Conference champions

By Robert Schuh
Staff Writer

Fans rushed the court as the Pacific men’s basketball team finished the regular season with its 13th straight win and secured a first place seed in the Big West Conference last Saturday night.

Prior to Saturday’s win over UC Riverside, the Tigers eased over Cal State Fullerton 78-62 last Thursday. These last two wins ensured that Pacific would share first place in Big West with its rival Utah State. Last time the two teams met, Pacific barely defeated nationally ranked Aggies 64-60.

Now the men must play in the Big West Tournament held in Anaheim, CA. The Tigers started strong against Fullerton and the score at the half was 45-29. However, the Titans fought back in the second half to keep the game close. The Tigers held back Fullerton’s counterattack and when the final buzzer sounded the Titans trailed Pacific by 16.

The game was physical and a technical foul was called on Cal State. Pacific fans looked nervous when senior and star guard Miah Davis left the game with an ankle injury with only a few minutes remaining. However, the injury proved minor and Davis will start in Saturday’s game.

When asked whether the team would be prepared to play without their star guard, junior David Doubly replied, “That would be detrimental to the team, but we have so many pieces that we could make it work.”

Davis finished Thursday’s game with 23 points and five assists. Junior Tyler Newton earned a double-double with 11 points and a remarkable 11 rebounds to match.

Coach Bob Thomason felt this was a hard fought win, but was a little concerned with clock management near the end of the game.

“We’re going to have to start learning how to use up the clock to avoid quick turn-around shots by the other team,” Thomason stated.

Saturday night, the Tigers had no problem closing out the game against Riverside

See CHAMPS pg 12

State Senate candidate to speak at Pacific

College Republicans host Stockton mayor
Gary Podesto in Meet the Candidate Forum

By Eric Thompkins
Guest Writer

On Mar. 31, the Pacific College Republicans will be hosting a Meet the Candidate Forum featuring Stockton Mayor and republican State Senatorial candidate Gary Podesto. Podesto is running for the 5th Senate District, which is currently represented by Senator Michael Machado (D-Linden).

The Podesto/Machado race is predicted to be the hardest fought race during the 2004 general election, and by all accounts will be the most expensive state legislative seat battle ever in the United States.

The 5th district is comprised of San Joaquin, Solano, Yolo and portions of Sacramento counties with a population of over 800,000. “The Legislature has failed, and it’s time for the architects of that failure to step aside and give others the opportunity to do better,” declared Gary Podesto from the steps of Stockton’s City Hall. “It’s time for taxpayers to demand accountability. We can and must do better.”

“I imagine how much better our schools and communities would be, if we wrung the waste out of government?” continued Podesto. “Spending has increased over 35 percent in the last four years. Are our schools 35 percent better now? Are our roads 35 percent better? I want to bring fiscal responsibility back to Sacramento.” (www.garypodesto.com)

Come meet Mayor Podesto on Mar. 31 from 8 - 9 p.m. in the Regents Room as Mayor Podesto discusses his platform and answers questions regarding those issues that are most important to Pacific students.
Career Faire

By Ho Tron
Guest Writer

Looking to find a good career, but don't know where to start? The Career Resource Center will be hosting its Spring Career Faire this March here at University of the Pacific. If you’re plagued with uncertainty about career opportunities, this is a great way for you to find a suitable career.

According to the Wall Street Journal, economic growth today is very slow and it is tough to find a decent job out in the market. This is especially true for college graduates. It is hard to know which industry or field will be booming, and where to start looking for a job. According to the Labor Department, jobless claims rose in the week ending February 21 and applicants for unemployment benefits increased by 6,000 to 350,000.

Northern California has seven out of the top 10 cities with nationally high unemployment rates. This includes Fresno, Merced, and yes, Modesto, Stockton, and Lodi (Career Indicators, Wall Street Journal). Scary isn't it? That’s pretty bad news for students graduating and looking for good careers.

That's where Pacific's Career Faire can come in handy. There will be 64 employers on campus offering a vast variety of opportunities. Present at the fair will be accounting firms, hospitals, bio-tech and medical companies, health care services, financial institutions, non-profit organizations, International Studies careers, school districts, and much more. To name a few, companies like E Trade Financial, the Peace Corp, Liberty Mutual, Sutter River Center, Enterprise, Sacramento Fire Department, Best Foods, and will be in attendance.

“We try to have representation from all areas,” said Deborah Crane, this year’s Career Faire coordinator, who is also the Employer and Alumni Coordinator. Crane said the turnouts are fairly good, but this year, they are aiming to increase student participation by expanding promotion of the event. “Our purpose is to connect students with potential full/part time jobs and internships and not only to senior standing students,” said Crane.

