Students were able to see all Pacific has to offer as far as clubs and organizations on Thursday, September 15th at the Student Activity Fair Club Rush. A good majority of Pacific’s clubs were present, and their fully decorated tables lined the walkway leading up to the DeRosa University Center. Students couldn’t help but see all the potential opportunities that await them here at Pacific, and it was a good place for them to start looking for ways to become involved on and off campus.

Most participants would agree that the Club Rush was a success, and it is no secret that this event is critical for most clubs and organizations. “This event really is the first opportunity for organizations, especially for organizations like ours, to become recognized by students who maybe don’t know about them and want to learn more,” said Trust Hilton at the Progressive Christian Faith Alliance table.

Not only was Club Rush significant for Pacific’s clubs and organizations, it was also beneficial for the attending students. “This is an important event for clubs, especially at the beginning of the year when students are looking for new things to get involved in,” said Candice Paik at the Students for Environmental Action (SEA) table. “But it is also a good thing for incoming freshmen since they are new to the college experience, and this event is convenient for them because it has everything in one place.”

Whether you were working a table for your club or casually meandering around the event, clubs and students alike were able to take advantage of this occasion. According to Jenn Mazzotta, the Student Activities Fair director, it is activities like this that really enrich the Pacific experience. “We always hope that this event helps connect students to other students through various involvement opportunities,” said Jenn. “We also know that it helps connect the new students with all the amazing groups we have on campus—from juggling to faith-based groups, and everything in between, the Student Activities Center prides itself on having something for everyone.”

If you were unable to attend this event, but still want to know how you can get involved, you can stop by the Student Activity Center office, and they can work with you to find involvement opportunities and help you connect to various groups around campus.

President Announces Fireside Chats

President Eibeck will be hosting a fireside chat on Tuesday, October 4th at 6pm inside the DeRosa University Center. All are welcome. More than this, President Eibeck will hold open office hours for students who may have questions, concerns, or simply want to stop by and say hi! She has set aside three times for this: September 6th, October 18th, and November 29th, all from 4pm to 6pm. What is a fireside chat? Resident chats were first used by President Roosevelt in 1933. They were a series of radio addresses sent out over the course of eleven years on matters concerning the nation.

Why should you care? Pacific prides itself on raising future leaders of tomorrow, and in that respect, we should take the time to be involved in our school and raise any questions or concerns, and simply be involved in the plan President Eibeck has for Pacific’s future.
Celebrating Latino Heritage Month:
Dr. Carlos Muñoz Jr. to Talk as the 2011 Keynote Speaker

Sara Menges
NEWS EDITOR

Pacific’s 2011 Latino Heritage Month Celebration will run from mid-September to mid-October and includes a variety of lectures, performances, and cultural events. The lecture “Towards a Multicultural Democracy,” will be presented this year by keynote speaker Dr. Carlos Muñoz Jr. The event will take place on on September 29th in the Raymond Great Hall at 7pm.

Founder of the National Association of Chicana and Chicano Studies (NCAAC) and the first Chicano Studies department in the nation in 1968, Dr. Muñoz is the pioneer in creating undergraduate and graduate curricula in the fields of Chicano/Latino and Ethnic Studies.

Dr. Muñoz is well known for his multiracial coalitions such as the Faculty for Human Rights in Central America, Faculty Against Apartheid in South Africa and The Rainbow Coalition.

His book “Youth, Identity, Power: The Chicano Movement” also won the Gustavus Myers Book Award and has been quoted as an "outstanding scholarship in the study of human rights in the United States."

On September 19th, Dr. Muñoz will talk about his experiences fighting for justice ever since his college years in the 1960's. He will also share with Pacific students his insight into multiculturalism, diversity and ethnic and racial politics. The event is free and open to the public and is encouraged for Pacific students to attend and learn more about a vision of Multicultural Democracy.

In addition to Dr. Muñoz’s lecture, the Latino Heritage Month Celebration will also be hosting other events into October. Today from 12 - 1pm in Raymond Great Hall, Mark Silverman, an attorney from the Immigrant Legal Resource Center will speak on the topic "Immigration and Arizona, What Now?"

