded orientation, actual work experience, and an insight into the total operation of a mental hospital. They also will continue their academic work with general seminars. The students will spend the tenth week of the program back on the Stockton campus for additional academic work and evaluation.

Participating institutions for the program are Stockton State Hospital, Modesto State Hospital, Napa State Hospital, Sonoma State Hospital for the Mentally Retarded, Agnews State Hospital in San Jose, DeWitt State Hospital in Auburn, and Mendocino State Hospital in Ukiah.

Over 250 applications from throughout California and Hawaii had been received before the April 15 deadline for the Pacific program, which will be offered as part of a four-unit credit course in sociology at the institution.

Dr. Irving B. Tebor, assistant professor of sociology at San Diego State College, will serve as faculty coordinator-director for the work-study plan. Serving on the planning committee are representatives of the state department of Mental Hygiene and a Pacific inter-departmental committee consisting of Mrs. Irving Goleman and Drs. Jay W. Reeve, Harold S. Jacoby, J. Marc Jantzen, and W. Edgar Gregory.

DR. COBB ELECTED TO HONORARY

Dr. Emerson Cobb, head of the chemistry department, has been elected to membership in Sigma Xi, national scientific research honor society, at the University of North Carolina.

The society, founded at Cornell University in 1886, recognizes those who have shown noteworthy achievements as original investigators in branches of pure or applied science.

The faculty member, who did his doctoral work at North Carolina, has made studies of natural plant products, coloring matters, and polyhydroxy compounds and of the adaptation of these products for use in certain medical treatments. He also has authored numerous articles in national magazines and has patented a protective coating for airplane parts.

FOUR GRANTED SABBATICALS

Four faculty members have been granted sabbatical leaves during the 1961-62 academic year.

On leave for the entire year will be Arthur Corra, assistant professor of music, and Dr. Emerson Cobb, head of the chemistry department.

Corra will study for his doctorate in orchestral conducting at Indiana University. He also has been granted a professional leave of absence in 1962-63 to continue his advanced work.

Dr. Cobb will be a Fulbright lecturer at the University of Peshawar, Pakistan. He will conduct graduate courses in organic chemistry, direct research in the graduate school, and serve as an adviser in the development of laboratories and curriculum.

DeMarcus Brown, professor of drama and director of Pacific Theatre, will spend most of his fall semester sabbatical in London and New York seeing American and British theatre.

During his spring leave, Dr. Alonzo Baker plans to tour every country in Central and South America, visiting all state capitals and principal cities. The professor of history and political science will interview educators, industrialists, and government officials and also plans a 1,000-mile trip down the Amazon.

CHURCH-STATE SEMINAR PLANNED

A three-fold study of the relationship of church and state will be undertaken at Pacific next year in a special research seminar.

Offered for the first time, the project is under the direction of the Bible and religious education department in cooperation with the departments of history and political science, sociology, and the School of Education.

The seminar participants will study the literature pertaining to the relationship between church and state, will investigate the practices relative to the relationship in California, and will attempt to discover what politicians, statesmen, and religious and education leaders feel the church-state situation should be. At the completion of the project, the group will try to formulate a statement regarding the major questions or problems they discovered and their recommendations for further study and action.

ROSENBERG GIVES GRANT FOR PROJECT COMPLETION

The School of Education has been awarded a $16,200 grant by the Rosenberg Foundation for the coming academic year for the completion of a project dealing with the supervision of beginning teachers, President Robert E. Burns announced today.

Pacific has been working in cooperation with the University of California on the three-year research project, which has as its main purpose the development and implementation of an effective program of supervised internship for beginning teachers.

Results of a previous School of Education pilot project showed that many beginning teachers and their principals felt that the teachers were not receiving the kind and amount of supervisory assistance they needed or desired, Dean J. Marc Jantzen explained.

The cooperating institutions hope the present project will define the typical problems of the beginning teachers and the most effective ways of assisting the neophytes, will evaluate the usefulness of an on-the-job training program for principals to aid them in assisting new teachers, and will determine whether principals who have been trained in handling new teachers will assume the responsibility of supervising them as a primary function.

ALPHA KAPPA PHI GOES NATIONAL

Alpha Kappa Phi is now a colony of Phi Kappa Tau national fraternity and will receive its official charter in October.

The oldest fraternity west of the Mississippi, Archania will retain its local traditions as well as adopting those of the 55-year-old national, which has 75 chapters throughout the country.

DR. BLICK GETS SEQUOIA CONTRACT

Dr. James Blick, assistant professor of geography and geology, has been awarded a $1,000 contract by the National Park Service for an ecological study of the giant sequoias.

