STUDENT LIFE: Shaping the Whole Person

By Tim Turpin '88

UOP TODAY

UOP RANKED EIGHTH IN WEST BY NATIONAL MAGAZINE

UOP has been ranked eighth among 112 regional colleges and universities in the western United States by U.S. News & World Report in their annual guide to "America's Best Colleges" released on Oct. 8.

Last year, UOP ranked 10th in the western region, which includes California, Washington, Oregon, Alaska, Hawaii, Idaho, Montana, Utah, Nevada, Colorado, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas. Trinity University in Texas was ranked as the top western regional university for the second consecutive year.

Other California institutions included in the top 15 from the western region are Santa Clara University (2), University of San Diego (4), Loyola Marymount (5), California Polytechnic Institute (12), Humboldt State University (13), and California State University at Fresno (14).

The rankings are based upon academic reputation, student selectivity, retention patterns, faculty quality, and budgeted expenditures per student.

NEW VICE PRESIDENT OF FINANCE NAMED

Goins, 44, replaces Robert Winterberg, who retired last year after serving as vice president since 1963.

While at Whitworth, Goins managed 13 consecutive years of surplus operating budgets and retired $1.5 million of the accumulated current fund deficit. He directed a $7 million tax-exempt bond issue for facility improvements and generated a computer budget modeling system with three-year forecasting capability.

Goins also established a computerized student financial aid system at Whitworth that improved budget control by $300,000. He developed and implemented a computer payroll system that saved $6,000 per year, and a personnel system with employee performance evaluation, merit pay and a salary grid.

AREA FARMER NAMED TO BOARD OF REGENTS

Yoshio "Bob" Yamada, a San Joaquin Valley farmer for more than 40 years, has been elected to fill a vacancy on the Board of Regents, which currently consists of 30 members.

The eldest in a family with seven sons and one daughter, Yamada is president of Yamada Brothers Inc. He and five of his brothers are partners in the 2,100-acre farm, which produces asparagus, tomatoes and sugar beets and has been located on Union Island west of Stockton since 1946.

Yamada joined the Pacific Athletic Foundation in 1971, and has been the organization's top fund-raiser for the past 19 years. He was named to the Pacific Hall of Fame in 1986 and was presented a distinguished service award by the Emperor of Japan three years ago.

Yamada, 77, is involved with a number of additional organizations, including the Dameron Hospital Foundation, Community Blind Center, Stockton Japanese American Citizens League and the San Joaquin Nisei Farmers League.

STOCKTON RECORD OFFICIAL NAMED TO BUSINESS BOARD

Oarge Quarles, who was recently named publisher and president of The Stockton Record, has been appointed to the SBPA Business Advisory Board of Directors.

Prior to joining the Record, Quarles was president and publisher of The Coloradoan in Fort Collins, Colo.

DENTISTRY DEAN HOSTS NATIONWIDE CABLE PROGRAM

Dr. Arthur Dugoni, dean of the School of Dentistry, has been selected to moderate a weekly program on the dentistry profession. The program, "Dentistry Update," is broadcast one Sunday a month on the Lifetime Medical Television cable network.

According to Dugoni, the network, better known as Lifetime, is the nation's premiere television outlet for physicians and dentists. "The network is watched by more than 164,000 physicians and 2.7 million nurses, pharmacists, dentists and other health care professionals every month," notes Dugoni, the immediate past-president of the American Dental Association.

PACIFIC SINGERS Return From Europe

The musical experience of a lifetime has occurred early in the lives of the youthful Pacific Singers. As part of a three-week tour this past summer, the voices of the 32 UOP singers echoed through several of the hallowed music halls in Europe. Madrid, Barcelona, Avignon, Venice, Salzburg and Munich all played host to a wide-eyed Pacific contingent under the guidance of choral director Bill Dehning.

The trip marked the first excursion abroad for the UOP choir since the ensemble's inception in 1916. "The trip did wonders for their confidence and development—they're not the same for the experience," relates Dehning, who says he hopes to take another group abroad in the near future. "I would like to do it again because of the students—just to watch their excitement."

A highlight of the trip was the group's participation in the International Choral Competition in Spittal, Austria. Competing as the sole United States representative in the 11-chorus field, the Singers finished fourth in the compulsory category and fifth in the folk section. "We represented our country very well," notes choir member Betsy Fiske. "The average age of our members was 22, while our competitors were government-supported professional choirs with experienced older performers."

Fiske says that the group's fondest memories emanated from the impromtu concerts they gave on their city tours. "We visited cathedrals and churches in each city, and the tour guides would always ask us to sing," relates Fiske. "At places such as St. Marks Cathedral in Venice, with its sense of history, great stone wall acoustics, gorgeous floor-and-ceiling mosaics, our performances were akin to religious experiences."

The group developed everlasting memories, says Fiske. "We grew as a group together and established relationships which will last a lifetime."

UOP TO RECEIVE UPS FOUNDATION GRANT

UOP has been selected as one of seven independent colleges and universities in Northern California to benefit from a $17,200 grant by The UPS Foundation.

The University will receive about one-fourth of the gift, which results from a $22 million education fund initiated in 1974 by the Foundation, the main charitable arm of the United Parcel Service.

GRUPE CHALLENGE YIELDS $366,000 FOR SCHOLARSHIPS

A $100,000 challenge grant from Greenlaw "Fritz" Grupe has resulted in additional gifts totaling $266,848 from alumni and friends for scholarships that will benefit UOP students.

Grupe matched the gifts with a personal grant on the basis of $1 for every $2 raised from other sources of up to $100,000.

Curt Redden, vice president for institutional advancement, stated that the $366,243 has made a significant impact on the scholarship funding available to UOP students. "For every $5,400 in scholarships contributed to the University, nearly $15,000 is produced in additional tuition and fees," Redden said. "The bottom line is a one-year impact from Grupe's $100,000 challenge of over $1 million in revenue for the University."

FORMER UOP VP SELECTED AS ROTARY PRESIDENT

Cliff Dochterman, who recently retired as vice president-executive assistant at UOP, has been nominated as world president of Rotary International for 1992-93.

During a recent retirement dinner in his honor, Dochterman was designated vice president emeritus in recognition of his 18 years of service to the University. He was also presented the Order of the Pacific, the highest award the University can present an employee completing formal employment.

As top assistant to Stan McCaffrey from 1972-86, Dochterman was at the center of the University's first major fundraising campaign, For a Greater Pacific, that raised more than $32 million toward major expansion of the campus in the 1970s and early 1980s. Dochterman continued to play a major role during the administration of current President Bill Atchley.

BANKAMERICA FOUNDATION FUNDS SCIENCE CENTER

UOP has received a grant of $25,000 from the BankAmerica Foundation for renovation of the Science Center Classroom building, moving the campaign for that facility to within $615,000 of its $2.1 million goal.

Paul Perkins, vice president and manager of Bank of America in Stockton, presented the first installment of the gift to Curt Redden, vice president for institutional advancement. "The Bank's support of the University has continued for more than 25 years due to our confidence in this great school," said Perkins. "We believe that if America is to continue to be a world leader in business and industry, higher education must be strongly supported by corporations like ours."

BUSINESSMAN NAMED CHAIR OF CORPORATE PATRONS

Lodi resident and Regent Weldon Moss, partner of Moss and Craig Inc., has been named chairman of UOP's 1990-91 Corporate Patrons by President Bill Atchley.

The Corporate Patrons raise funds each year from the Stockton-area business community to provide scholarship support to academically qualified UOP students. Since its founding in 1985, the organization has raised more than $150,000 in scholarship funds.

"The Corporate Patrons provide a significant source of annual scholarship support for UOP students," says Atchley. "During the program's first five years, a total of 47 companies have made generous gifts to underwrite the Corporate Patrons."

COMPUTER SCIENCE RECEIVES ACCREDITATION

UOP's Department of Computer Science recently became one of only 95 schools in the United States to receive accreditation by the Computer Science Accreditation Board. The Board, a specialized accrediting body recognized by the Council on Postsecondary Accreditation and the U.S. Department of Education, accredits undergraduate programs in computer science in colleges and universities throughout the United States.

RETIREES CONTINUE SUPPORT THROUGH EMERITI SOCIETY

Retired faculty and academic administrators who, upon retirement, were honored by the distinction Emerita or Emeritus, are still serving the University through their membership in the UOP Emeriti Society.

The purposes of the Society, which was organized in 1988, is to allow its members to maintain an enduring relationship with the University, continue to provide service to the University, remain in a collegial relationship with one another, and continue scholarly activity. The Society has 84 members, including 64 who live in the Stockton area. Its current officers are Professor of Education Emeritus Heath W. Lowry, president; Professor of Pharmacy Emirata Cisco N. Kihara, vice president and program chair; College of the Pacific Dean Emeritus Roy A. Whiteker, secretary; and Admissions Dean Emeritus E. Leslie Medford, Jr., immediate past president.

The most recent meeting of the Emeriti Society was held in October. The program included a presentation by Professor Arthur Grigg, a lecturer on history and geography from Plymouth, England. Academic Vice President Joe Subbiondo discussed the forthcoming accreditation visit by WASC and solicited comments and recommendations from Emeriti Society members.

Accomplishments of Emeriti Society members will be chronicled in future issues of the Pacific Review.

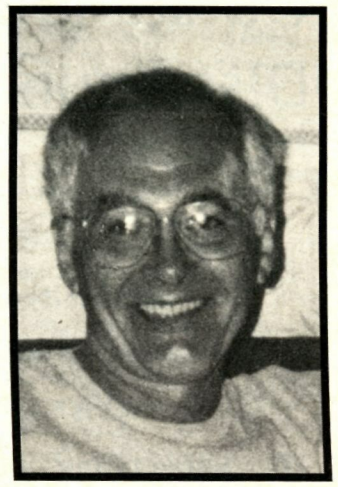
CHINA: FOOD AND FRIENDSHIP

By Maurie McCullen



Maurie McCullen has been a professor of English at UOP since 1970. After being encouraged by several Chinese students at UOP, McCullen applied last year to teach at Hangzhou University, located in Southeastern China about 100 miles from Shanghai. During his stay in Hangzhou from February through the middle of July, he taught four courses in American Literature. He also sampled many courses of Chinese cuisine and found that food is an integral part of China's culture. The following are his impressions of China from a culinary viewpoint.