A Ballet Folklórico Concert called "The Voices of Our Ancestors" will take place on September 24th in Faye Spanos Concert Hall at 7pm. This performance is supported by the Latino Outreach Office and Los Danzantes de Pacific in collaboration with the Ballet Folklórico de Frank Zapata.

Bachata Dance lessons will be hosted at Baum Fitness Center on October 4th from 7:30 - 8:30pm. The sessions are free for Pacific students and cost $5 for the community to attend. On October 20th there will also be a filming of the film "A Better Life" at the Janet Leigh Theatre which is free and open to the public.

For the duration of Latino Heritage Month from September 15th to October 15th, Bon Appetit will be featuring Latin-based cuisine every Thursday during lunch between 11am - 130pm.

September 27th through the 30th will mark Pi Kappa Alpha’s annual philanthropy event, Hit of Reality. Every year, the members live in cardboard boxes to bring awareness to the issue of homelessness in our country. In the past, the Pike men have gathered in the McCaffrey Center during the Second Harvest National Food Bank. There will also be live music over the course of the event, as one Pike put it, "Hit of Reality is a great way to raise awareness about homelessness, a good combination of serious and fun." With good information, good music, and good company, Pi Kappa Alpha’s Hit of Reality Philanthropy is expected to be quite the event.

Thinking About Grad School?

Kat McAllister
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

If you’re a junior or senior and want to start looking at graduate opportunities, or if you’re a freshman trying to figure out what you’re majoring in and the future it can hold, join the Career Resource Center and the Office of Research and Graduate Studies for a Grad School Prep Day on Tuesday September 27th.

The day will consist of three different workshops meant to prepare and enlighten you into graduate opportunities to further your education. From 11am -12pm is the “Financing Graduate School” workshop that will provide information on options to finance your education. Next is the “Getting into Law School” or an MBA Program workshop that will take place from 12pm –1pm.

Finally at 3pm there will be a workshop on “The Where, When and How of Graduate School” which allows students to decide between programs and what steps are necessary to take in order to apply and get accepted into graduate school. All workshops will take place in the President’s Room.

For questions or further information, please contact the Career Resource Center at (209) 946-2361. Registration through TigerJobs is encouraged but not required.
Taking an International Perspective

Kelly Asmus

It’s not every day that one gets that chance to experience other cultures; some never even see people different than themselves, but there are few that search it out. I find myself as one of those few.

Having the opportunity to go and learn while in another country is by far one of the most valuable experiences you can find in college. Upon arriving in Paris, right away I heard the language and saw the people and thought, “wow, I’m actually here; it’s finally happening.” It may be hard to picture yourself going off to a far land, on your own, not a soul there you know, but those who do accomplish it, Bravo!

More than just learning a language, more than learning a culture, more than learning in and of itself, this is the kind of experience that changes people; their views on food, on life, even on the way they spend their days can change dramatically. Now it is true that not every person can handle this type of relocation, many become rather homesick and cannot cope, but the people who can adapt to the new surroundings, experience something entirely new. I’ll admit, college is definitely a place where many cultures and peoples come together in a sort of melting pot if you will. But immersing yourself into an entirely new culture, and really becoming one of those who you sought after, has an entirely different effect on you as a person and what makes them the way they are. Adaptation and understanding are key in these times where the distances between people of different cultures and backgrounds is growing smaller and smaller, and more often we are having to deal with cultural blunders and misunderstandings that tend to confuse those involved when they are not sure in the first place what caused such problems. Being able to identify the ways we see others and the ways we see ourselves can help reduce these incidences and overall creates a more welcoming and accepting environment.

Every day the rest of the world gets closer to our island hoping that we don’t intrude, try bravely out and experience something new. The idea can be daunting at first, but once you receive in the end a much better understanding of the people you interact and a better understand of yourself. Whether it’s a new restaurant that’s a cuisine you have heard of, taking a language or anthropology course going into the Edu Abroad office and learning about an information session are many things you can do to broaden your perspective.

Dear Kat,

I have been in love with my best friend for the past two years. He just came out of the closet to me. Do I tell him how I feel or do I keep it to myself?

