COLLEGE of the PACIFIC

Announcements for 1943-1944

Stockton, California

December, 1943

Foreword

This bulletin supplements the annual catalogue published in 1942. The two editions will serve as the general catalogue of the College of the Pacific until a complete and revised bulletin is issued in 1944.

The 1942 catalogue is available on order from the office of the registrar, and reference copies are to be found in high schools, libraries, and other educational institutions throughout the state.

Description of the College, its general character, purposes, and accreditation; the trustees and faculty of the College, a general exhibit of the history, campus facilities, organization and activities of the institution; gifts, memorials, scholarships, and fellowships; admission and departmental curricula are all contained in the general catalogue.

This publication contains the revised academic calendar, new schedule of costs and accommodations, addenda to the faculty, and other general information relative to the College program in wartime and the Navy V-12 program now in operation.

A complete time schedule of all courses offerings will be available at the time of registration.

ISSUED MARCH, JUNE, SEPTEMBER, and DECEMBER Entered as second class matter at the Post Office at Stockton California. "Accepted for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized April 5, 1924."

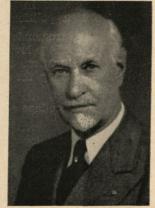

Greetings from the President

Academic conditions are changing so rapidly that it is difficult to produce and distribute a regular college catalogue along traditional lines. This bulletin is to explain necessary changes and course offerings made possible by the establishment of a Naval Training Unit on the campus of the College of the Pacific. In the following pages you will find the outline of course offerings and opportunities.

Of all times in the history of the world this is the time when every student who possibly can should have academic training such as is offered by a modern college of liberal arts of the type of Pacific.

Shall I Go To College Now?

For a limited number of young men, and for thousands of young women, the title question is answerable—and critical. It is a pertinent question, too, for student counselors.

America's college qualified students are at once "essential" and "expendable." We desperately need college trained personnel and leadership in every area of productive activity today, but we have had to call to military service hundreds of thousands of college men. Except for the Navy V-12 training program, and the parallel army procedure, designed to provide the advanced academic background for officer training, America's colleges today would be virtually without male students.

What is the right answer to this question for young people who are still free to choose—college qualified men and women who are not eligible for military service, or who have not yet been drafted and face an indeterminate period until they will be?

Today we are suffering from a shortage of college graduates just as factually as we have suffered from shortages of rubber and other commodities. Every type of liberal arts graduate is desperately sought after in almost innumerable fields throughout our whole economic, political, and social structure.

Actually, a tremendous responsibility rests upon young people, qualified for college level study, who are still free to choose their immediate occupation. Every one of them should determine now to do the best thing, the most advanced service he or she is capable of rendering.

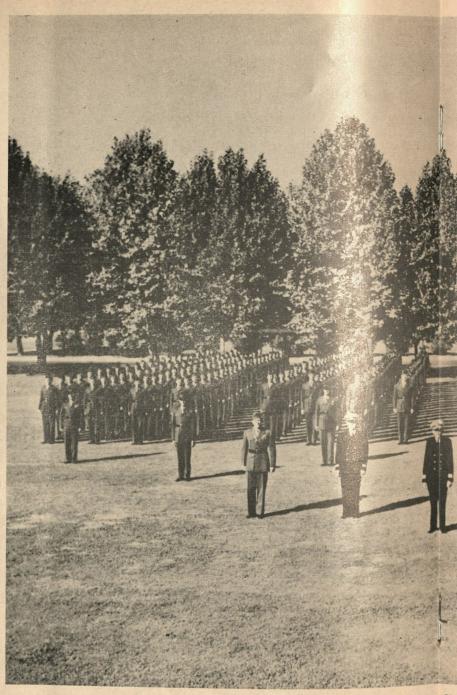

This means college education!

America still needs thousands of workers in unskilled fields, or in skilled activities which can be very quickly taught. But the ability to pursue college and university study is not prerequisite to these jobs.

For the present and future needs of our society, America's college qualified young people should be in college—preparing for the leadership so vitally needed.

General Statement

The College of the Pacific is a college of liberal arts—privatelyendowed, coeducational, church-related. Through twenty major departments of study, it offers a wide curriculum in the upper division and graduate levels only, leading to the bachelor's and master's degrees in arts.

Lower division instruction is available for properly qualified students, in the Stockton Junior College classes, held on the College of the Pacific campus.

The V-12 Program

Contingents of apprentice seamen in the United States Naval Reserve and privates in the Marine Corps Reserve, totaling about 387 men, uniformed and on active duty, are stationed on the College of the Pacific campus. Their duty is to pursue selected courses of college study before being assigned to various officer training schools.

These men are College of the Pacific students, taught by the faculty of the college, and eligible for full membership in the Pacific Student Association.

Civilian Program

Civilian students, both men and women, may still attend the College of the Pacific. Articulation with the time schedule required by the V-12 program has caused the abandonment, for the present, of our regular two-semester calendar year. Three sixteen week terms are conducted in each year, each equivalnt in acadmic credit value to the eighteen-week semester.

The terms begin on July first, November first, and March first, a schedule which offers acceleration opportunities of direct value to many students.

Civilian and military students may enroll in the same classes, are subject to similar academic requirements, and together comprise the membership of the Pacific Student Association.

School of Education

The School of Education announces that there have been some changes in the requirements for teaching majors and minors, since the publication of the last general catalogue. The changes are usually by way of greater flexibility, some reduction and the offering of a choice of purely departmental majors and minors to take the place of group major and minors or adequate and minimum preparation. Credential candidates should consult the chairmen of the departments and the School of Education. Detailed information will be mailed on request either to the registrar or the dean of the school of education.

Costs

Tuition rates extend from $8 to $10.50 per unit of study, depending on course election. Rooms on the campus for women are $66.75 for the term. Manor Hall apartments, providing the opportunity for cooking and light housekeeping, are $71.25 for the term. Reservations and deposits must be made in advance.

Complete board in the college dining hall is $120 for the term. Rooms for civilian men are not available on the campus at the present time. Lists of approved rooms in private homes, for both men and women students, are being developed as rapidly as possible.

For complete information, address the office of the registrar.
