AB 874 (Committee on Judiciary); 1987 STAT. CH 601

Existing law provides that upon dissolution of marriage or at any time during minority,¹ the court must award custody of a minor child based solely on the best interest of the child.² Chapter 601 requires a parent with individual or joint custody of a child to secure the permission of the other parent or of the court prior to moving the child out of the state.³ According to Chapter 601, the moving parent must first attempt to obtain the written consent of the other parent.⁴ The moving parent may petition the court for permission to move the child if the other parent refuses to give consent.⁵ When the noncustodial parent or other parent having joint custody requests a change of custody, the court may consider one parent's failure to comply with the provisions of Chapter 601 when determining the best interest of the child.⁶