Sincerely,

Do NOT WANT TO BE ALONE

Dear Do Not Want To Be Alone,

I think the important thing to remember here is that he is your best friend. His sexual preference does not change that. He is the same person, through and through. Just think of it this way, now you have a friend you can trust and rely on, a friendship that will last because there is none of the “awkwardness.” The feeling of being in love with him is an amazing feeling, I am sure. However, just remember: if there is one amazing man out there, there is another one. Keep your best friend in your heart, but remember there is room for more than one person there. He may be amazing, but it does not mean there is not someone else out there.

Kat

Dear Facing the Future,

College is an interesting transitional phase. We are constantly testing the boundaries as we try to make our own experience and pave our own path. I would suggest you sit down and talk to your parents (especially if they happen to be paying for your college). Perhaps you can reach a compromise such as a double major. Regardless, as your parents, I am sure they would love and support you no matter which route you chose to pursue. One of the greatest bits of advice I was given, and am now passing on to you, is to do what you love and you will never work a day in your life. If your heart is not in pre-pharm now, that will not change in 10, 15, or 20 years. Do what makes you happy.

Signed,

FACING THE FUTURE

I am a pre-pharm major but have reconsidered. Instead of pre-pharm, I would really like to become a music major. I have been playing piano for a long time and have really enjoyed it, so much I hope to make a career out of it. However, my parents think otherwise. They say that I would have a better future with pre-pharm vs. a major in music. What side should I take? Do I go for my dream or my parents?

Invitation to the 2011 Journalism Conference

Allyson Seals
EDITOR IN CHIEF

We, The Pacifican staff, would like to invite all interested students, faculty, and staff to attend our 2011 Journalism Conference.

As the Editor-in-Chief of The Pacifican, I cannot stress enough how crucial writing skills and networking are for all college students. Whether you are interested in pursuing a career in journalism or not, the conference can come as great help to you!

We are lucky enough to announce that Dan Day, Editor of The Modesto Bee, will be conducting a special News Writing 101 Workshop as part of the conference. He will be discussing the particulars of news writing and will also be touching on the correct structure of basic writing!

If you happen to be one of the special ones of us, who wants to pursue journalism in the future, this conference is a must. Because Pacific does not currently have an official journalism program, getting involved with The Pacifican and what The Pacifican has to offer in terms of supplementary programs is crucial.

I would like to personally invite anyone whom has a creative or curious bone in their body to not only attend this conference, but to also get involved with the paper. The Pacifican writers are detectives, researchers, question askers, and truly enriched citizens. Writing for a paper is not only about yourself, but it is also about really experiencing what your school and your community has to offer.

If this sparked your interest at all, please attend one of our weekly meetings, held Thursdays at noon on the 2nd floor of Morris Chapel and/or attend the 2011 Journalism Conference on October 2nd. The schedule of events can be found at facebook.com/thepacifican.

Long Live the King

Kat McAllister
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

In the type of girl who hears "Disney" and immediately perks up - definitely one of the greatest ways to get my attention. However, I have to admit that when I heard The Lion King would be re-released in 3D this fall, I was not too-pleased. Previous films I had seen in 3D didn't exactly leave me with the awe factor, especially when it came to recent Disney films, but something about the draw of seeing a movie I grew up with on the big screen one last time made my decision for me.

Being an avid movie fan, I had seen Avatar, the film that single-handedly sparked a cinematic revolution. Now films are able to tack "3D" and an extra $5 on to your ticket for what amounts to a single scene in a two-hour film. This is something Disney used to their advantage. Remember the recent film about a famous TV-show dog, Bolt, who ran away to try to find his owner, only to realize he had been deceived the entire time? Or even Toy Story 3, Tangled and other countless films that never seemed to benefit from Disney 3D-magic?

But, Disney did something right this time. From the opening scene with the sun rising, Zazu flying in front of you, lifts off the screen in such a way that makes you want to reach out and touch him, to the pouring rain and roaring fire as Scar and Simba battle over Pride Rock. The 3D effect is used to only enhance the film. There was definitely not a dry eye in the house as Simba tried to wake a fallen Mufasa, nor a quiet audience as Timon and Pumbaa explained what Hakuna Matata meant. Disney kept the effects relatively simple this time around, opting for creating what seemed like two pages, lifting the characters off of their background, rather than attempting to have things fly towards you.