The Career Faire is open to all Pacific students and alumni. It will be a great opportunity for students to become familiar with the jobs out there, since the job market for recent graduates and current students isn’t doing so well. Crane said, “It will give students an opportunity to network with recruiters on site. Even if students aren’t looking for a job now, it will help them get to know recruiters and develop a network and connection with them for later benefit.”

You can also gain the experience of interacting with real job industries; it will better prepare you for the working world. College students don’t always start off well looking for careers. In the February issue of the Wall Street Journal, Kris Maher wrote, “Recruiters say they are frequently shocked at the number of candidates [inexperienced college graduates] who make a poor first impression.” This is a great chance for students to gain more insight on how to get the jobs they want.

The Career Faire will be held Thursday, March 25, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Hand Hall lawn. You should come with several copies of your resume, and dress for success in business casual attire. Please contact the Career Resource Center at 946-2361 for more information.

Peace activist to lecture

By Shone Cipris
News Editor

South African archbishop and recipient of the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize Desmond Tutu will deliver a lecture in Spanos Center on April 1. The archbishop’s visit, which will be his only Northern California speaking engagement, marks the beginning of the Brubeck Festival 2004. Presented by Pacific and the Dave Brubeck Institute, the festival commemorates the 40th anniversary of the passage of the Civil Rights Act and recognizes renowned jazz composer and Pacific alumnus Dave Brubeck’s lifelong commitment to social justice and human rights.

Born in 1931 in Transvaal, South Africa, Desmond Tutu was raised in a household with an atmosphere of sympathy and tolerance; he later said of his upbringing, “I never learned to hate.” At the young age of 12, Tutu met an Anglican priest in Johannesburg, Father Trevor Huddleston, whose notably early opposition to apartheid made a strong impression on and influenced Tutu. After deciding in 1958 to join the ministry, Tutu was ordained to the priesthood in 1961.

He lived in London for several years during which he continued in his studies, and after returning to South Africa in 1967, held the post of chaplain at University of Fort Hare. By 1970 Tutu had moved to the University of Botswana, Lesotho, and Swaziland, where he held the position of theological lecturer. He continued his work as an educator and by 1972 was named Dean of St. Mary’s Cathedral in Johannesburg; he was the first black to hold this position. Three years later Tutu became the first black man to be named General Secretary of the South African Council of Churches.

In 1984, Desmond Tutu was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in recognition of “the courage and heroism shown by black South Africans in their use of peaceful methods in the struggle against apartheid”. The Nobel Prize committee asked that Tutu’s recipient of the award be regarded “not only as a gesture of support to him and to the South African Council of Churches, but also to all individuals and groups in South Africa with their concern for human dignity, fraternity and democracy, incite the ventilation of the world.”

Tutu was named Archbishop of Cape Town in April 1986 and continues to speak out against social injustices and inequality; in recognition of his tireless efforts he has been bestowed honorary degrees from a number of respected institutions of higher learning such as Harvard and Columbia. His appearance at Pacific will commence at 6 p.m. in the Alex G. Spanos Center, and is free to all.

TUTU: Nobel Peace Prize winner Archbishop Desmond Tutu will speak at Pacific on April 1st.
THE PACIFICAN
NEWS

Today is last day to vote in ASUOP elections
Thursday, March 11, is the last day of voting for ASUOP student government candidates. Students may vote today between 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the McCaffrey Center, and at the Library between 4-7 p.m.

Students can get ‘Inside Scoop’ on classes
Between 12-1 p.m. today in the McCaffrey Center, shipping company will hold an information session about its business between 7-8 p.m. tonight in the Spruce Room at the McCaffrey Center. All students are invited to attend; please contact the Career Resource Center at 946-2361 for more information. Tomorrow, March 12, Maersk Sealand will conduct on-campus recruitment interviews between 9:5 p.m. Please visit www.pacific.erecruting.com to register.

BRIEFS

the College of the Pacific Association (COPA) will hold an event called “Inside Scoop,” during which students can interact with professors from all College of the Pacific departments and discuss their syllabi for fall semester classes.

The event will be a good opportunity for students to learn first-hand about classes they may wish to take. Living up to its name, Inside Scoop will also feature free ice cream sundaes.

Second event for Pacific Service Challenge
Starting at 1 p.m. today (right after Inside Scoop) in the Commons Room at McCaffrey Center, Alpha Phi Omega will host the Absolutely Incredible Kids Day event, in which students can interact with local child in need. This opportunity for students to visit a younger sibling or write an encouraging letter regarding campaign rules such as the legitimacy of using masking tape to hang up posters. “The Tiger Lore is way too strict in its posting policy,” Hundley said. “We haven’t been able to hold up to all of its restrictions.”