He will attempt to find out why the sequoias are found only in the Sierra-Nevada area by analyzing soil conditions, climate, site factors such as elevation and exposure, and possible conditions of man such as fire and grazing. He also will make a survey of existing literature.

Very little work has been done previously on the general problem, Dr. Blick said, although there have been some specialized studies.

PACIFIC JUNIOR SPORTS PROGRAM No. 3

The physical education department will offer its third annual Pacific Junior Sports Program this summer as part of the answer to the nation's need for a high degree of fitness and physical ability.

Scheduled to run from June 19 to July 14 to correspond with the first summer session, the plan offers a balanced program of recreation for 9 to 13-year-old boys and girls in the Stockton area.

The participants will meet from 8 to 12 a.m. five days a week under the direction of Pacific professors.

The activities program will be the same as last year's, with track and field being substituted for baseball. In the 1961 curriculum, boys will participate in tennis, swimming, gymnastics, and track and field for an hour daily. Schedule for the girls includes an hour each day of tennis, swimming, tumbling and trampoline, and modern dance. All the university facilities will be made available for use by the pre-teens.

Every child will be tested for physical fitness before and after participation in the program and will receive a certificate of achievement after he completes the program, Arner Gustafson, director of the program, said.

Those boys and girls who are taking part in the program for the second or third year will receive instruction from their present level on, rather than having to repeat the fundamentals.

Alumni in the Stockton area who are interested in enrolling their children in the program may obtain further information by writing the physical education department or by calling HOWard 6-6400.

Silver Lake, Here We Come

Need a rest? Looking for a spot to enjoy a vacation away from city life? Feel as though you would like to visit with your college classmates over a bridge table or at a "bull session"—the way things "used to be"?

If "yes" is your answer to the questions above, then the Pacific Alumni Camp at Silver Lake is what you are looking for. Two one-week sessions will begin July 9 and July 16.

The camp, which is owned and operated by the City of Stockton, includes in its offerings fishing, swimming, campfires, craft programs for children and adults, folk and square dancing, games, and nature study. Horseback riding and boating facilities also are available.

Accommodations include floored tents, or, at a small extra cost, cabins. Weekly prices cover both lodging and three meals a day.

Greeting you at the camp will be Bruce and Nancy Deane, both Class of '53, who serve as manager and hostess. Alumni Association representatives also will be there as program coordinators.

Sound good? If so, all you need do is fill out the registration blank below and return it to the Department of Parks and Recreation, City Hall, Stockton. If you would like further information, write the above address or the Alumni Association Office on campus. They also will be glad to make arrangements if you wish to come a day or two early or stay several days after the Alumni Camps.

Keeping Up with the Alumni

Mrs. EDITH M. K. TIBBETTS was recently honored for her 40 years of public service in the field of international understanding at a tea given at the College Women's Club in Berkeley. The Berkeley AAUW chapter also recently donated money in her name to the organization's National Educational headquarters in Washington, D.C. and to the International Fellowship program, which provides fellowships permitting foreign women scholars to study in the United States. A world traveler since 1914, the alumna and her husband helped organize American hospitality for students of other countries who were attending the University of California beginning in the days of President Benjamin Ide Wheeler. She is an authority on ancient Incan civilization, Mexican music, Russian agriculture and Japanese culture.

1925

Mrs. JESS ABEL (DOROTHY WHALLEY) was recently chosen as "Schoolmarm-of-the-Week" by the Turlock Journal. New principal of Crowell and Cunningham elementary schools, the alumna was a music major in college and had no intention of becoming a teacher at that time, the feature story said. She began her teaching career at Modesto High School right after graduation, however; and, after taking time out to have two daughters, she has been teaching ever since.

1927

BYRON PROUTY was recently named vice-president of Bank of America. Manager of one of the bank's San Jose branches for the past seven years, he also has found time to be treasurer of San Jose Merchants Association, president of San Jose Lion's Club, chairman of the United Givers' allocations and admissions committee and chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Small Business Advisory Committee.

MAURICE R. WOOD, San Jose agent for Monarch Life Insurance Co., was recently awarded top honors by the San Francisco agency for all-around excellent performance as a field underwriter in 1960 and will have his name inscribed on a bronze tablet at the San Francisco office.

1929

RAY WILSON is the new administrative assistant to the manager of the Nevada Irrigation District. Former manager of the Paradise Water District, the alumnus will supervise engineering and head a study of the enlargement of the distribution system.

1932

L. EUGENE ROOT, corporate vice-president for missiles and electronics of the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation, has been awarded the Distinguished Public Service Award, the Navy's highest civilian award, for his key role in the development of the Polaris missile. The alumnus also holds the Exceptional Service Award presented by the U.S. Air Force.

1934