Disney did it right. But what about those other 3D films? Currently, according to Fandango.com, there are at least four other 3D-optioned films still circulating through theaters, one of which is Shark Night 3D. If you were to hypothesize, that makes it sound like a badly done Jaws with 3D effects. As if watching someone be devoured by a shark on the screen in front of you wasn't bad enough, now it's so real you can almost touch it! Some movies just shouldn't use the 3D technology.

Following the idea of badly done 3D horror films, Fandango slates Piranha 3D for release just before Thanksgiving, This wraps up the pre-Holiday season 3D releases, which includes A Harold and Kumar 3D Christmas (Nov. 4th) and Happy Feet Two 3D (Nov. 18th).

Yet, The Lion King broke the ice on what seems like a promising venture for many classics: update the technology, and people will pay to go see it. Not only will original fans want to see their favorite movies re-released in theaters, but younger generations will be introduced to movies they may not have otherwise watched, thinking them "outdated." Instead of revamping an entire film for this generation, such as Footloose, soon to be released, or Dirty Dancing, the company adds a few new effects and calls it good! There are at least four films that have the possibility of being re-released in 3D: Top Gun, Raiders of the Lost Ark, Star Wars, and Titanic. Though these are all wonderful movies in their own right, and using the technology created for Avatar to reboot the Star Wars series? Should all classics be left the way they are or would you pay for the option to see these films again?

Personally, I'd rather Hollywood leave the classics untouched. What can be gained by adding a few tricks and a higher price to these films are adored by people far and wide because of what they are. Sure, it be spectacular to see Star Wars in theaters again, but showing the films in their true form, without spicing this up for such a technology and special-effect crazed generation can draw just as many fans and open the door to an entirely new generation.

If the film companies are simply altering a film to gain more profit, then the effect will ruin what many hold as beloved classic. Why not let people view and experience these films without adding effects that may seem out of place?

With the popularity of the 3D trend, I will be spending the next few months crossing my fingers that, should the re-releases happen, I will not proven wrong.

Lambda Tau Reunion

Danielle Procope
STAFF WRITER

This past weekend, University of the Pacific's Lambda Tau chapter of Delta Sigma Theta, commemorated its chartering on this campus in 1974 with a three-day reunion from September 9th to the 11th. On Friday, there was a welcome for sorority members at the University Plaza Hotel. On Saturday, past and present members of Lambda Tau ate breakfast in the President's Room. This was followed by community service at St. Mary's dining hall where sorority members gave back to the Stockton area by serving food and cleaning up the dining hall. Later that evening, a formal banquet dinner at Dave Wong's was enjoyed by all.

On Sunday morning, sorority members attended Progressive Community Church. This was followed by a campus-wide barbecue on the UC Lawn in the afternoon. The three-day event left Delta Sigma Theta members feeling inspired and ready to take on the responsibility of uplifting the Stockton community by bridging the gap between the University and the surrounding areas. Members were able to revisit their roots as the first predominantly African American sorority founded on this campus by eleven active and ambitious students in December of 1974. Sharifa Kimble, the first President of Lambda Tau asserted soon after the chartering of the chapter, "We believe we are an asset to the university by providing involvement for potential minority students at UOP." Thirty-seven years later the goals of the sorority are still the same: to support students and the community through public service.

Lambda Tau's current president, Tara Ignont, a graduating senior and Sociology double-major says, "Our mission is to challenge the reputation of black Greeks. We do more than just step and throw parties. Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc. is dedicated to uplifting the community and ensuring the success of our youth. You will see us heavily involved in achieving this aim this year."

But Lambda Tau is also making a presence on campus. Boasting the highest GPA of all social sororities last spring and including members who have active leadership positions in numerous other clubs and organizations, Delta Sigma Theta is on its way to permeating Pacific's campus and making a name for itself. This year's chartering reunion was only the beginning.