Just before leaving UOP to teach at Hangzhou University in China, I asked a Chinese student, "What's your final advice?" she responded laughingly, "Eat a lot."

"What an odd remark!" I thought. But how was I to know how inextricably intertwined food and friendship are in The People's Republic.

With just a few words of Chinese and only a shaky familiarity with the culture, I was a wary foreign devil (Yang qui zi), expecting to spend much of my time in lonely isolation. I left China six months later feeling great respect and affection for the warm-hearted Chinese people.

Within hours of my arrival, I received delegations of welcoming visitors at my apartment, along with dinner invitations to get me through the settling-in period. My friend, Yin Qiping (Chris when he studied at UOP), was first. In Hangzhou, the wife naturally enough cooks for her husband's friends. But if a woman invites a male friend to dinner, the husband cooks—allowing the friends to enjoy each other's company. Chris's wife, Sun Yi Fang, is one of many gourmet-class cooks I was fortunate to dine with. What dinners!

Shrimp, yellow vegetables, cucumber salad, tasty fried sprats, cashews and bamboo shoots, dim sum. The Chinese have several very good beers, and Tsing Tao Reisling will satisfy any California palate. The Chinese dine leisurely, toasting the guests and each other. Conversation flows easily.

But all this food, I was surprised to find at my first dinner, was just the hors d'oeuvres! "Where's Yi Fang?" I asked. "In the kitchen," Chris said. Dinner began to arrive. Dried vegetables with pork, steamed; cold duck; roast chicken; eggplant; fried egg; grass carp in broth—which always becomes a soup; pork and onion, and jellyfish or eel. "What next, Dad?" my daughter wrote back as I catalogued new dishes, weird to the westerner. "Iguana? Coelacanth? Pterodactyl?" (I wouldn't have been surprised. Sparrow, snake, turtle and dog were some other likely possibilities.) And, yes, of course, rice, always rice.

At these dinners, the guest is urged to try the inevitable unidentifiable dish. If he hangs back, or can't handle whatever it is with his chopsticks, the hostess feeds him some of it with her own chopsticks. (A noteworthy point, considering the extreme anxiety in China about AIDS, "a curse from the West.")

These kinds of menus were typical—whether at a banquet or in a very modest peasant's dwelling. And the hosts always took on a role similar to Jewish or Italian parents, ladling or chopsticking food onto your plate, urging yet another portion at you.

The photo on the right shows a party after dinner, cooked by the Chinese students. The whole process is a rare treat: haggling at an exotic little alley market, group preparation and raucous consumption—the Chinese talking animatedly and spitting out bones, shrimp skins, whatever, into a pile beside their plates.

These and other students cooked a group dinner in my apartment nearly every week the last two months I was in Hangzhou, and the scene never varied: absolute pandemonium in the kitchen, resulting in very good eats.

Fish is a dietary staple and the Chinese farm fish with all the dedication of an Iowa corn farmer. Every patch of water has its enclosure of bamboo stakes and bamboo netting. Grass carp (fed only grass) are mass produced there as easily as catfish here. Fish led to my undoing in a visit to Houzhou.

A guest in a peasant's home, I was asked what kind of fish I liked. Without thinking, I replied "blackfish." Now this is an expensive, hard-to-get fish, and my preference was received with strained silence. I tried backpeddling out of the situation by adding that actually I liked carp better, but the damage was done. In a matter of minutes, a roomful of people had thinned to my hosts and me. Everyone else was out hunting the elusive blackfish.

These hosts were retired barge workers. They had worked all their adult lives on the Grand Canal, loading, transporting, and unloading bulk cargo like coal, rocks and grain. They had no running water, no stove (the wife cooked with charcoal) and no indoor plumbing (chamber pot).

With the one English speaker out on the blackfish hunt, my hosts and I looked at each other in mute appeal. Then, as in other Chinese homes, the most incredible communication—mostly without language—began. I would point to something "Zhe shi she mo?" (What's this?), and the husband would demonstrate its use, grabbing ingredients and showing how it was made, if possible. The old wife pointed to a photo of a grandchild, then at me: what about my children? And I began in pantomime to describe them. All of those charade games I played before the advent of television proved invaluable. We would laugh when we made a communication breakthrough, roll our eyes and laugh when communication broke down. This and similar experiences were toasty warm.

The tiny kitchen filled again. There was the blackfish, swimming in a pan of water. Everyone admired the fish. I was urged to pick it up and feel for myself its superior qualities. The strain was gone. Everyone was happy. Note: in China, if it's not swimming, it's not fresh. Even in restaurants, your fish may be brought in a pan of water for your inspection. I would say, "But how do I know this is the fish I will eat?" No one was amused.

The friendship shown to me by the Chinese was continuous, daily. Charles Chen and his staff at the Foreign Affairs Department, my work unit, were marvelous. So were most strangers. When I couldn't make myself understood while shopping, a crowd gathered immediately to sort it out. If I purchased a big item (and everything had to be transported by bicycle), a crowd gathered again to package it up and secure it to my bike or my back.

But the young man who is a symbol for it all—and who has been pushing to get into this article since the beginning—I only knew as "my bike guy." He and his father ran a little sidewalk bicycle repair close to the University. I first saw him on a particularly raw February day and was struck by his lack of warm clothing. Shirt, old sports coat, thin socks, broken shoes, no gloves. He was out there every day, whatever the weather, dawn to dark, and whatever broke down on a bike, he could fix. I needed his service at least weekly and always he set about his repair with great cheerfulness and dispatch. The cost of an average repair was about a quarter and he would not accept tips, cokes or candy from me.

He spoke the Hangzhou dialect, so that Chinese-speaking westerners, and many Mandarin-speaking Chinese, couldn't understand him. Although he patiently repeated his name to me, and I mine to him, we never got it right. But if I ever needed a loaner for a friend I'd point to my bike, then to the friend, and a bike would immediately appear, no charge.

When I was leaving, I took over my last UOP t-shirt, a very welcomed gift, and pushed it into his hand. He pushed it back. Somehow, I made him understand that I was leaving, and asked for his father. "Baba zai nali?" He took my arm and directed me a few steps to a grubby little restaurant I had never looked into, and there was Baba stir-frying a batch of noodles. I hadn't realized they ran this place. He told his father I was leaving. They looked sad, and I thought I would cry. Then Baba smiled, dished up three plates of noodles, and we sat down to eat. My bike guy took the shirt from me and put it on his lap. I wish I had a picture of that.

Outstanding Alumni Receive Distinguished Service Awards

By Kristin Wash '92

Outstanding University graduates in the areas of public service, professional service, university service, young alumnus service and family service were recently honored with the Pacific Alumni Association's 1990 Distinguished Alumni Service Awards. The winners and their families were feted at the Association's homecoming luncheon in Raymond Great Hall on Nov. 3.

IRVINE SPRAGUE '49

OUTSTANDING PUBLIC SERVICE

As a senior in high school, Irvine Sprague was working at a local grocery store when he answered an ad in The Stockton Record for a copy boy. When he learned he didn't get the job, he asked some customers at the grocery store to call the editor and tell him he should have hired Sprague. His enterprising ploy worked. He received a call from the editor saying the copy boy position was filled, so he would have to hire him as a reporter.

That was the only job Sprague ever applied for. It was also probably the last time Sprague did something soley for himself—his careers since have been dedicated to various forms of public service.

He worked several years with the Record, eventually becoming its main reporter. He was active in various labor organizations, and while a member of the San Joaquin County Democratic Central Committee, he met John McFall. When McFall was elected to Congress in 1956, he asked Sprague to be his administrative assistant.

McFall's appointment began Sprague's illustrious national government career, which included 29 years of service under six administrations.

The apex of Sprague's career came in 1966. He was the California Deputy Director of Finance for Governor Pat Brown when he was asked to set up the Department of Transportation. But before his first day on the job, Sprague received a call from President Lyndon Johnson's top assistant. The President wanted Sprague to be his special assistant in the White House. Although Sprague had never met President Johnson, he gladly accepted the offer.

Sprague has fond memories of his whirlwind days in the top office. "You're on a perpetual high when you're in the White House...it's exhilarating and exhausting," he says.

Sprague remembered seeing Johnson many years after his White House stint. "I was making a speech in Texas when the President's secretary called me to see if I could meet him for lunch. I met with him and he told me, 'You're the only one who ever told it to me straight.' I gave him lots of bad news, but we were good friends."

In 1972 Sprague was reunited with McFall, who had been elected House of Representatives "whip." McFall appointed Sprague as director of the House Whip Office, where his main responsibility was providing the "counts" for House votes.

When Thomas "Tip" O'Neill was elected Speaker of the House in 1975, Sprague was selected to be the Speaker's executive director of the house policy committee. In this position, he spent much time on Capitol Hill with congressional leaders helping to schedule bills for review.

President Jimmy Carter appointed Sprague as chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation in 1979. When Ronald Reagan came into office in 1981, Sprague was appointed director, making him the only person to be appointed to the FDIC by two presidents.

In his 11-plus years with the FDIC, he handled 374 bank failures. He is credited with implementing a unique plan to bail out ailing banks through a cooperative effort between the FDIC and the nation's largest financial institutions. This plan saved Unity, Commonwealth, First Pennsylvania and Continental banks, which were among the largest in the country.

Irvine Sprague's successful career in national government spanned 29 years and six administrations

As a result of his extensive involvement with the FDIC, Sprague wrote a book, Bailout: An Insider's Account of Bank Failures and Rescues.

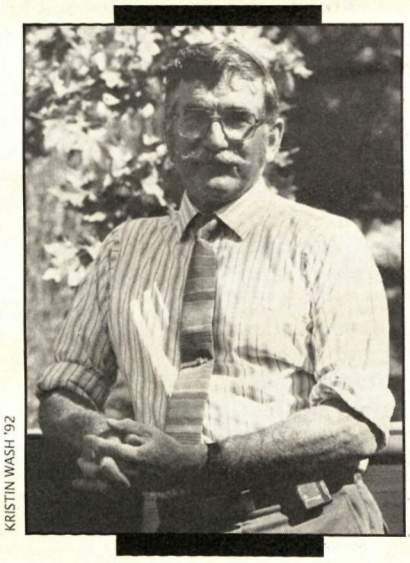
Sprague was in his seventh year of a six-year term as director when he retired in 1986. He stayed on the extra year until a replacement could be found. His publisher wanted to advertise the book, but couldn't while Sprague was still in government. He held out for a few months, but eventually retired so he could promote his book, which went into two hardcover printings, was issued in paperback, and even has a Japanese language edition for Japanese bankers and loan officers.