After weeks of campaigning, candidates are just as sick of playing the watchdog as the elections committee.

“I feel bad that the elections committee has to waste their time discussing things like masking tape and contradictory university posting policies,” ASUOP Vice Presidential candidate Haley Peterson said.

“It seems like the elections committee’s time should be spent—as should the candidates”—on promoting the idea of participation within the student body instead of having to deal with posting issues.”

Currently, 20 percent of each candidates’ poster must be devoted to supplying students with polling locations and times. No other form of advertising voting information is displayed on campus.

“It’s sad that campaigning has to be so petty,” Peterson said.

With a $1,000 budget, Hundley and his elections committee have been creative in their solicitation to students. Even up to the days of polling, candidates are desperately passing out flyers as students walk through the doors of the polling place.

Others have required a percentage of their personal Greek organization to vote in the election and have even visited opposing Greek houses to voice their concerns.

However petty and strict Pacific’s election procedures seem to be, Hundley believes this year’s voter turnout will be much higher than in the past.

“The last two years have been dead with only six percent of the student body voting. That is ridiculous,” Hundley commented.

“What you need on a college campus is more participation. I’ll be thrilled if we get 25 percent of the students out this year.”

By Alex Wagner and Amber Prochaska
Editors

In this year’s competitive race for student body president, Pacific has seen its fair share of “petty politics.”

Under strict election codes and campaigning procedures, candidates have been vying for endorsements while keeping a watchful eye on their opponents.

“Whenever there is a contested race, the petty stuff will always be there,” ASUOP Elections Coordinator Ryan Hundley said.

For the past three weeks, Hundley has listened to complaints and questions regarding campaign rules such as the legitimacy of using masking tape to hang up posters.

“Pacific has seen its fair share of ‘petty politics.’”

ASUOP Vice Presidential candidate Matt Neerie said. “Our primary strategy was verbal communication. We relied on talking to people instead of posters and flyers.”

Presidential candidates have been creative in their solicitation to students. Even up to the days of polling, candidates are desperately passing out flyers as students walk through the doors of the polling place.

Others have required a percentage of their personal Greek organization to vote in the election and have even visited opposing Greek houses to voice their concerns.

However petty and strict Pacific’s election procedures seem to be, Hundley believes this year’s voter turnout will be much higher than in the past.

“The last two years have been dead with only six percent of the student body voting. That is ridiculous,” Hundley commented.

“What you need on a college campus is more participation. I’ll be thrilled if we get 25 percent of the students out this year.”

by Alex Wagner and Amber Prochaska
Editors

In this year’s competitive race for student body president, Pacific has seen its fair share of “petty politics.”

Under strict election codes and campaigning procedures, candidates have been vying for endorsements while keeping a watchful eye on their opponents.

“Whenever there is a contested race, the petty stuff will always be there,” ASUOP Elections Coordinator Ryan Hundley said.

For the past three weeks, Hundley has listened to complaints and questions regarding campaign rules such as the legitimacy of using masking tape to hang up posters.

“The Tiger Lore is way too strict in its posting policy,” Hundley said. “We haven’t been able to hold up to all of its restrictions.”

After weeks of campaigning, candidates are just as sick of playing the watchdog as the elections committee.

“I feel bad that the elections committee has to waste their time discussing things like masking tape and contradictory university posting policies,” ASUOP Vice Presidential candidate Matt Neerie said. “Our primary strategy was verbal communication. We relied on talking to people instead of posters and flyers.”

Presidential candidates have been creative in their solicitation to students. Even up to the days of polling, candidates are desperately passing out flyers as students walk through the doors of the polling place.

Others have required a percentage of their personal Greek organization to vote in the election and have even visited opposing Greek houses to voice their concerns.

However petty and strict Pacific’s election procedures seem to be, Hundley believes this year’s voter turnout will be much higher than in the past.

“The last two years have been dead with only six percent of the student body voting. That is ridiculous,” Hundley commented.

“What you need on a college campus is more participation. I’ll be thrilled if we get 25 percent of the students out this year.”

By Alex Wagner and Amber Prochaska
Editors

In this year’s competitive race for student body president, Pacific has seen its fair share of “petty politics.”

Under strict election codes and campaigning procedures, candidates have been vying for endorsements while keeping a watchful eye on their opponents.

“Whenever there is a contested race, the petty stuff will always be there,” ASUOP Elections Coordinator Ryan Hundley said.

