TONIGHT'S GAME

by Dick Kranz
Assistant Sports Editor
The Stockton Record

Pacific faces an almost insurmountable task tonight as underdogs to the West Texas State Buffaloes.

First of all, the Tigers lack colorful nicknames in comparison to the Thundering Herd from Canyon, Texas. And most startling, the Buffs have Washington on their side.

Even more frightful is the feeling of optimism in the Texas Panhandle that West Texas State, under hard-working Joe Kerbel, has its best team since 1962 when the Buffs capped a fine year with a victory in the Sun Bowl over Ohio University.

The handicap of catchy monikers can be solved, but even politicians favoring the Pacific Tigers can't appeal to Washington in this case because it would be futile.

Washington, unfortunately, isn't the nation's capital. He is Spencer (Hank) Washington, 6-3, senior West Texas quarterback who was the nation's 12th top passer last season with 119 completions in 243 tries for 1403 yards and nine touchdowns.

The tall Buff quarterback, who comes from Los Angeles, started out well in West Texas State's 1966 opener which was a 38-6 win over Arlington State. He also is an excellent runner.

Against Arlington State Washington hit 10 of 19 passes for 221 yards and two touchdowns. All figure Washington and UOP's quarterback John Quaccia will stage a fine show tonight.

Now for the nickname business. The Herd's two cowpunchers from Pennsylvania, sophomores Albie Owens and Eugene Morris, are known affectionately as "Double O" Owens and "Mercury" Morris.

Both are quicker than a wink and each scored two touchdowns last Saturday in Canyon. Halfback Morris went over on a six-yard run and with a 22-yard pass from Washington. Fullback Owens, strong, short, and swift, went on 20 and 45-yard TD capers.

Curley Watters is the Buffs' reserve halfback and split end Dave Szymakowski is called "Mr. Alphabet."

West Texas State's four men up front are called "The Unfriendly Society." That foursome consists of Jesse Powell, 195; Dave Whitmore, 220; Jimmy Campbell, 220; and Mark Allen 240.

Two players are having a homecoming, almost. Two Buffs, guard Percy Green and tackle Charles Dentley, come from Sacramento and, incidentally, Whitmore is from Davis, Calif. In fact, 23 Buffs are newcomers to Texas.

Coach Kerbel, who enjoys a wide-open offense, had a great record as a High School coach, compiling a 76-15-2 (.828) record and winning two Texas state championships.

After serving as assistant coach at Texas Tech, Kerbel assumed leadership at West Texas State in 1960 and has a 33-27-1 record, including Saturday's win.

West Texas gained over 550 yards total offense last Saturday and Pacific had 374 total yards in upsetting Los Angeles State, 30-7. The young Tigers are facing an experienced, fast, tough eleven tonight.

But to even up one score, a few nicknames can be given the Bengals. Raydell Barkley already is called "Catfish" by his pals and during the pre-season drills halfback Tom Kilmer picked up the name of "Touchdown Tommy."

Let's see. How about Quickie Quaccia, Jaguar Jack Layland, Bashing Bob Heinz, Fresno Al Melikian, Rabbit Frank Seman. You could go on all night. And for the defensive unit, well, maybe, the "Clinging Vines."

West Texas and Pacific has met once in football history and the Buffs won, 32-8, in 1963 at Canyon.

THIS IS WEST TEXAS STATE

West Texas State is a friendly, fast-growing university in one of the most fertile areas in the United States. The state-supported, co-educational school is located in Canyon, a town of 7,000, just 18 miles south of Amarillo, a city of 165,000. The university is on an expressway that makes the driving time to Amarillo only 20 minutes.

Located in the heart of the Texas Panhandle, West Texas State is surrounded by a number of attractions that afford college students many hours of pleasure during their leisure time. The world-famous Palo Duro Canyon, called the most colorful canyon in the United States and one of Texas' top tourist attractions, is only 15 minutes from the heart of the campus. It is used extensively by students for outings, picnics, horseback riding and sight-seeing.

Buffalo Lake, the largest body of water in the Panhandle area, is situated just seven miles from the campus and gives students a retreat from classes. It is ideal for boating, fishing, and water skiing.