Sprague credits UOP for part of his success. He developed concentrated study habits because he was forced to work full time while at Pacific. He also learned lifelong values from his instructors. "That's where I met my wife—one of greatest values of Pacific," adds Sprague. In fact, the two celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in September.

BRUCE SHORE '56

OUTSTANDING PROFESSIONAL SERVICE

Modest is certainly an appropriate word to describe Bruce Shore. When notified he would be the recipient of the Alumni Association's award for professional service, he wrote a letter to the director of alumni and parent programs claiming that three members of his family were much more deserving of the award than he. Shore made this self-effacing gesture despite the fact that he is a molecular physicist at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory (LLNL), the author of two books, a seasoned professor, and a fellow of the American Physical Society.



KRISTIN WASH '92

Bruce Shore's 1,700-page book on atomic excitation, one of the largest scientific textbooks written by one author, represents 20 years of his research

"I'm not the sort of person who goes around collecting honors," Shore explains. "I never keep track of those things."

Shore feels that his mother, father and brother—all UOP graduates—deserve the limelight for their accomplishments. His mother, Madeline T. Shore, '31, has been an elementary school teacher, a Sunday School teacher and administrator, and the moving force behind innumerable church and community programs. His father, Walter Shore, was a high school teacher, and author of a high school textbook on agriculture. After retirement, he went to Japan to help develop the Asian Rural Institute, which assists underdeveloped countries in Southeast Asia. Finally, Shore's younger brother, Richard, is a process engineer who has worked ardently for environmental causes.

While Shore is quick to give credit to his family, his own accomplishments are highly meritorious as well. Shore acknowledges his pride in the science textbook he recently authored, The Theory of Coherent Atomic Excitation. It is one of the largest scientific textbooks written by a single author—two volumes totaling more than 1,700 pages. The book, which represents 20 years of research at LLNL, was composed and typeset by Shore on a desktop personal computer.

The book, which presents a thorough description of the interaction of laser radiation with atoms and molecules, began while Shore was on leave from LLNL at the Imperial College of Science and Technology, in London. One of his colleagues suggested he write a 20-page review article, and it just grew from there.

Shore tells a story about when he was in Jerusalem at a conference to speak about his book. He was introduced by a devoutly Jewish person who described Shore as the man "who has written the bible of coherent excitation." Amazed and flattered by the praise, Shore explained, "His use of the Bible in this context was amusing, and a great compliment, considering that the man regards the Bible to be a very sacred book."

In addition to Israel, Shore has traveled to Latvia, Hungary, Poland and France to present his research.

This research allows Shore the opportunity to teach and share new insights with his graduate students at the University of California, Davis, Department of Applied Science, which is an extension of LLNL. Working with these students is the favorite aspect of Shore's job. "It's always exciting whenever scientists make a new discovery or gain a new insight as to the way nature works," explains Shore.

Instruction is not new for Shore, who has been teaching ever since he left Pacific. He has taught and conducted research at the Harvard College Observatory, Kansas State University, the Imperial College of Science and Technology, London, and currently at LLNL. He has also pursued his research at the Centre Europeen de Calcul Atomique et Moleculaire in France, and the Max Planck Institute for Quantum Optics in Germany.

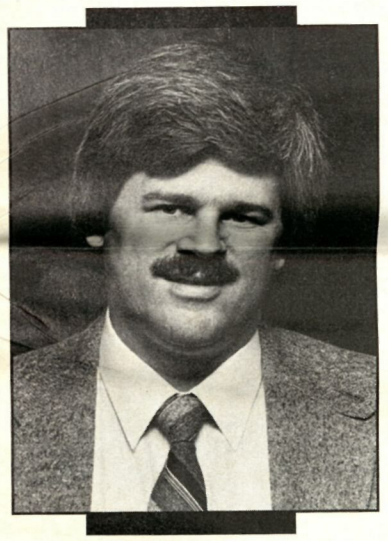
Shore has spent the last 12 years at LLNL using computers to model how individual atoms react to laser light. The growing use of computers is the biggest change he has seen in science and education since leaving UOP. He recalls that there were no electronic calculators when he was at Pacific.

"Now you can get a watch that will do some things that were not even thought about in those days," notes Shore. "It has revolutionized education. I teach a course where the students use computers to calculate things that were impossible 20 or 30 years ago."

Shore lives in Livermore with his wife Randi and their sons Hans, Leif and Derek.



Douglas Pipe's 10-year membership on the Alumni Association Board included a term as president in 1982-83

DOUGLAS PIPES '65

OUTSTANDING SERVICE TO THE UNIVERSITY

Some people leave UOP with a diploma and a sound education. They never forget their alma mater, but for various reasons they never return to visit the ivy-covered buildings and sprawling green lawns. Some people, however, not only return to Pacific, they involve themselves actively with the University. Doug Pipes is one of these people.

Despite a heavy professional commitment in his position as the senior deputy district attorney for Contra Costa County, Pipes has found time to assist the University through active involvement with the Alumni Association Board of Directors.

Pipes came to UOP as a sophomore transfer student on a full debate scholarship. He and his debate partner, Rauol Kennedy, traveled across the United States debating in competitions at schools such as Harvard, Dartmouth, Georgetown and the Air Force Academy. In 1964, Pipes and Kennedy were winners of two national debate tournaments, the National Debate Tournament at West Point and the National Television Debate Tournament from the National Television Studios in Chicago.

Pipes feels a certain loyalty to his alma mater. "UOP not only virtually gave me a free ride for my education, it gave me exposure to just about every part of the United States. It is largely responsible for enabling me to gain admission into Harvard Law School and begin my subsequent career as a trial lawyer. There is no way that I could adequately repay Pacific for that. But, to the extent that I have been able, I have tried."

Pipes has frequently donated to Pacific's Annual Fund, but his generosity has not been limited to monetary value. He served as a member of the Alumni Association Board for more than 10 years and was president for one year.

While Pipes was president of the board, he was in the middle of a multi-month trial in Sacramento. Though he lived in the Bay Area, and spent four nights a week in Sacramento, he still drove to Stockton on several occasions for meetings and various functions.

During his presidency (1982-1983), alumni participation increased substantially on a variety of fronts, especially regarding donations to the Annual Fund. His tenure also saw the Board institute the alumni family camps, which have since proven to be overwhelmingly successful. "Prior to the mid '80s, alumni who lived away from Stockton really had no organizational structure or basis for getting together with their fellow alumni," said Pipes.

The Board also appointed a committe which helped preserve the Feather River Inn as part of the University. Late in the presidency of Stanley McCaffrey, the decision was made to sell Feather River and the surrounding property. As a result of alumni support, as well as fundraising efforts by Board members, the decision was reversed. The Inn has been converted into a camp and conference center for the University.

Pipes has also been a dedicated volunteer for the Annual Fund phone-a-thons. "He has done the nitty gritty work no one wants to do," said Kara Brewer, director of Alumni and Parent Programs.

Last year, Pipes was co-chair of a committee to give an endowed scholarship in the name of former debate coach Paul Winters. Pipes is currently working with his 25th class reunion committee to raise endowed scholarship money.

"Whenever you ask Doug Pipes to do anything for the University, he does it and does it well," adds Brewer. "He really cares about UOP."

Brooks Esser, a certified management accountant and internal auditor, has been active in professional association work and community service.

BROOKS ESSER '80

OUTSTANDING YOUNG ALUMNUS

Brooks Esser hopes to race cars some day, which is not surprising considering the brisk pace he has set since graduating from SBPA 10 years ago.

Esser was already part of the working world before graduation, having started as a financial analyst at Lockheed Corporation the Monday after his last final at UOP. He moved from Lockheed after a couple years at Raychem Corporation, where he worked as an analyst in the corporate office and wrote financial statements and annual reports. After two years, he returned to Lockheed, seeking a new challenge as an internal auditor.

Esser left Lockheed in 1989 to take his current position at Hewlett-Packard, where he is an internal auditor in the Santa Clara Instruments Division. In addition to his regular financial reporting, he works on projects with many other departments within the company. "What we are doing at HP is trying to get financial people to think of themselves as part of a team with research and development, manufacturing and marketing," said Esser. "To a large extent, we have succeeded."

Esser, who is a certified management accountant and a certified internal auditor, recently completed a one-year term as president of the Peninsula Palo Alto Chapter of the National Association of Accountants. The association has 350 chapters throughout the United States, consisting of two divisions. Esser is proud that under his guidance, his 400-member chapter was ranked 14th in its division, and received an award at the NAA National Convention.

Esser's interests are not limited to his profession. He is also active in the community. "My interest there came from the house I grew up in," explains Esser. "My dad was a city councilman, then mayor, from the time I was in grammar school all the way through high school. It was natural to take an interest in service."

He is one of five community representatives serving on a regional county planning commission appointed by the San Mateo County Board of Supervisors. The commission advises the board of supervisors on matters involving more than one city. It includes representatives from each of the 20 city councils in San Mateo County. Esser is the chairman for the committee that decides which cities should receive transit money. "It's a way to serve the community that doesn't take an awful lot of time," says Esser. "There's a real tangible result."

In addition to his other interests, Esser enjoys playing the guitar. In fact, he recently put together a band comprised of professional people, including a dentist and an insurance agent. The group plays '70s and '80s music.

He plans to play with the band for a few years, but his passion for the future is to learn how to drive race cars. He points out that Paul Newman waited until he was in his 50s to start his racing career. "You start laying out the things you'd like to do and the time it will take to do them, and if you've got a lot of interests, life isn't that long," says Esser.

One of his goals is to be a regent for UOP. "I had four great years out there," recalls Esser. "I really felt like I grew substantially, and maybe UOP is responsible for me having all the interests that I do. I'd like to pay back the school some day."

Esser has accomplished more in his 10 years out of college than many do throughout their careers. His secrets to success are simple, he says. "I have a multitude of interests, and I hate to do things less well than I know I can do them."