For the past three weeks, Hundley has listened to complaints and questions regarding campaign rules such as the legitimacy of using masking tape to hang up posters.

“The Tiger Lore is way too strict in its posting policy,” Hundley said. “We haven’t been able to hold up to all of its restrictions.”

After weeks of campaigning, candidates are just as sick of playing the watchdog as the elections committee.

“I feel bad that the elections committee has to waste their time discussing things like masking tape and contradictory university posting policies,” ASUOP Vice Presidential candidate Matt Neerie said. “Our primary strategy was verbal communication. We relied on talking to people instead of posters and flyers.”

Presidential candidates have been creative in their solicitation to students. Even up to the days of polling, candidates are desperately passing out flyers as students walk through the doors of the polling place.

Others have required a percentage of their personal Greek organization to vote in the election and have even visited opposing Greek houses to voice their concerns.

However petty and strict Pacific’s election procedures seem to be, Hundley believes this year’s voter turnout will be much higher than in the past.

“The last two years have been dead with only six percent of the student body voting. That is ridiculous,” Hundley commented.

“What you need on a college campus is more participation. I’ll be thrilled if we get 25 percent of the students out this year.”

by Alex Wagner and Amber Prochaska
Editors

In this year’s competitive race for student body president, Pacific has seen its fair share of "petty politics."

Under strict election codes and campaigning procedures, candidates have been vying for endorsements while keeping a watchful eye on their opponents.

"Whenever there is a contested race, the petty stuff will always be there," ASUOP Elections Coordinator Ryan Hundley said.

For the past three weeks, Hundley has listened to complaints and questions regarding campaign rules such as the legitimacy of using masking tape to hang up posters.

"The Tiger Lore is way too strict in its posting policy," Hundley said. "We haven't been able to hold up to all of its restrictions."

After weeks of campaigning, candidates are just as sick of playing the watchdog as the elections committee.

"I feel bad that the elections committee has to waste their time discussing things like masking tape and contradictory university posting policies," ASUOP Vice Presidential candidate Matt Neerie said. "Our primary strategy was verbal communication. We relied on talking to people instead of posters and flyers."

Presidential candidates have been creative in their solicitation to students. Even up to the days of polling, candidates are desperately passing out flyers as students walk through the doors of the polling place.

Others have required a percentage of their personal Greek organization to vote in the election and have even visited opposing Greek houses to voice their concerns.

However petty and strict Pacific's election procedures seem to be, Hundley believes this year's voter turnout will be much higher than in the past.

"The last two years have been dead with only six percent of the student body voting. That is ridiculous," Hundley commented.

"What you need on a college campus is more participation. I'll be thrilled if we get 25 percent of the students out this year."
Spring break memories

By Paige Elishe
Staff Writer

The air is slowly warming and the days are quietly growing longer. Although it reluctantly approaches in fits, summer is coming.

Yet, here on our campus we are called back to reality from our dreams of hot lazy days and are reminded of our obligations and responsibilities. Is there no happy medium to balance the urge for summer and the aversion to academic winter? Before we know it— it’s already upon us—Spring Break!

As I prepare for this year’s great escape, I cannot help but look back over the years and feel a bit nostalgic. Really, I feel that I have done it all: a week in San Diego with close friends, an eventful vacation in Acapulco with the boyfriend and seven of his fraternity brothers.

But out of all of the years, the one that stands out the most in my mind is my most recent spring break, last April.

While attending the University of Ghana in Legon, a girlfriend and I decided to take some time off to create our very own African spring break experience.

We took three weeks, which may seem like an extended amount of time but what really only just sufficed for our great adventure. On the 12th of Apr. 2003, Julie, a 19-year-old student from the University of Wisconsin and I left Accra, Ghana in a taxi packed with three other passengers. Unaware of what our travels might hold, we departed with a feeling of optimism and an unparalleled sense of adventure.

From Accra, we traveled east first to Togo and then to Benin. The trip through eastern Ghana and most of these two countries was relatively short and Julie and I spent all three car rides sharing the front seat of a beat-up shared taxi.

After a night and two days in the smog filled city of Cotonou, Julie and I headed into northern Benin and what for us, as seasoned travelers of Ghana and Togo, constituted the great unknown.

In the north, we were amazed by the stark contrast in architecture, dress, constitution, and even environment of our surroundings and its inhabitants.

Thankfully, as we noted for the first time in literally months, we experienced the sensation of evaporation as our usually sweat-drenched SPRING SERVING: West Africa is one of the most remote places on the planet. It is a land full of surprises that will enlighten the mind and the soul.