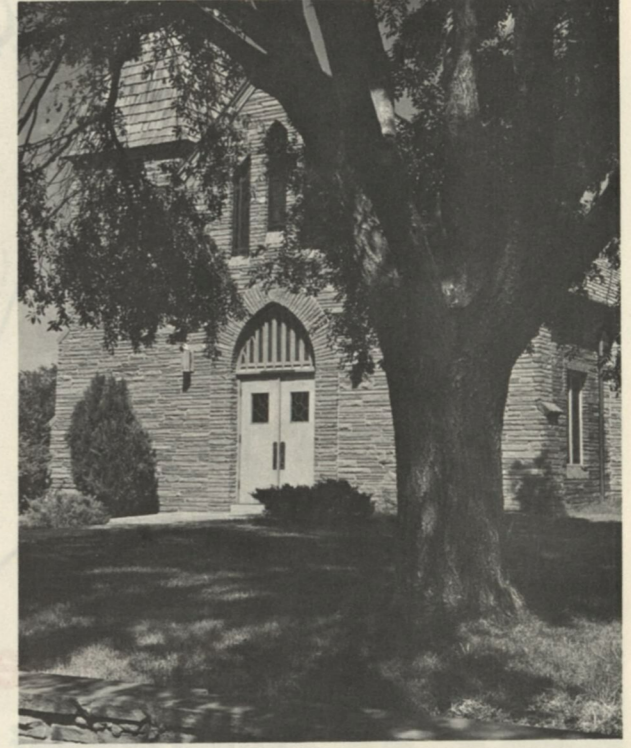

The Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum is located on the university campus and many thousands of people visit this storehouse of High Plains culture, flora and fauna.

The elevation of Canyon is 3,500 feet above sea level. This elevation coupled with the dryness of the climate makes for winters which are not severe and for cool, refreshing summers.

The school was founded in 1910 as West Texas Normal College and its first president was the Honorable R. B. Cousins. The first degrees were granted in 1919 and in 1923 the school was re-named West Texas State Teachers College.

Dr. J. A. Hill became president in 1918 and was named President Emeritus in 1948 when Dr. James P. Cornette became president.

The name was changed to West Texas State College in 1949 in recognition of the wider scope of curriculum and in 1963 became West Texas State University. At that time the institution was reorganized into a College of Arts and Sciences, School of Business, School of Teacher Education and Graduate School.

The ABC's of TV

by ROONE ARLEDGE
Vice President and Executive Producer of ABC Sports

WITH NCAA football being broadcast this fall by ABC-TV, college fans are seeing the sharpest techniques in sports telecasting.

Before 1960, the accepted method of televising football consisted of opening four cameras and simply documenting the game from the stadium roof. You sat at home and saw (and heard) nothing more, nothing less.

ABC changed all that six years ago. It was then we developed our concept of "bringing the fan to the game instead of the game to the fan."

We did it with small, hand-held cameras that roamed the sidelines, shooting game and spectator action alike, with telephoto lenses that provided a whole new viewer perspective with tight closeups of the players and officials, with long range microphones that isolated the exciting sounds of football above the roar of the crowd.

We added the isolated camera and instant replay, stop action and slow motion re-runs, end zone cameras and cameras high above the field on cranes and blimps, announcers interviewing players and coaches on the field and colorful shots of the surrounding campus.

At ABC-TV the world of sports is a 52-weeks-a-year activity. The culmination of this year-round activity is NCAA football, which we are extremely pleased to welcome back to the ABC Sports line-up after an absence of several seasons. Starting this September, our production and engineering teams will again pack up millions of dollars worth of electronic equipment and hit the college football trail to locations like Waco, South Bend, East Lansing and Palo Alto to bring viewers the biggest of all continuing sports attractions in America today.

The organization and execution of a football television series is an incredibly complex operation. By mid-week, prior to the first NCAA-ABC telecast, considerable advance work already has been completed. Broadcast plans and game schedules have been approved by the NCAA Television Committee and the network. Contracts have been signed with 49 teams and 13 sponsors; nationwide promotion and publicity efforts have been coordinated; complex systems totaling 17,000 miles per week of long distance television lines and program feeds around the nation have been arranged; well over 100 additional production and technical people have been hired; the logistics of facilities, personnel and tons of equipment have been worked out; basic production planning meetings held; and thousands of specialized man-hours consumed in working out dozens of other pre-season details. All that remains is the job of televising the events!

