Editor's Note

Today's rapidly changing international community provides a unique and challenging forum for the transnational practitioner. This, coupled with the emergence of a growing global economy, makes it crucial that the transnational practitioner be informed of current activities in the international arena.

This volume assists the practitioner in achieving this end. It contains a symposium which focuses on the emergence of private investment in Central and Eastern Europe. It also contains an article that reviews current foreign direct investment policies in Nepal. In addition, this volume includes student articles focusing on an interpretation of the U.N. Convention on the International Sale of Goods, organized labor in Mexico, Mexico's construction industry, and European lender liability in environmental cases.

The Transnational Lawyer is dedicated to providing the transnational practitioner with timely and practical assistance. We welcome any suggestions our readers have in helping The Transnational Lawyer better serve the transnational practitioner. In addition, we appreciate and encourage the submission of articles dealing with private international law. The Board of Editors is very excited about the increased interest shown by our readers and are confident that The Transnational Lawyer will continue to assist the transnational practitioner.