The conservative view

By Mara Title
Staff Writer

I’ve decided to take a different approach in defining conservatism this week. I’ve come to realize that, although I can provide insight into what it means to be a conservative, students must experience it for themselves. This will most likely happen when they have to fend for themselves, after graduating from Pacific. Most students in college adhere to their liberal professors’ mindsets, and feel adamantly that they too want to seek out and eliminate the injustices of our society.

Although a noble cause, the premises surrounding liberalism ultimately lead to greater depravity within the human spirit. Here’s an in-depth example:

Suppose that a 16-year-old girl gets pregnant by her boyfriend, decides she’s too young to care for the baby, and wants to get an abortion.

This response might be similar to a liberal outlook: “The girl knows her own limitations; if she doesn’t feel comfortable having the baby, then she shouldn’t be forced to. She’s too young anyway, and has so much of her life ahead of her.”

A conservative would more or less view the situation like this: “Aside from the fact that they’re having pre-marital sex (which has its consequences), if the girl doesn’t want the baby, she should give it up for adoption. The media always ignores the fact that a huge majority of women who’ve had an abortion encounter intense emotional distress. These reasons alone are adequate enough, but the idea of eliminating a human life might also be a factor in considering adoption. Liberals define abortion as a woman’s choice to manage her body the way she pleases. Conservatives view abortion as a woman’s choice to suffer.”

As was seen in the success of the welfare reform law in the 1990’s, work supports were used. When it was implemented in the late 1990’s, work reform worked and Congress reauthorization this month and based on Congress’ welfare track record thus far, it is clear who is going to benefit most from the proposed changes and who is going to suffer.

According to Dr. Heather Boushey for the Center for American Progress, the reason welfare reform worked when it was implemented in the late 1990’s is because the economy at the time was good and also because work supports were used. Work supports, childcare and health insurance, are under attack in the proposed changes Congress has for the welfare reform law. While these changes may save a lot of money, this is going to hurt the lowest-paid American where she can afford it at least—a 40 hour work week with no extra money to pay for childcare. As was seen in the success of the welfare reform law in the 1990’s, work supports are often what make ends meet; the pay from a minimum-wage job alone is often not enough to cover basic needs. With states giving $7.7 billion for child care for low-income families and an additional $24 billion for health insurance, these work supports are what kept many families afloat.

Two million American families are on welfare and over two million fewer jobs are available since Bush has taken office—pretty interesting statistics. While conservatives may come up with plans about welfare fraud and greedy welfare moms, what’s really at stake in this law reauthorization is the future of America’s families. If childcare is not made readily available to welfare mothers, they must then rely on family help which can often be unreliable or paid services which are costly and detract from money needed to cover other basic needs.

Welfare mothers are often lacking education and job skills, and with the added headache of seeking childcare and health insurance, this negatively impacts their mental health as well as endangers the physical wellbeing of their children.

While conservatives may fault welfare mothers for negligence or carelessness, the fact remains that children do exist who are in desperate need of care. By removing the staple support of childcare and health insurance, Congress is simply ensuring that the financial divide between low-income and wealthy families will increase. It is only by continuing to maintain these supports can we hope to help welfare mothers learn how to become self-sustaining so they can manage healthy families.
Parking is perplexing

By Eugene Sefonov
Guest Writer

We do it everyday. We think about it everyday. Most importantly, we dread it everyday. What is it you may ask? I’ll tell you. Parking.

Do students at Pacific not pay enough tuition as it is? What is the deal with the university charging for the so-called “parking” on campus? "It’s really crappy," said junior Mason Warriner.

Another student commented on the cost of parking. "I believe that students pay more than enough tuition so they do not have to pay for poor parking amenities. There is no reason to charge more for parking that is scarce and not even guaranteed," said freshman Lior Tamir.

"I cannot begin to tell you how much time I spend looking for parking, just to end up the same distance, as it would be to walk from the Townhouses to the Communication Department. We pay extra for nothing and things need to change," said junior Jon Krupp.

Why doesn’t the university add more parking? Maybe adding a multilevel parking garage would be a great idea. Whatever the addition is, it would surely alleviate the parking problems that students have. We simply need accessible parking.

Professors and staff also have to pay for parking, but it seems there is a sufficient amount of “A” parking spaces, so there is not too much room to complain.

I hope the university will listen to its students and make the campus student-vehicle friendly for the future. I understand changes cannot be made immediately, but it would be nice to see some plans for it to eventually happen. It would make it that much better to be a student at Pacific.

Let me just clarify that money is not the main issue here. It is the availability and accessibility that is the issue. As long as there are enough parking spots around campus, students would not mind paying as much. However, if changes cannot be made, then the cost of parking needs to decrease or be completely eliminated.