If the past is any indication, Esser will be successful wherever his interests lead him—at Hewlett-Packard, on the race track or as a UOP regent.

THE EMERSON FAMILY

PACIFIC FAMILY AWARD

The Emerson family has been associated with Pacific for the past four generations dating back to the turn of the century. The Emersons have graduated eight family members from Pacific over a 90-year span.

Michael Emerson, class of 1988, and his brother, Patrick Emerson, class of 1986, are the most recent graduates. Both of their parents are also alumni—Stanley, class of 1958, and Kathleen (Katy), class of 1978. Katy's brother, Bill Hollis, graduated in 1972. Stanley's parents, Ralph, class of 1924, and Ione Cunningham, class of 1925, attended the University as well. And initiating the Pacific connection was Stanley's grandfather, Ed, who graduated in 1900.

Stan and Katy currently run a dairy in Oakley, and Katy has recently published her book, Troahouse School. ■

FROM THE FIRST DAY OF FRESHMAN ORIENTATION AND EXTENDING THROUGH CAREER PLANNING AFTER GRADUATION, STUDENTS AT THE UNIVERSITY OF THE PACIFIC ARE EXPOSED TO A FULL SPECTRUM OF SUPPORT AND COUNSELING THROUGH THE UNIVERSITY'S DIVISION OF STUDENT LIFE.

Through its departments, programs and services, the Student Life Division addresses the education of the whole person—from living experience and personal health to academic skills and religious development.

The University has made a conscious decision about the importance of learning outside the classroom, according to Vice President for Student Life Judith Chambers, herself a 1958 UOP graduate. "UOP has addressed in a positive way the fact that we are a residential campus and that Student Life exists here to support and supplement the academic programs," she says. "There has to be some connection between what students learn inside the classroom and what students learn outside the classroom.

"The out-of-class life of a student is never neutral—it either adds or subtracts from the student's educational experience."

Nia Johnson, a senior majoring in communication, seems well aware of the what Student Life offers. "There is a lot of help on campus," she says. "If you need help in any area, whether it be academics, athletics, religion or medical, you can get it because it is out there, it is available."

Chambers, who became the University's first student life vice president in 1975, says she has noticed a growing number of students interested in career planning and community service. "I see students making conscious decisions about what to participate in on campus based upon the extent to which those activities will help them advance their careers," she explains. "There is concurrently a renewed interest in becoming involved in the community. Many of our students are working with the Cleveland School and with the Southeast Asian community in addition to all kinds of volunteer projects through United Way and Anderson Y."

Students' views of Student Life have also changed, according to Chambers. "The majority of the students on this campus view the Division of Student Life and its professional staff as people who are here to assist them rather than as disciplinarians," she says. "When I first started working in student life, I felt the student perception was that our role was only to enforce the rules and do little else."

Part of the reason for a more positive student attitude, says Chambers, is because students play an active role in the decisions that affect their collegiate experience. "We try to involve students at the ground level whenever we are going to make any changes, whether it be the alcohol policy or the development of a new program."

INTERNATIONAL STUDENTS: THE SPRING INTERNATIONAL FESTIIVAL FEATURES THE CUSTOMS AND CUISINE OF UOP STUDENTS FROM AROUND THE WORLD.

UNIVERSITY OF THE PACIFIC

Stockton, California

PULL OUT SECTION

To all of you whose names appear in this Honor Roll, I thank you. Your incredible generosity has made this a record-breaking year and has been a tremendous encouragement to the Regents, faculty, staff and students, and to me personally.

Thanks so very much to those of you who gave unrestricted gifts to the Annual Pacific Fund. You helped provide annual scholarships, faculty development and research resources, maintenance for this beautiful campus, and many more elements which form the uncommon educational experience Pacific students enjoy.

Others of you have given to special projects that will help our school grow in regional and national prominence. Our Science Center renovation, support for athletic facilities and programs, and new Conservatory Classroom building are just a few of the dreams that are becoming a reality because of people like you who care about this great school.

A special thanks also to those of you who gave to the Endowment, particularly to endow scholarships for those deserving students who are with us today and for those young people who will be UOP students a hundred years from now.

It is on their behalf, therefore, that we express our deepest gratitude. Thanks for your investment in this University and its students.

Sincerely,

Bill L. Atchley

The Patrons of Pacific gift club was established to recognize donors at the $1,000 (Patron), $5,000 (President) and $10,000 (Regent) circle levels. These donors are true partners in the University's academic and scholarship programs which assure that the best and brightest students are able to attend UOP. Patrons participating in this program enjoy the opportunity to meet with their student scholars at the annual Patrons of Pacific donor dinner.

* Donors to the University of the Pacific are recognized for their contributions between September 1, 1989, and August 31, 1990. Every effort was made to list all donors accurately, and the editors apologize for any errors that may have occurred.

APF Chair Expresses Thanks

On behalf of the Regents, the administration, the faculty and the students of University of the Pacific, I sincerely thank each of you for your gift to the Annual Pacific Fund.

While serving these last two years as your Annual Pacific Fund Chair, I have witnessed record-breaking growth in support for the Fund. In fact, over $1.2 million was raised in the 1989/90 fiscal year from alumni, parents and friends of the University—an increase of more than 50 percent!

You can be proud of the impact your contributions have had on Pacific's ability to provide financial assistance to deserving students. Through the Pacific Partnership campaign, Annual Fund gifts will continue to provide the basis of scholarship support that UOP needs to bring bright, talented new students to our campus.

As partners in this effort, we are building a better University and educating young people who will eventually improve the quality of life in our nation and our world. Thank you, again, for your continued support of our fine school and its commitment to educational excellence.

Sincerely,

David Gerber '50, Regent
Annual Pacifc Fund, Chairman

Mayr Foundation

Established in 1949 by real estate investor George H. Mayr, the Mayr Trust has provided UOP with more than $350,000 for scholarships during the last 37 years.

This spring, while presenting the Mayr Foundation's current annual gift of $25,000 at the Patrons of Pacific luncheon, Chairman Benjamin Grier made a surprise announcement of a $50,000 Challenge.

"Our Board of Advisors would like to perpetuate the name of George H. Mayr at the University of the Pacific," he said, "by creating a George H. Mayr Scholarship Endowment. Assuming you meet the challenge of raising the funds to match ours, the $100,000 will be used to create an endowment and the income generated will support a Mayr scholar."

If you would like to assist UOP in meeting the Mayr Challenge, write or call the Office of Development at (209) 946-2130.

This past year witnessed a 12 percent increase in Circle of Friends membership, thanks in part to a successful alumni drive to meet a $100,000 Challenge issued by Regent Fritz Grupe. These members realize that their support plays a critical role in enabling UOP to attract and retain quality students, and they experience a sense of personal satisfaction when they witness first-hand the telling impact their gift has on the life of a young person.

Members of the Circle of Friends provide annual support to UOP with gifts ranging from $100 to $999. Donors for the 1989 year were invited to attend the annual Circle of Friends dinner/reception at which Ted Baun was honored as Donor of the Year. In addition, Erwin Farley was recognized as Volunteer of the Year, and Cliff Dochterman was cited for his many years of outstanding community service.

Greenlaw "Fritz" Grupe, Jr.

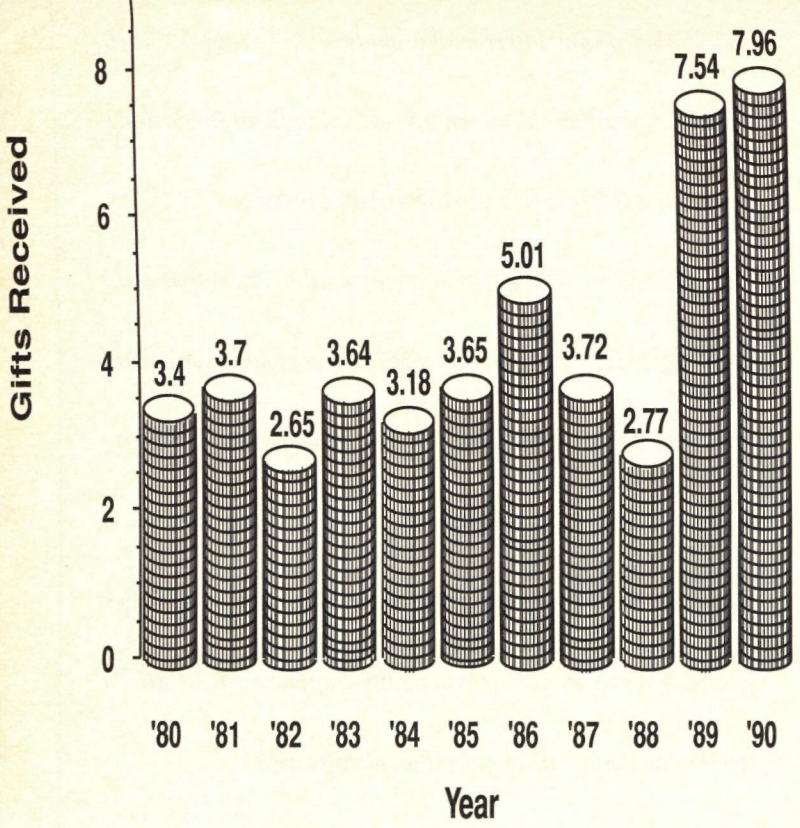
Grupe Challenge

In a generous gesture designed to increase gifts and participation among UOP alumni, parents and friends, Regent Greenlaw "Fritz" Grupe offered to match every $2 contributed between May 15 and Aug. 31, 1990, with $1 of his own (up to a total of $100,000). This made for a strong appeal to donors who were contacted through a variety of specialized telemarketing and direct mail programs. As of Aug. 10, 1990, the full amount of the match was earned with all funds designated for scholarships and unrestricted purposes.

President Atchley, in announcing the completion of the challenge, said, "It's great to see the kind of business creativity that made Fritz Grupe such a successful developer now being applied to our fund raising efforts. With generosity and leadership from Regents like Fritz, the rest of us are inspired to work even harder to see that every qualified applicant who seeks a UOP education will be given that opportunity."

A Decade of Growth

Gifts For All Purposes
1980 - 1990



Gifts for all purposes increased to a record $7.9 million this past year. Included are funds for the Annual Pacific Fund, endowment, capital needs and other specified purposes.