It's hard to believe that September is halfway over and the school year is in full swing. By now you probably have a routine down, but is it a successful one?

Success at school begins in the morning with breakfast. Researchers at Harvard Medical School and Massachusetts General Hospital found that those who eat breakfast have improved academic performance and psychosocial behavior.

Time is probably the biggest obstacle in eating breakfast in the morning so finding something that is quick and easy is essential. My favorite breakfast is peanut butter toast, a great combination of whole grains and protein. Other great options are yogurt and fruit, cereal (try to choose one with at least 4g of fiber per serving to aid in fullness), or a morning smoothie. Smoothies are a great option if you don't feel very hungry in the morning, but are willing to drink something. They are also a great handleable option to drink in the car, ride to school or walking to class. NutriCat's favorite combination is: 1/4 cup plain yogurt, 1/2 cup frozen berries, 1 tbsp ground flax seed, and 1/4 cup 100% orange juice. Other great on-the-go options include string cheese, a piece of fruit, or a handful of trail mix.

Water, one of the most basic and readily available essentials of life, is often one of the most sought after, overlooked, and ignored aspects of health. Since 75% of your body is made up of water it is important to drink enough water throughout the day to keep yourself hydrated. Staying hydrated has a number of beneficial effects. Water helps to keep you alert and functional throughout the day, it helps to maintain concentration within your body and makes exercise more enjoyable.

As a general rule, you should drink eight 8-ounce glasses of water per day to keep hydrated, if not more when you exercise. If you feel thirsty you have already waited too long and should be drinking more water and doing it more frequently. Some tips on how to keep up with your hydration are: drink a glass right when you wake up in the morning, carry a refillable water bottle with you and drink from it throughout the day, when you pass a water fountain stop to take a drink, try to evenly distribute your water consumption. Water is the basis of life and available, so take advantage and stay hydrated!
Pacific Takes Sixth Place in NorCal Tournament

Tigers Fall to #4 Stanford in 2OT

Ruben Dominguez
SPORTS EDITOR

For the #5 Pacific Men's Water Polo Team, both days of the 2011 NorCal Tournament began with elation and ended with frustration. While USC defeated UCLA 10-8 to claim the championship, the Tigers could only look back at their missed opportunities.

The tournament began on Saturday, September 18. 16 nationally-ranked teams began their quest to rise in the rankings and become champion. After the first round of matches, the top eight seeds had won their matches, including Pacific.

In their opening match of the weekend, the #5 Tigers took out 12th-seed Santa Clara 16-9.

Pacific's offense was on fire in the first period, scoring seven goals, the most the Tigers have scored in a quarter the entire season. Senior Lance Morrison notched a hat trick in the period, while sophomore Alex Malkis limited Santa Clara to just two goals in both the first and second periods.

The offense would continue to flow throughout the game, as senior Tom Koning found the net four times, which tied Pacific's all-time record. Pacific's goalkeepers made eight saves on 17 shots.

In the first match of the season, which the Tigers won handily 11-2 on September 3. Pacific faced off against #4 Stanford in the quarterfinals to finish the first day of competition. In what would be the closest-contested match of the entire tournament, the Tigers fell to the Cardinal in a heartbreaking 9-8 final after double overtime.

After falling behind 2-0 in the first period, the Tigers tied the score with two goals from Koning in a span of 26 seconds. After trading goals in the second period, both the Pacific and Stanford offenses stepped up in the third period.

The Cardinal would take the lead three separate times in the period. Goals from Koning, sophomore Balazs Erdelyi, senior Daniel Lungu, and junior Goran Tomasevic would even the score at 7-7 after three periods.

After falling behind again, Pacific tied the score on a Morrison goal with 2:55 left in the fourth period to send the contest into overtime. In the first overtime period, Stanford took the lead to make the score 9-8. This time, the Tigers were unable to mount a comeback.

With the exception of overtime, the score was tied after every period of the match. This was the only match of the entire tournament that went into overtime.

In the first match of Day 2, Pacific would take its frustration out on #6 UC Irvine, defeating the Anteaters by a final count of 10-7. In this match, three Tigers tallied hat tricks: Erdelyi, Koning, and Tomasevic.