Horizons: Beautiful Yosemite

By Kara Buchanan
Staff Writer

A bad day simply does not exist in Yosemite. Though a muggy July downpour of rain and an intense thunder and lightning storm literally cast a shadow on the spectacular face of Half Dome, it only served to enhance the beauty of Yosemite’s gorgeous landscape. The cloud formations added a unique dimension to the sky overhead; the lightning magically illuminated the water as it cascaded down the majestic falls and into glistening pools at their base.

Hiking in the rain added to the typical level of endorphins incurred by such physical exertion. Bouncing down the rocks we had found so strenuous to ascend brought upon a sensation of pure exhilaration. The breath-taking view from the apex of the hike justified every step of the three and a half miles of switchbacks as well as the dripping wet hair.

Very few things in this world can bring such pure joy as returning to the base after three and a half hours. Gazing up at such a spectacular, colossal natural wonder as Yosemite Falls, with the knowledge of what it feels like to be standing atop the mountain and looking down, is the definition of fulfillment.

I allowed the rain to come in through my car’s open windows along with the invigorating fresh air as I returned to Pacific. The roads winding through the lush mountainside splattered with cars sporting out-of-state license plates bore testimony to the prestige of this place. It is no wonder people will drive across the nation in order to spend time in Yosemite National Park. A day immersed in this glorious setting instills an increased appreciation for the wonder of natural beauty that consistently surrounds us regardless of what storms life may bring our way.
Clothes lost some of their moisture and peeled from our skin.

While trekking in Dogon Country, along the Bandiagara Escarpment, Julie and I found ourselves hundreds of miles from both running water and electricity in 115 degree heat.

In the villages in which we were guests, curious yet polite children and adults bombarded us with attention and we found it almost impossible to remain offended by those individuals who were abrasive or demanding.

Returning south after two weeks in the dry heat was shocking yet comforting to both Julie and I. Surprisingly, after having lived in the heavy moisture of southern Ghana for three weeks, I found that I had grown used to the humidity and felt almost lonely when it did not blanket me in its warm embrace.

All told, in 21 days, Julie and I spent 126 hours in transport (transport meaning the back of an old beat-up truck with wooden benches, a shared taxi or a packed bus). We visited Lome, Cotonou, Ouagadougou, Bobo-Dioulasso, Djenné, Gorom-Gorom and many other cities.

It would be impossible to replicate or compete with last year's spring break experience but I still look forward to next week. I am amazed that this is already the last "spring break" that I will ever have. What a sobering thought!

For everyone headed somewhere exciting this spring break-be careful and have fun. For those who are not-enjoy it and relax!

For everyone headed somewhere exciting this spring break-be careful and have fun. For those who are not-enjoy it and relax!

Neither Julie nor I spoke any French and found it difficult to relate to the almost impossible lifestyles of the Burkinabés and Malians. We learned incredible lessons of perseverance, dedication, humility, and satisfaction from them.

In the villages in which we were guests, curious yet polite children and adults bombarded us with attention and we found it almost impossible to remain offended by those individuals who were abrasive or demanding.

Returning south after two weeks in the dry heat was shocking yet comforting to both Julie and I. Surprisingly, after having lived in the heavy moisture of southern Ghana for three weeks, I found that I had grown used to the humidity and felt almost lonely when it did not blanket me in its warm embrace.

All told, in 21 days, Julie and I spent 126 hours in transport (transport meaning the back of an old beat-up truck with wooden benches, a shared taxi or a packed bus). We visited Lome, Cotonou, Ouagadougou, Bobo-Dioulasso, Djenné, Gorom-Gorom and many other cities.

It would be impossible to replicate or compete with last year's spring break experience but I still look forward to next week. I am amazed that this is already the last "spring break" that I will ever have. What a sobering thought!

For everyone headed somewhere exciting this spring break-be careful and have fun. For those who are not-enjoy it and relax!
Moral reflection on Generation S.L.U.T.

By Troy Van Denover

Guest Writer

First, let me admit, I was punk'd. I have been reading Marty Beckerman’s online column for about three years now. I had been eagerly anticipating the release of his new book from the glimpses he has so generously dished out in his newsletter.

Three weeks ago, I was informed that some of the religious right had acquired an advance copy of his new book, and were warning America’s youth away from the vile contents contained therein.

The website warned that Marty Beckerman was the single most dangerous threat to today’s youth and viciously attacked his book, and Mr. Beckerman personally. I was incensed over their desire to censor an up and coming author. But the joke is on me, www.stopmartybeckerman.com is actually an alcohol-fueled attempt at grand humor by Marty and his friends.