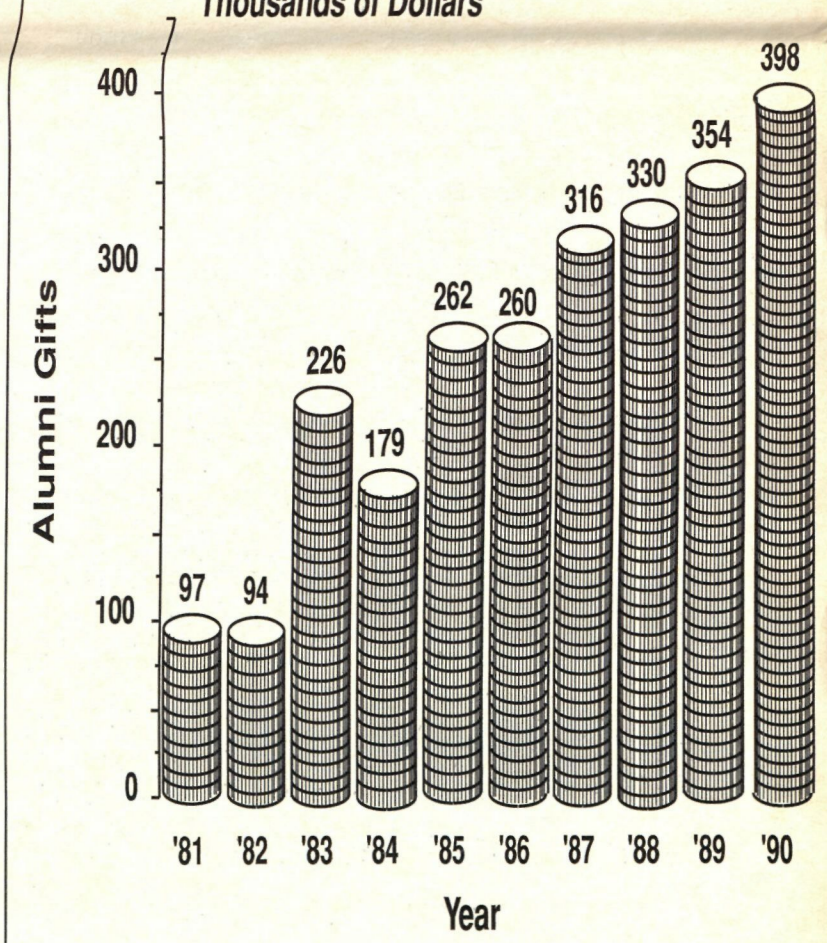
Alumni Giving
1981 - 1990



Alumni giving to the Annual Pacific Fund has quadrupled during the past decade, with over double the number of donors. These funds help provide scholarships, library resources and faculty development.

Farmers Insurance Group Provides Scholarship

A creative corporate giving policy of Farmers Insurance Group is providing scholarship support to private universities. For every employee of over four years, Farmers Insurance Group provides a $1200 scholarship to that employee's alma mater. Corporate appreciation for Pacific graduates is clearly demonstrated by Farmers' recent gift of $9600. Corporations who provide scholarship support of $1000 or more become members of the Corporate Patrons of Pacific, and are invited to the campus to meet their specific student recipient. If you would like more information regarding this program, contact Terrise Giovinazzo at (209) 946-2120.

The following donors are recognized for both unrestricted gifts to UOP as well as matching contributions based on employee gifts. Many corporations have established policies of matching employee gifts up to a 4 to 1 ratio. Matching gifts may be used by donors to qualify for recognition in the Circle of Friends and the Patrons of Pacific gift clubs.

Members of the Corporate Patrons give $1,000 or more annually to provide scholarships to UOP students.

Pacific Partnership Campaign

In October 1989, the first of what will be an annual campaign was "kicked-off" by the faculty and staff at UOP. Almost 100 volunteers gathered in Raymond Great Hall to select solicitation cards and receive a brief training session before making visits to key prospects in the community. Other volunteers manned phones—calling alumni, parents and friends to ask for scholarship contributions. Direct mail appeals completed the impressive effort.

Offices across campus soon heard of success after success. Confronted with the difficult task of asking for money, those who attempted the calls and received positive responses felt a great sense of achievement.

The results of this effort and increased solicitation throughout the state have been nothing short of FANTASTIC!

Excluding unrestricted bequests, annual fund gifts and pledges reached $1,025,000...a 42 percent increase in one year. Additionally, scholarships restricted to certain academic departments have reached $116,000, an improvement of 40 percent. Gifts for endowed scholarship purposes surpassed $1.79 million. In San Joaquin County alone, the hard work of volunteer solicitors netted $250,000 more than last year for scholarships.

Bishop's Scholars Program

In a special effort to renew ties with its Methodist heritage, University of the Pacific has initiated a creative new project called the Bishop's Scholars Program. With the help and guidance of Bishop Melvin Talbert, UOP is working to create a program designed to attract quality students and to strengthen the school's relationship with thousands of Methodists throughout California and Nevada.

Each of the 378 churches in the Northern California-Nevada Conference will eventually be responsible for selecting one outstanding student to receive a $2,000 scholarship while attending UOP. In this way, Pacific can better address the challenging issues of recruiting superb students and finding funding for them during these difficult economic times in higher education.

1990 Senior Gift

Under the leadership of Campaign Chair Sienna Yoshida, the Class of 1990 raised over $1,100 for new picnic benches to be placed in a recently landscaped lawn just north of the McCaffrey Student Center.

Following in the tradition of past senior classes, members of the 1990 Senior Gift Campaign conducted a four-week direct mail effort directed toward their fellow classmates, staffed sign-up tables and made personal contacts with their peers in order to build support for the project. Committee members included: Kim Austin, Toni Baker, Stephanie Chappel, Ruth Elder, Stephen Ifft, David McLaughlin, Chin Vu and Sienna Yoshida.

The faculty, staff and administration salute the efforts of these committed young people and encourage their continued support to UOP as new members of the alumni association.

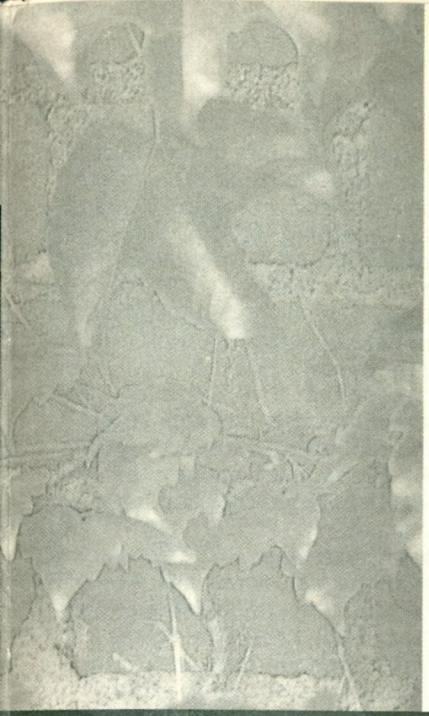
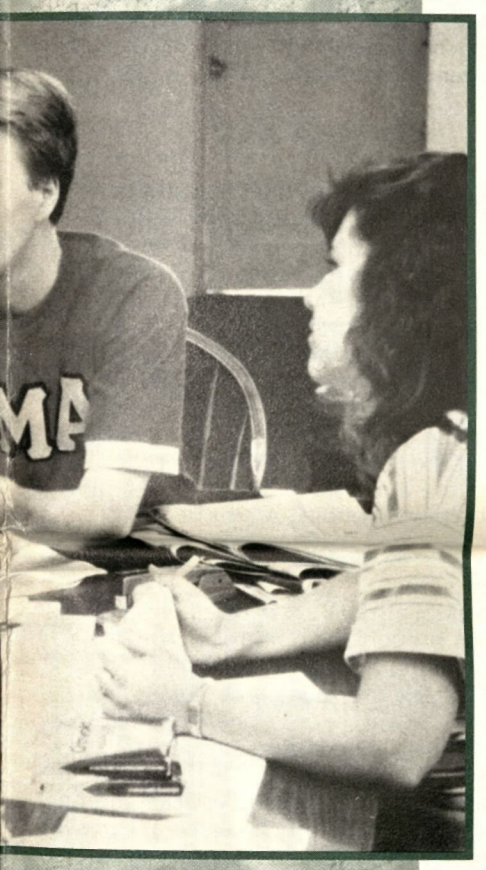
An Annual Pacific Fund business reply envelope has been included for your convenience in making a donation to the 1990-91 Annual Pacific Fund campaign.

Donors to the University of the Pacific are recognized for their contributions between September 1, 1989, and August 31, 1990. Every effort was made to list all donors accurately, and the editors apologize for any errors that may have occurred.





RESIDENTIAL LIFE: CENTRAL TO STUDENT LIFE AT UOP IS THE UNIVERSITY RESIDENCE SYSTEM.

More often than in the past, students are taking advantage of services offered by the Division, says Dean of Students William Barr. "Young people today coming to college are as a whole very needy," he explains. "We have seen a lot of changes in the culture in the last 20 years but students today are bringing with them a lot of 'baggage'—such as needs for counseling services or help in controlling emotions.

"In fact, our primary function is not disciplinary but more talking with young people who cannot manage alcohol well, who aren't managing emotions very well or who need help navigating into this new environment."

Barr finds working with college-age students to be fascinating, but his reasons for choosing the field go much deeper. When he left the military in 1961 to attend Michigan State University, he worked as a resident advisor. During Barr's first month there, a boy who lived down the hall from his apartment committed suicide.

"That had quite an impact on me," says Barr. "And my own college years were pretty stormy so I have always wanted to help people at that time in life.

"It is a time when we give young people a lot of conflicting messages about alcohol, sexuality and what life can mean and I see people in student life as working to reduce the confusion of those messages. We also give them an environment in which experimentation can occur within limits so that the result of failure is not so devastating."

As with any other college or university, a student's first exposure to Student Life at UOP occurs during orientation. But unlike most other schools, small groups of freshman or transfer students are teamed with a faculty advisor and a student (peer) advisor, and the group stays in close contact throughout the students' first year.

*Involving peer advisors is a great asset to the Stu-*dent Life Division, says Douglas Smith, director of Student Advising and Orientation. "Our peer advisors are role models, mentors, trained and skilled people who reach out into the environment the student lives in to provide support and information," he says. Student advisors assist students with their academic needs, while resident advisors are integral to the living environment.