Pacific's offense found the back of the net six times in the first half. With a 6-2 lead going into the third period, the Tigers had a bit of a scare as Irvine cut the lead to 8-7. However, the Tigers maintained their hold on the contest, with goalkeeper Malkis making an incredible 16 saves on 23 shots for Pacific.

In the 5th-place match, Pacific took on #7 Pepperdine, falling 14-11 in a shootout. Both offenses were hot in this one, especially in the first period, which ended even at 5-5. The game would remain tied 10-10 after three periods and three game-tying goals from senior Joey Doyle. In the fourth period, the Tigers finally ran out of gas, losing to the Waves and finishing in sixth place overall.

Pacific will continue to play at home this weekend, hosting a trio of opponents. On Saturday, September 24, the Tigers will face off against #2 Cal, which finished third in the NorCal Tournament, at noon. On Sunday, September 25, Pacific will battle #13 Concordia at noon and Redlands at 3:00 PM.

WOMEN'S VOLLEYBALL: The Tigers responded from a 3-1 opening loss to San Jose State at the 2011 Hilton Stockton Invitational with back-to-back sweeps of Loyola Marymount and Cal State Bakersfield. Sophomore Jennifer Sanders had 16 kills with only one error in both victories. The team will host Pacific Faculty and Staff Appreciation Night against UC Irvine on Friday, September 23.

FIELD HOCKEY: Pacific's stout defense was not enough to stop #9 Stanford in a 4-0 loss on Saturday. The Tigers will next head to #11 Cal on Sunday, September 25 before returning home to face Robert Morris on October 2.

For the #5 Pacific Men's Water Polo Team, both days of the 2011 NorCal Tournament began with elation and ended with frustration. While USC defeated UCLA 10-8 to claim the championship, the Tigers could only look back at their missed opportunities.

The tournament began on Saturday, September 18. 16 nationally-ranked teams began their quest to rise in the rankings and become champion. After the first round of matches, the top eight seeds had won their matches, including Pacific.

In their opening match of the weekend, the #5 Tigers took out 12th-seed Santa Clara 16-9.

Pacific's offense was on fire in the first period, scoring seven goals, the most the Tigers have scored in a quarter of the entire season.

Senior Lance Morrison notched a hat trick in the period, while sophomore goalkeeper Malkis limited Santa Clara to just two goals in both the first and second periods.

The offense would continue to flow throughout the game, as senior Tom Koning found the net four times, which tied Morrison's game-high goal total. Pacific's goalkeepers made eight saves on 17 shots.

This was a rematch of the opening match of the season, which the Tigers won handily 11-2 on September 3.

Pacific faced off against #4 Stanford in the quarterfinals to finish the first day of competition. In what would be the closest-contested match of the entire tournament, the Tigers fell to the Cardinal in a heartbreaking 9-8 final after double overtime.

After falling behind 2-0 in the first period, the Tigers tied the score with two goals from Koning in a span of 26 seconds. After trading goals in the second period, both the Pacific and Stanford offenses stepped up in the third period.

The Cardinal would take the lead three separate times in the period. Goals from Koning, sophomore Balazs Erdelyi, senior Daniel Lungu, and junior Goran Tomasevic would even the score at 7-7 after three periods.

After falling behind again, Pacific tied the match on a Morrison goal with 2:55 left in the fourth period to send the contest into overtime. In the first overtime period, Stanford took the lead to finally run out of gas, losing to the Waves and finishing in sixth place overall.

In the 5th-place match, Pacific took on #7 Pepperdine, falling 14-11 in a shootout. Both offenses were hot in this one, especially in the first period, which ended even at 5-5. The game would remain tied 10-10 after three periods and three game-tying goals from senior Joey Doyle. In the fourth period, the Tigers finally ran out of gas, losing to the Waves and finishing in sixth place overall.

Pacific will continue playing at home this weekend, hosting a trio of opponents. On Saturday, September 24, the Tigers will face off against #2 Cal, which finished third in the Norcal Tournament, at noon. On Sunday, September 25, Pacific will battle #13 Concordia at noon and Redlands at 3:00 PM.