For those of you who haven’t discovered Marty Beckerman online at www.martybeckerman.com, you are missing a view into Generation Y that Road Rules, The Real World, and the other insipid TV shows only hint at. Marty has been compared to Hunter S. Thompson in his irreverent writing style, using profanity as a sort of punctuation, and at age 20, may be moving forward to his own Fear and Loathing.

In Generation S.L.U.T. (sexually liberated urban teens), A Brutal Feel-Up Session with Today’s Sex-Crazed Adolescent Popula­ace, Marty takes the reader into a world of anonymous, alcohol and drug-fueled hook-ups from the perspective of the 16 year-olds who inhabit it. While at its outset, the book seems to glorify the hedonistic scenes of carnal couplings; it actually carries a deeper message. The story delves into the self-ponderings of the incredibly shallow characters, giving the reader an insight into their sadly superficial existences.

The book’s format is that of a short novel with the chapters divided by other short stories. Marty has taken the liberty of sharing some of his own experiences in this book, with the addition of some factoids that will leave you scratching your head wondering how deeply meaningless life has become for some of our youth.

After reading this work from cover to cover, I feel it is a necessary read for the incoming generation, whatever letter we assign to them. Good work, Marty, long may you continue to offend.

...And if you happen to have an interesting experience during the break & you would like to share it, email us at pacificanlifestyles @pacific.edu

...wait, one more thing... anyone interested in writing for Lifestyles next year, there will be paid positions open, applications are due March 25 for editing positions.
Trashy Spring Break caught on tape

Try to keep your clothes on as the cameras off

By Mikey Vu
Movie Critic
Lifestyles Editor

With Spring Break just a couple days away, college students everywhere will be flocking to all the hostel spots like Cancun, Cabo, Miami, and of course Lake Havasu. But with this power comes great responsibility, for everyone knows that Spring Break can be simplified into a basic math equation: Spring Break = Alcohol + Party + Clothes.

But in the past years an unknown variable, an epidemic, has reared its ugly head. You are probably wondering, “Hey Mikey, what is this X factor you speak about?” Well, ladies and gents, that mystery variable is none other than... Girls Gone Wild.

In the past years, handheld digital cameras have become a common household object and they now threaten the very existence of the naked, drunken college student. What was once a promiscuous, embarrassing, and crazy week of partying in anonymity now is a promiscuous, embarrassing, and crazy week of partying caught on tape featuring Snoop Dogg.

For those of you who aren’t in the “know, Girls Gone Wild” is one of the most boring series of exhibitionist pornography you will ever find. Who actually spends money on this crap? Girls Gone Wild videotapes are about as sexually appealing as watching Sex Talk with Sue Johanson on the Oxygen channel.

What Girls Gone Wild tapes consist of is a bunch of creepy old guys perusing college parties, clubs, and bars looking for the drunken girl to take off her clothes...in exchange for a T-shirt. Am I the only one that sees an absurd paradox here? Now what I’m thinking is that you could avoid the whole situation altogether by never taking off the shirt that you came in with in the first place. If you kept it on, you wouldn’t need another shirt...duh.

Anyways, there are myriad things that you can do during Spring Break, but for some apparent reason college students tend to like the lack of clothes the best (wonder why that is?). There are always exceptions to the rule, but with Girls Gone Wild grossing millions of millions every year, it seems like there is no shortage of girls eager to take it off.

Many of you may be wondering, how come it always is the girls that are taking it off while the guys are not? We’ll be honest, there are undoubtedly far more naked males than females at these parties, but the male form just doesn’t cut it as beautifully as the female form. And besides, how many girls do you think would actually pay to see a bunch of naked guys dance around when they could just do it for free at a frat party?

Remember my words concerning fellow college students when you head off to Spring Break: Never! So before you fine that X factor do it for free at a frat party. Remind your fellow campus members that every year, it seems like they are always exceptions to the grossing millions of millions every year, it seems like there is no shortage of girls eager to take it off. Many of you may be wondering, how come it always is the girls that are taking it off while the guys are not? We’ll be honest, there are undoubtedly far more naked males than females at these parties, but the male form just doesn’t cut it as beautifully as the female form. And besides, how many girls do you think would actually pay to see a bunch of naked guys dance around when they could just do it for free at a frat party? Remember my words concerning fellow college students when you head off to Spring Break: Never! So before you fine that X factor do it for free at a frat party. Remind your fellow campus members that every year, it seems like they are almost always exceptions to the Girls Gone Wild tapes consist of is a bunch of creepy old guys perusing college parties, clubs, and bars looking for the drunken girl to take off her clothes...in exchange for a T-shirt. Am I the only one that sees an absurd paradox here? Now what I’m thinking is that you could avoid the whole situation altogether by never taking off the shirt that you came in with in the first place. If you kept it on, you wouldn’t need another shirt...duh.