All student and resident advisors are required to take a semester-long course titled "Foundation of the Helping Relationship." Key skills the students are taught include active listening, assertiveness and student development theory.

The 50-55 student advisors, who teach study strategy workshops during orientation and organize University registrations, also conduct workshops in the Academic Skills Center in such areas as notetaking, time management and term paper writing.

Student advisor Mathew Castle, a sophomore music education major, says becoming an advisor has added immeasurably to his education. "My best experience here has been becoming a student advisor," he offers. "I was already part of the Conservatory and I knew my curriculum, but when I became an advisor I was able to share that curriculum and all the other experiences I have had at UOP with new students.

"Every orientation is sort of like being a freshman again because I feel all that energy of the day when I first came to UOP."

To greater increase the effectiveness of orientation, Smith and other UOP administrators have examined ways to set a strong intellectual tone and better involve faculty in the process. The result of their efforts was implemented for the first time during orientations preceding the fall semester. Prior to coming to UOP for orientation, students receive an article about higher education that they are encouraged to read. After a faculty member lectures on the topic during orientation, the students meet with their student advisors and faculty advisors to discuss what they have learned.

"The idea is to stress that students are entering an intellectual community where ideas are going to be discussed and debated and that they need to get involved," says Smith. "The faculty also felt they had a better sense of who the individual students were after observing how they reacted in a group."

Just a short walk across the Calaveras River from the main campus buildings, the Cowell Health Center and the Counseling Center play an important role for many students at UOP. The Health Center furnishes a range of physician services, as well as clinical services and 24-hour infirmary care. The Counseling Center provides personal and group counseling, vocational testing, stress management, alcohol and substance abuse counseling, as well as consultation services for faculty and staff.

Physician Sarah Grimes left her private practice with Kaiser Permanente in September to become medical director of the Health Center. "This is the first time my medicine has been focused on one age group—if I could pick an age group to focus on this is probably the most exciting group," says Grimes. "Because the people I see don't tend to be really sick, I want to be more of an information source. I would like students to feel they can come here and ask me questions about different things rather than get information elsewhere that might not be as correct." Grimes plans to hold question-and-answer sessions with students on AIDS and other health-related issues.

While the Health Center works with students' physical needs, the Counseling Center assists students fighting personal or emotional distress. "Whenever students are experiencing emotional or stress-related problems that impede their academic progress, we help them get back on their academic track as soon as possible," says LaVon Rupel, interim director of the Counseling Center. "Since most of our students are between age 18 and 24, they are dealing with predictable, normal problems of development. These difficulties include such things as separation from their homes, newly-found independence, relationship problems and all the issues dealing with work and life."

Also located in the Student Life Division is the R.O.A.D. program, Responsible Options to Alcohol and Drugs. Now in its second year after receiving a sizeable Federal grant, R.O.A.D. has begun actively working with students, faculty and staff to create an environment where substance abuse is seen as undesirable, and raise campus consciousness on issues relating to drugs and alcohol. "I want to show students that they can get involved in activities on Friday and Saturday nights where they don't have to get 'smashed' to have a good time," says program coordinator Randy Haveson, who works with student volunteers to implement his ideas. "It's okay to remember on Saturday what you did on Friday."

The program consists of five subcommittees concerned with substance abuse education and prevention, institutional policy, research, awareness activities and programming and intervention. Near completion is the construction of a non-alcoholic nightclub in the McCaffrey Center where students can go as an attractive alternative to drinking.

According to Vice President Chambers, there is evidence that the program is working. "We may never eliminate alcohol," she says, "but I feel the day is not too far away when student abuse of alcohol will not be tolerated or admired by other students.

"Along with that, I think the University has a responsibility to [tell students] about the abuse of alcohol and what it does to your body, your ability to learn and your relationships."

"A STUDENT ISN'T JUST EDUCATED IN THE CLASSROOM OR JUST OUT OF IT. THERE IS A NEED FOR THE TWO TO BE CONNECTED."
~ Judith Chambers

When Iraqi troops invaded Kuwait, one component of Student Life—the Office of International Services—sprang into immediate action to help UOP's Kuwaiti population in several ways.

"Our first action was to help the administration understand the request [for financial assistance] from the embassy and what that meant to the students," says Barbara St. Urbain, OIS director. "Then we showed the students that we and the University were there to support them." Soon after the invasion, President Bill Atchley and the Board of Regents granted special assistance to Kuwaiti students in three areas—tuition, housing and meals. The Cultural Division Embassy of the State of Kuwait had appealed for financial assistance for the more than 1,200 Kuwaiti college students enrolled in the United States.

While the University attended to the students' financial needs, OIS staff upheld the personal and emotional needs of the Kuwaitis, who were (and remain) concerned "for their families and for the country they had known and loved, wondering if it would ever exist again," says St. Urbain. "The Kuwaiti students are here [at UOP] to get an education to contribute to their country, but now they don't know if there will be a country to contribute to."

More than 250 students from 60 foreign countries currently attend UOP. OIS works closely with these students during orientation, and advises them on their personal and financial needs throughout the year. A number of intercultural activities, such as the International Spring Festival, are also offered.

These events are held not just to benefit international students, but to promote cultural awareness among American students as well, says St. Urbain. "We try to expose the students to the rest of the community and help introduce them to the American culture and people," she explains. "To this end, very few of our programs are only for foreign students—we always try to integrate them into the larger student population."

Preparing for a career after graduation can often appear overwhelming to students. To this end, the Career Planning and Placement Center offers a number of services that facilitate career decision making. Workshops are held throughout the year on such topics as resume writing, interviewing and goal setting. Each fall, nearly 100 recruiters from a spectrum of organizations are made available to students at the Career Faire. Part-time employment services are also provided.

Burton Nadler, who became director of the Center in July, hopes to maintain close contact with graduating seniors and alumni to foster what he calls "two-way alumni counseling." In a project that began last spring, seniors are given surveys that ask them to indicate, among other things, where they have found employment. As the Center records an accurate network of alumni, Nadler hopes that alumni will return for ongoing career services while they continue to help currently enrolled students.

"If I could choose what the 1990s would bring," says Nadler, "it would be that cycle of tracking where students are going, knowing where they are as alums, bringing them back to help [students] in the career process, and assisting them when they need help."

Due to a recent administrative reorganization by President Atchley, both residential life and housing—the physical aspects of the residence halls—are administered by Student Life. "I applaud Dr. Atchley's decision in this area," says Vice President Chambers, "because I believe it will enable us to provide a better residential experience for our students."

James Falcone, who left a similar position at Temple University to become UOP's director of Residential Life and Housing in July, hopes to build a program that's so appealing it can become a strong recruiting tool for the University. "We must provide the most attractive facility that we can," he says. "I want to have full occupancy and I would like to see us turning away students instead of looking for students. I came from an environment where the campus housing was so full we had to rent additional apartments for students."

New to campus this fall is the designation of Jessie Ballantyne as a "wellness residence hall." As part of the Federal grant that established the R.O.A.D. program, a "healthy choices" residence hall was developed on campus. Smoking is not permitted in the building, and weekly activities are planned that help students develop the physical, intellectual, emotional and cultural aspects of their lives.

Sixty vital ingredients in the succe of the living experience at UOP are th 46 resident advisors (RAs) and 14 he residents. According to Cathy Samps associate director of Residential Life a Housing, being a resident assistant is an easy job. "One of the biggest chall ges [RAs] have is balancing their time because they want to put so much en gy into the job that they are doing," s says. "Sometimes they become so in- volved in their job working with peop that they have to pull back and remem ber they are students, too, and need t for themselves."

Sampson supervises RAs and head residents in the residence halls. Assis Dean of Students Tom VanSchoor sup vises RAs and head residents in the Greek system in addition to his work with student honor societies and dis- abled students. Falcone, Sampson and VanSchoor report to Associate Dean o Students Jesse Marks '64.

As the focal point for student activities on campus, the Stanley E. McCaffrey Center is nearly always bus tling with activity. Students, faculty ar staff converge in the center to enjoy a meal, shop in the bookstore, see a movie, visit the art gallery, attend a le ture or to just sit and study. Near completion is a two-year renovation project which relocated the office of the Associated Students of the University of the Pacific (ASUOP), computer store, grocery store and gallery, as well as comple ly reorganized dining facilities. A number of additional changes were made to add new service as well as upgrade the physical appearance and ef ficiency of the Center.

According to McCaffrey Center Director Jim Pau the restyling has brought vast improvement. "The beauty of the building from an operational standpoint is that any one area can be open and closed apart from any other area," he explains. "W were able to put the dining services together, add rest rooms on the second floor and develop a food mall concept with a lot of self-service, grab-and-go food areas that is providing much more ease of se vice for customers." In addition to managing non-commercial public areas of the Center, Paull s pervises the full-time staff in ASUOP and registers the more than 50 student clubs.

The role ASUOP plays in the development of stu dents at UOP is a very important one according to Vice President Chambers. "They [ASUOP] are a lot more active than a lot of places and I have really, i a gratifying way, seen that grow and develop," she says. "When I was an undergraduate here, student government did not look like that. [ASUOP] offers a very comprehensive set of programs and services and provides a lot of opportunities for students to assume leadership positions."

A recent study by the Carnegie Commission, released in the form of a book by Ernest Boyer title Campus Life: In Search of Community, parallels Vic President Chambers' philosophy for student life. "I that book, Dr. Boyer stresses the importance of loo ing at the education of students holistically," says Chambers. "He says there must be a connection be tween how students learn and how students live. This holistic approach to education is significant—a student isn't just educated in the classroom or just outside the classroom. There is a need for the two to be connected." At UOP, the Division of Student li provides that connection.

Drug/Alcohol Program Leader Devotes '2nd Life' to Students

By Harrell Lynn

At age 30, Randy Haveson is a man happy in his life and enthused about his work as coordinator of the University's drug and alcohol program.

But on a spring evening six years ago, life held little hope for Haveson. A decade of drinking, snorting, smoking and inhaling just about every chemical available on the street and in the corner liquor store had finally brought the young man to the edge of his existence. Strung out on marijauna, cocaine and alcohol, the 24-year-old sat on his bed and contemplated cutting his own throat.