Let's take a typical situation where the game is being played in the Midwest.

On Wednesday evening five production people are rushing for a plane at Kennedy airport in New York City—a producer, an associate producer, an associate director and two production assistants. The camera director is already en route from Los Angeles.

Twenty-four hours ago the technical group, consisting of an engineering management supervisor from the network, a technical director, four videomen, two audiomen, seven cameramen, two driver/maintenance men for the mobile control unit, two video tape engineers, an engineer for the stop action device and three cable/utility men, arrived on location. The unit manager has been in town for two days checking production arrangements. Tomorrow three announcers will fly in, plus another producer and assistant who have the separate responsibility of handling the pre-game program.

The mobile unit, a $1,500,000 color TV station on wheels, was driven 700 miles from last week's game location and is now parked and hooked up to power at the stadium. Several members of the local telephone company are on hand to install special phone lines and broadcast audio and video circuits.

Before airtime on Saturday afternoon, the entire technical crew alone will have spent close to 1,000 man-hours in travel, hard labor and skilled workmanship in setting up and checking out color cameras, zoom lenses, microphones, headsets, tape machines, cables and monitors. In the meantime, the production staff will be holding continuous meetings, while the announcers do homework on statistics, biographies, players and team defense and offense.

To give you an idea of what goes on at airtime, let's take a quick look at just the internal communications system needed for a football telecast.

To begin with, there are interconnecting phone lines from the producer in the mobile unit to the announcers and production assistants, both in the press box and on the field, in addition to the area where the visual scoring and identification devices are located. The Associate Director who will handle the relaying of cues is connected to the Producer's circuit, and also to the coordinating studio in Chicago.

Another circuit connects the Director to each of the seven cameramen and the stop action engineer; another from the Technical Director to the videomen who control the quality of the individual camera pictures.

There's a private line from the engineering supervisor to network master control and another from the Producer to the Associate producer who is stationed at a pair of videotape recorders in a local TV station five miles away to coordinate slow motion and instant replay.

As you can imagine, it requires highly professional teamwork from all concerned to insure that this kind of set-up functions smoothly and correctly during the broadcast. I am happy to say that it usually does.

