SB 344 (Committee on Judiciary); 1987 STAT. Ch 212

Existing law provides that a defendant who has been adjudged insane, or acquitted by reason of insanity by a jury, must be committed to the Department of Human Resources.¹ Chapter 212 requires that the defendant be placed in protective custody, and transported to a mental health facility by a peace officer.² Under Chapter 212, the judge must appoint two examining physicians whose reports must be introduced at a subsequent hearing to determine the defendant's mental health.³ Chapter 212 provides that after the hearing, the court must make a final determination on whether the defendant is mentally ill.⁴ If the judge does not find clear and convincing evidence of the defendant's mental illness, the court must discharge the defendant.⁵ If the defendant is found mentally ill by clear and convincing evidence, the court must commit the defendant to the Department of Human Resources.⁶