"I had reached the edge," he recalls. "I had just been booted out of college for the third time and fired from such illustrious jobs as delivering pizza and scraping boat hulls. I was unable to pay my rent because of my drug habit. I was going to kill myself with a knife, either by slitting my wrist or my throat. I planned to sit in the bathtub so I wouldn't make a mess."

Then Haveson remembered a billboard he had seen a few months before in Los Angeles. It read: "Drug Problem? If so, call 1-800-BE-SOBER." At that moment, Haveson recognized that he had a drug problem. He called the number and ended up talking to a counselor for an hour and a half.

"She understood and told me it was going to be okay because I had finally listened to the side of me that wanted to live. She told me about some meetings and I decided to give them a try."

Haveson vowed off drugs that evening and gave up alcohol 11 days later. He has had neither since.

Haveson saw the counselor's voice as a beacon of hope at the crossroads of his life. When he landed on his feet a few weeks later, he decided to dedicate his life to lighting the path for others experiencing similar dependency problems.

Within four years he had earned his bachelor's degree in psychology from San Diego State and his master's degree in counseling psychology from National University. Along the way he performed hundreds of hours of community service for cocaine-related organizations and spoke on his substance abuse battle at several high schools and colleges in Southern California.

Professionally, he worked as a chemical dependency counselor at two hospitals and an outpatient treatment facility. From 1987 to 1990, he worked as a counselor for Scripp's McDonald Center, which he says is one of the top chemical dependency treatment centers in the nation.

Haveson's road to recovery has led him to UOP, both literally and figuratively. Haveson was hired this past summer to head the Student Life Department's R.O.A.D. program, Responsible Options for Alcohol and Drugs. Funded by a federal grant, the program is charged with providing education, prevention, intervention, research and institutional policy regarding substance abuse relating to students as well as faculty and staff.

"I can make a difference by planting a seed in a person to do something about his problem, because I've been there and know what it's like," he maintains. "I have a bachelor's degree in psychology, a master's degree in counseling and a Ph.D. in street life."

It's a new challenge for Haveson, who had previously concentrated on working with the intervention and treatment aspects of substance abuse programs.

"The educational aspect is new for me," he acknowledges. "In a treatment center, it was really easy to determine when I was making a difference, because I could see if the person stopped drinking or abusing drugs. Here, working mostly to educate rather than to treat, it will likely take months, maybe years, to see an impact on a person. A student I counsel might not be affected until decades later, when he himself is a parent and uses some of my advice with his child."

Haveson also feels he must adopt a low-key approach to reach college students—frustrating, he admits, because of his fiery personality. "I have to tell myself to slow down, that I don't have all the answers. I've found that I can't go in like a tidal wave and expect whole living groups or fraternities to respond to my presentations. The students aren't all going to jump up and say they're going to drink responsibly or that they are going to see me if they have a problem. That's a dream-world.

"I'm looking for one or two to come in, then for those two to spread the word to others, until there is a mushroom effect."

He says the process is working.

"I have already had several students come in to talk about their problems after hearing one of my presentations. My goal was to help one person and already I have helped a few, so I feel I've succeeded. But there is still much to be accomplished here."

Challenges are nothing new to Haveson. Raised in the posh surroundings of Beverly Hills, Haveson started drinking at age eight during his family's holiday gatherings. He blacked out from drinking for the first time at age 13. Two years later he started with pot and hash, then slowly progressed to PCP, LSD, Quaaludes and cocaine. At age 21 he experienced what he feels was a heart attack following a particularly active evening snorting coke.

"I had about three and a half sugar packets worth of cocaine, when it takes just a line to get someone high," he relates. "It must have been a minor attack, but it felt like someone took an ice pick and went 'bam' into my heart and moved it around, and then took a pair of vice grips and twisted them back and forth. I passed out."

Haveson was lucky. But he has seen others who were not as fortunate, including his 23-year-old friend Keith, who died after an evening of pot, coke and alcohol. He doesn't want any UOP students to follow the road he or his friend traveled.

"I have watched people die and many others become injured because of drinking and drug abuse. When I heard about this position, I said 'Wow. Look at all the seeds I could plant, look at all the people I could impact.' I don't want kids to go through what I went through, and I don't want them to end up like my friend Keith."

Haveson refuses to blame his privileged upbringing for causing his dependency problems. "I was raised in million dollar houses, with the right friends, the right cars and all those things people want. People try to blame their problems on those sort of things, but that wasn't true in my case. My family taught me what love is all about. It was a combination of several things that caused my problems."

Haveson feels that education and outreach programs—largely absent in his youth—are the best ways to prevent drug abuse problems. "It was real evident when I was a college freshman that I had a real problem, but nobody ever said anything to me," he relates. "And when I was in high school, there weren't programs around like R.O.A.D. giving presentations about drugs and alcohol. But casual drug use is down 40 percent from what it was five years ago, which says that these educational programs are starting to work.

"All we want to do is put on a 'neon light' to let people know that the R.O.A.D. program exists here as a place to turn for help."

Every year on May 16, Haveson makes the effort to call the BE-SOBER hotline and thank the service for the anonymous counselor who saved his life. And every day he works to help better the lives of others.

"The best thing I can do is be an example. There was a time when my daily life consisted solely of trying to get some drugs and alcohol. I didn't care about anyone or anything else, just about getting more. I've come out of it okay and the story has a happy ending so far. I don't know what is going to happen from here, but it looks like it will continue to go up as long as I don't stick any kind of chemical in my body.

"I used to think that I couldn't have fun without drinking or taking drugs, but I'm having a blast in life now." ■

ALUMNI NEWS

ALUMNI NOTE PROGRESS, GOALS AT FALL RETREAT

Introduction of the new Alumni president and president-elect, a visit by the University's new second-ranking administrative official, and a positive report on the progress of the Feather River Inn project highlighted the recent Alumni Association retreat Sept. 7-9 at Feather River.

Horace Fleming, the incoming University executive vice president, addressed the Alumni Association Board on Friday evening. Mary Young '55 began her term as president, while Bob McConnell '50 took his position as president-elect.

Other news included the announcement that the roof renovation on the Feather River Inn has been completed. The renovation was made possible by a matching grant from Marjorie Webster Williams, whose $50,000 gift was equaled by alumni contributors. Marjorie and her husband were feted by the Alumni Association at an evening barbecue at the Inn on Sept. 8.

The Board also unanimously passed a resolution to endorse the Bishop Scholars Program, a University effort to re-establish its ties with the Methodist Church by awarding a scholarship to an outstanding student from each of the Church's 378 sites in Northern California and Nevada.

The various alumni committees reported their progress in the past year and their goals for 1990-91.

Clubs Chair Stan Lichtenstein '49 said that his committee was accelerating the progress of the quarterly newsletter between clubs. He noted that each club would try to put on two events a year.

Gene Nyquist '52, continuing education committee, noted that his group hopes to attract more alumni to Feather River by increasing the number of seminars and conferences.

Bill Wirt '51, development committee, challenged each Alumni Board member to attract one or more students to attend UOP. He also passed a hat around and raised more than $1,500 for the Corporate Patrons Scholarship Fund.

Chris Greene '58, chairman of the Feather River committee, reported that the Feather River project had made "remarkable progress" with the help of significant contributions of time and money by alumni and friends. Greene unvailed one-year and five-year strategic plans which include enhancing the Inn's conference and meeting facilities and improving its physical plant.

Peter Prentiss '61, admissions committee, reported the success of two yield parties in Hawaii and the goal of working closely with the UOP admissions staff in the coming year.

Karla House '82, young alumni chair, recounted several committee events from the past year and outlined plans for 1990-91, which include a spring-summer event to "welcome seniors to alumnihood."

Charlotte Filipelli '53 noted that the public relations committee's goal was to attract travel writers to publish articles on the Feather River Inn Camp and Conference Center.

Linda Bennitt '63, events committee, reported that new activities were being planned for homecoming.

Joretta Burlington '81 displayed the new alumni calendar, and gave much of the credit for its creation to Max and Bev Bailey. To order a calendar, contact the Alumni Office, (209) 946-2391.

UPCOMING PROGRAMS AT THE FEATHER RIVER INN

The Feather River Inn Camp and Conference Center is hosting several events in the coming year:

Elderhostel (Feb. 10-16)—This session will include two classes, "Finding Enjoyment and Meaning through Writing," taught by Kara Brewer, and "World War II in the Pacific Revisited" taught by Sy Kahn. Cross-country skiing will be available at a nearby resort.

Busy Aides (May 17-June 2)—This work party is for alumni and friends interested in aiding renovation and maintenance projects at the Inn. Construction, furniture refinishing, painting and gardening are among the party "favors."

Memorial Day Alumni Weekend (May 24-27)—This program is targeted toward alumni and will feature UOP speakers, organized recreation programs and excursions to spots of interest in the local area.

Club Tigre (June 9-15, June 16-22)—Young campers, age 7-12, will receive an intensive week-long immersion in a foreign language and culture. For more information, contact Lifelong Learning at (209) 946-2424.

Summer Quest (July 7-13, July 14-20)—Week-long sessions focus on developing the "whole" child, allowing each young participant the opportunity to grow physically, academically and emotionally. For more information, contact Lifelong Learning at (209) 946-2424.

Geology Camp (July 7-13, July 14-20)—Two week-long field courses in geology studying the local terrain. For more information, contact Lifelong Learning at (209) 946-2424.

Pacific Alumni Family Camp (July 21-27, July 28-Aug. 3, Aug. 4-10, Aug. 11-17)—For more information, see article on opposite page.

For further information on Feather River Inn activities, contact Steve Davis at (916) 836-2623, or Kara Brewer at (209) 946-2391.

Mary Young '55:
Alumni President Devoted to Service

SIRILIN PHOTOGRAPHERS

Mary Young '55

If the role of an alumni association is to serve the alumni and the institution which provided their education, then the Pacific Alumni Association may have the ideal leader in its new president, Mary Young. That's because Young, a 1955 graduate from the School of Education, has dedicated much of her post-graduate life to serving others, most notably her family, communit and alma mater.

Young met her husband, Robert, while both were attending Pacific in th early 1950s. Upon graduation, she taught for five years before starting family.