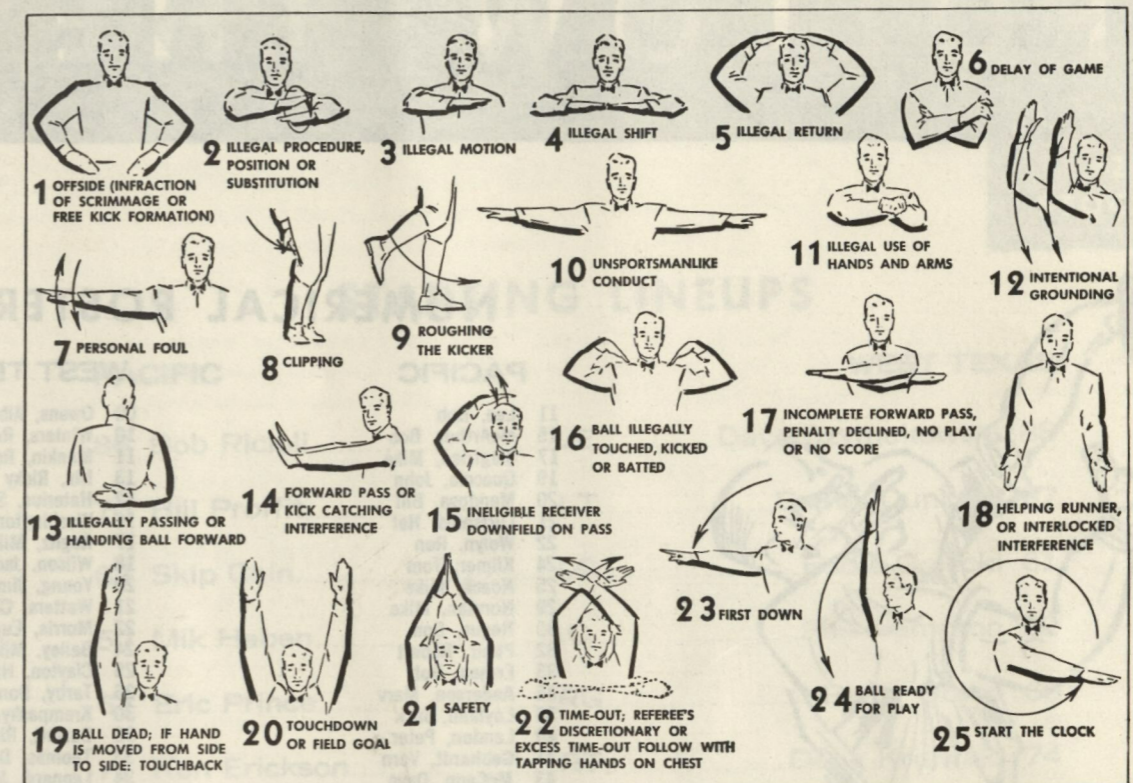

These and other innovations in production methods and techniques have revolutionized TV football coverage and certainly increased enjoyment of the game to the fans at home.

Actually, nothing can replace the thrill of being at the game itself. But football and television have always been ideal partners and it's a safe bet that you'll be watching many of the NCAA football contests this year (most of them in color) as guests of ABC's 215 affiliated stations.

We'll be expecting you.

JAMES DOUGLASS
DIRECTOR OF BANDS

James Douglass has been recently appointed Director of Bands and Director of Pacific Music Camp at the University of the Pacific. He has appeared as trumpet soloist and brass clinician in Canada and throughout the United States for the Selmer Band Instrument Company of Elkhart, Indiana. He was trumpet soloist with the United States Navy Band in Washington, D. C. from 1956 to 1960 and has since been solo chair cornet and soloist with the University of Michigan Bands. Mr. Douglass is presently working on a Doctor of Music Education at the University of Michigan and last year was graduate assistant to Dr. William D. Revelli, Director of the Michigan Bands. Mr. Douglass has taught band and orchestra for three years in public high schools in Chicago, Illinois, and Davenport, Iowa, has previously been assistant to the Director of Bands at the University of Denver and Ohio University.

Tonight the University of the Pacific Marching Band pays tribute to several great American composers. During the half-time show, the University Band will feature the music of Stephen Foster, Frederick Loewe, Richard Rogers, Irving Berlin, and John Philip Sousa. The University Band has had less than a week to prepare tonight's pre-game and half-time shows, since Wednesday was our first day of classes. However, we have expanded in size and are looking forward to a great year.

PACIFIC HAIL

From o'er the rugged mountains
standing high:

From out the broad low valleys,
'Neath the sky;

Our Alma Mater calls,
We cannot fail,

Our voices blend in praise
Pacific Hail! Pacific Hail!

Long may her flaming torch
Give out its light:

Long may her spirit guide us
In the right;

To her we pledge our hearts,
We dare not fail;

To her we raise our song
Pacific Hail! Pacific Hail!

University Report . . . CURRENT MAJOR EXPANSION PROJECTS

SAN FRANCISCO CAMPUS

"TOPPING OUT" CEREMONIES were held last July for the new $8.5 million School of Dentistry building at the corner of Sacramento and Webster Streets in San Francisco. The interior of the nine-story structure will be finished during the winter months and the first of the moving operation from the present site at 344 14th Street will begin early next year.

A freshman class of 70 students was admitted when classes opened Sept. 14, an increase from the previous 58 in anticipation of the expanded facilities. The total student body will increase from 225 to 416. Only one out of every ten applicants is currently accepted due to the high admission standards.

Noted as one of the nation's outstanding dental schools, it was founded in 1896 as the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and amalgamated with the University of the Pacific in 1962. Its 1,900 living alumni have pledged $1,000,000 to the new building project. More than 2,800 dental graduates have received degrees at the school since its founding in 1896.

Each day, approximately 286 people receive dental treatment in the School's clinic. Upperclass students, supervised by faculty members, treat these patients.

Faculty members engage in research projects on control and elimination of tooth decay, elimination and control of pain, detection and treatment of oral cancer and development of new equipment.

The curriculum for the Doctor of Dental Surgery requires four years, with a minimum of three years in pre-dental education.

FIVE PROFESSIONAL SCHOOLS—The University of the Pacific now operates a Conservatory of Music, School of Education, School of Pharmacy (new $3.5 million building to be built beginning next year), School of Engineering, School of Dentistry as well as Graduate School.