After attending to family matters and raising her two daughters, Julie an Sydney, the latter who graduated from UOP in 1985, Young has in recent yea been a solid contributor to the Alumni Association. She has served on commi tees involved with awards and clubs and spearheaded the revival of the steerin committee in Sacramento. "With the guidance of Kara [Brewer], we were ab to reorganize the steering group to where we now have a very active core alumni support in the Sacramento Valley," says Young.

Young has also worked closely with alumni efforts to restore the Feathe River Inn. When the Alumni Association became interested in salvaging Feathe River, Young, along with former Association presidents Ken Mork and Nanc Spiekerman, visited several alumni camps around the state to determine th potential value of such a camp to the University.

After their eye-opening tour of alumni camps, Young, her husband and a determined band of alumni have since spent numerous hours of their personal time to refurbish and organize Feather River into a viable alumni camp and conference center. It's been worth it, she believes. "To have allowed Feather River to slip out of our hands would have been devastating, and now to see all our work and planning coming to fruition is just incredible."

Young encourages all alumni to visit Feather River. "If alumni go up ther just once, their enthusiasm for the place would increase dramatically. Whe you're there, something happens. The feeling is infectious."

Young's feeling for UOP also seems infectious. "Bob and I both have under stood the importance of having an allegience to our University. We believe i giving something back for all that we have been given. We appreciate what th University gave to us and we want to return the favor."

Young's service proclivity is not limited to her UOP commitment. She ha long-been an active volunteer in her community, working for the Californi Historical Society and several other causes in the Sacramento area. She i especially proud of her efforts on behalf of People Reaching Out, an organiza tion devoted to providing drug and alcohol education to young people.

"Busy people somehow always find the time to get things done," shrug Young. "My husband and I have been given a lot during our lives, so we don' hesitate to give something back. When it comes to the community, we want t be givers, not just takers."

Among her goals as president is to continue to increase young alumni involvement in Association activities. She also wants to continue the tightening of ties between the University and the Association. "We have been gratified in recent years with the interest President Bill Atchley and the University have shown in our activities," she says. "It's good that they realize that we're not just sitting around twiddling our thumbs, and that they consider us an important element in the University's future."

Alumni Camp Brings the Pacific Family Together

By Harrell Lynn

Summer after summer, the same family vacation scenario invariably occurs: non-stop traveling to a far-off place, with brief glimpses here and short stays there. By the time the family can unwind and relax, it's time for the long trip back, maybe by a different route for variety sake so that the family can enjoy short stays here and brief glimpses there. When the station wagon finally pulls into the drive way, mom and dad are longing to get back to work and the kids are counting the days until school starts.

Six years ago, however, the University began a program that has put fun back into summer while bringing alumni and their families closer together.

Pacific Alumni Camp started at the Feather River Inn as a one-week camp in 1985. The Camp's popularity has grown such that this coming summer its four one-week sessions are expected to sell out in advance.

What makes Alumni Camp such a hot ticket? "Pacific Family Camp offers a vacation the entire family can enjoy," says camp director Marge Dehning. "There are enough activities promoting parent-child togetherness to make the experience a memorable and rewarding family vacation, and there are the right amount of other things to do to satisfy both children and adults."

She says that campers, young and old, are attracted by several characteristics, including the multitude and blend of interesting activities, the freedom to relax—or play hard, and the scenic atmosphere.

Dorann '72 and Gonzalo Flores and their two children have traveled to the Camp twice from their Los Angeles area home 600 miles away. Dorann says her family is not deterred by the long trip because the camp offers something for everyone in the group. "This is a vacation spot where we can all go as a family and have fun things to do together," she relates. "Instead of driving to one place and just looking at things, we are constantly doing something and enjoying the beautiful setting."

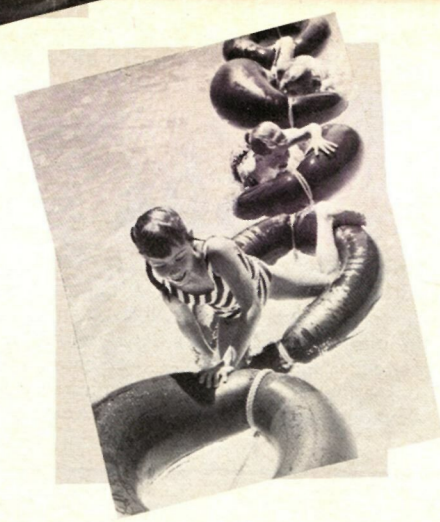
The Camp's base is the Feather River Inn, built in the 1920s as a resort for the wealthy and recently refurbished to much of its original splendor. The Inn and surrounding Camp grounds are nestled on 100 acres studded with pine trees and other starkly beautiful greenery near the town of Blairsden, located 50 miles northwest of Truckee.

This beauty has enticed Allan Hardcastle, '77 BA, JD at McGeorge, his wife Vickie Johnson Hardcastle '78, BS, BA, and their young son to visit the camp four times.

"One of the joys is the drive—it's in the county with one traffic light," laughs Allan. "The area is like Lake Tahoe was 40 years ago."

Hardcastle, an attorney in Santa Rosa, and his wife, a certified public accountant, look upon the Camp as a relief from their hectic careers. "It's a stress-free vacation," explains Allan. "If you want to sit around, you can. The nice thing is that you are there with other families. You don't have to worry if your child is making a noise at the dinner table, because there are other kids making noises to the right or left."

What is there to do? For young and old, there is fishing, hiking, horseback riding, whitewater tubing, golf, tennis, swimming, volleyball, ping pong and basketball. Nature walks, camp song singing in the moonlight and churning out homemade ice cream round out activities the entire family can enjoy.



There are activities reserved just for kids or adults. Morning and afternoon programs for children are broken into age groups: nursery (age 0-2), tiggers (2-3), tiger kittens (4-5), cub's den (ages 6-8), tiger's pride (9-12), and tiger teens (13-17). Programs include various arts and crafts, from t-shirt painting and leather working to sand candle making and nature collage formation.

Campers age 21 and up, called the bengal bunch, can listen to UOP faculty speakers, sample (and re-sample) a multitude of libations on beer-tasting night, and create raku art. Several championship-length golf courses are situated nearby in addition to the links at Feather River, and numerous state parks, historic towns, lakes and rivers are available as day-trip options.

This variety of choices make the camp a hit with all ages, according to Effie Swaggerty, '42. Effie and her husband Clem '41, brought two of their grandchildren in 1989 and three grandchildren this past summer.

"It's a great place for grandparents and their grandchildren," relates Effie. "We get to spend time with them in organized activities and at meals, but they are allowed a lot of freedom to do things on their own."

The Swaggertys became interested in the Feather River Inn two and half years ago when friend and fellow Pacific alum Ed Koehler '39 invited them to help refurbish some of the Inn's cabins.

"The best years of our lives were spent at Pacific," says Effie. "This is a fabulous opportunity for potential Pacific students to begin an association with the University."

It's also a great way to reconnect with old University friends, says Bob Lee '69, who starred as quarterback with the Tigers and later in the National Football League. Lee has visited the camp twice with his wife Janice, daughter Jennifer, and two sons, Matthew and Zachary. "I've met wonderful people at Feather River, including some who I had known casually back in school," he says. "It's great to re-establish the old ties, and the close-knit atmosphere that develops because of this camaraderie is especially enjoyable."

Allan Hardcastle agrees that the Camp is a great rallying point for alumni. "This is a great way to strengthen alumni ties. I may never before have met the people I'm talking to, but it's still great to swap UOP stories. My wife and I have developed new friends every time we've gone."

The Camp is not limited to the traditional family unit. According to Camp Director Dehning, couples, singles and single-parent families are welcome. Diane Ditz Stauffer, '69, a teacher in the Stockton Unified School District and a single mother of two, admits to having some trepidation when she first decided to attend the camp last year.

"I had some concern, being a single mother and not knowing any of the other families," she recalls. "But it didn't take long for us to get to know other children and their parents, and soon it became like one big family."

Stauffer was impressed with the Camp's cleanliness and organization. "There was always something available to do and everything was nicely organized and laid out," she stresses. "It was more comfortable than most summer camps I've seen while still supplying the rustic atmosphere. I wondered what it would be like to take a baby—but I saw many parents with their kids in diapers."

Stauffer's 10-year-old daughter Ann Marie admits she was scared when she first arrived at the Camp, until she found that there were 10 girls her age to play with. Even having a bunch of adults around didn't spoil the fun. "The camp people had a lot of things organized for each age group," she recalls. "We didn't have to stick next to our parents all day. Like with the dances at night—all of us danced together for a while, then they let the kids go watch a movie while the adults stayed and danced with each other."

The four one-week sessions will be offered July 21-27, July 28-Aug. 3, Aug. 4-10 and Aug. 11-17. Registration is on a first-come, first-serve basis, and Dehning expects a sell-out for all four camps. "Each year we are getting more and more interest, so much so that we had to add another session. Campers are advised to register early to ensure that they get the week they want."

Cost per week is $40, ages 0-1; $110, 2-4; $198, 5-12; $248, 13-17; $355, 18 and up. Registration includes all meals, accommodations, programs and supplies, camp t-shirts for all family members, and use of on-site recreational facilities. Green fees are an additional charge.

For more information, contact Dehning, at (209) 473-3817, Kara Brewer, alumni office, (209) 946-2391, or Steve Davis, Feather River Inn manager, at (916) 836-2623. ■

MEMORIAM: Iva Belle Cooley Colliver, '15

Iva Belle Cooley Colliver, '15, the oldest living graduate of the University, died Sept. 5 in Stockton. She had celebrated her 100th birthday in February with many of her friends at Grace United Methodist Church.

An active member of UOP's Half Century Club, Iva received the Alumni Association Award for Distinguished Service to the University. She was the widow of George Colliver, '15, the founder and first chairman of the UOP religous studies department. They were among the families who moved along with the campus from San Jose to Stockton in 1924.

"Iva was an exemplary Christian woman with a lively mind and a warm heart," noted Kara Brewer, '69, director of alumni and parent programs and a UOP historian. "Iva and George were not only involved with the life of the campus but also with the community, helping to found the Chinese Christian Center."

The couple's five children—Ruth, Grant, Ava, Hazel and Frances—and one grandchild graduated from Pacific.

Survivors include the five children, nine grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren. The University held a memorial service in her honor Oct. 13 at the Grace United Methodist Church.