Anyways, there are myriad things that you can do during Spring Break, but for some apparent reason college students tend to like the lack of clothes the best (wonder why that is?). There are always exceptions to the rule, but with Girls Gone Wild grossing millions of millions every year, it seems like there is no shortage of girls eager to take it off.

Many of you may be wondering, how come it always is the girls that are taking it off while the guys are not? We’ll be honest, there are undoubtedly far more naked males than females at these parties, but the male form just doesn’t cut it as beautifully as the female form. And besides, how many girls do you think would actually pay to see a bunch of naked guys dance around when they could just do it for free at a frat party? Remember my words concerning fellow college students when you head off to Spring Break: Never! So before you fine that X factor do it for free at a frat party. Remind your fellow campus members that every year, it seems like they are almost always exceptions to the Girls Gone Wild tapes consist of is a bunch of creepy old guys perusing college parties, clubs, and bars looking for the drunken girl to take off her clothes...in exchange for a T-shirt. Am I the only one that sees an absurd paradox here? Now what I’m thinking is that you could avoid the whole situation altogether by never taking off the shirt that you came in with in the first place. If you kept it on, you wouldn’t need another shirt...duh.

Anyways, there are myriad things that you can do during Spring Break, but for some apparent reason college students tend to like the lack of clothes the best (wonder why that is?). There are always exceptions to the rule, but with Girls Gone Wild grossing millions of millions every year, it seems like there is no shortage of girls eager to take it off.

Many of you may be wondering, how come it always is the girls that are taking it off while the guys are not? We’ll be honest, there are undoubtedly far more naked males than females at these parties, but the male form just doesn’t cut it as beautifully as the female form. And besides, how many girls do you think would actually pay to see a bunch of naked guys dance around when they could just do it for free at a frat party? Remember my words concerning fellow college students when you head off to Spring Break: Never! So before you fine that X factor do it for free at a frat party. Remind your fellow campus members that every year, it seems like they are almost always exceptions to the Girls Gone Wild tapes consist of is a bunch of creepy old guys perusing college parties, clubs, and bars looking for the drunken girl to take off her clothes...in exchange for a T-shirt. Am I the only one that sees an absurd paradox here? Now what I’m thinking is that you could avoid the whole situation altogether by never taking off the shirt that you came in with in the first place. If you kept it on, you wouldn’t need another shirt...duh.

Anyways, there are myriad things that you can do during Spring Break, but for some apparent reason college students tend to like the lack of clothes the best (wonder why that is?). There are always exceptions to the rule, but with Girls Gone Wild grossing millions of millions every year, it seems like there is no shortage of girls eager to take it off.

Many of you may be wondering, how come it always is the girls that are taking it off while the guys are not? We’ll be honest, there are undoubtedly far more naked males than females at these parties, but the male form just doesn’t cut it as beautifully as the female form. And besides, how many girls do you think would actually pay to see a bunch of naked guys dance around when they could just do it for free at a frat party? Remember my words concerning fellow college students when you head off to Spring Break: Never! So before you fine that X factor do it for free at a frat party. Remind your fellow campus members that every year, it seems like they are almost always exceptions to the
WHATS THE WORST PAPT ABOUT PACIFIC'S BASKETBALL GAMES THESE DAYS?

HOW ABOUT WHEN YOU GET THERE EARLY TO TAKE ONE OF THE BEST SEATS IN THE HOUSE...

...ONLY TO BE BLOCKED BY A WALL OF ORANGE ARMY GEOCKS!

So Tigers!

...and all the time you spend getting there early goes to waste.

Horoscopes

By Sally Nichols

Galaxy Guru

ARIES

You are guaranteed to have a fabulous week! Your supervisor will let you know what wonderful work you are doing and hint at the opportunity to move up one the ladder! Stay productive and things will be grand!

TAURUS

Be careful where you keep your money. Fraud is becoming more prevalent and we all know that college kids don't know that much to begin with. Your belongings are important, keep a close eye on them!

GEMINI

Everyone loves a good night of partying, but giving your number out to random guys is NOT always a good idea. We all want to find someone out there that will make us feel wanted, but being random is not the way. Give your number out sparingly!

LEO

Don't be such a clean freak! I'm sure that your roommate has different tendencies than you when it comes to being Mr. or Mrs. Clean, but be patient! Be open with one another, and try to respect the space that the two of you must share. Life is always much easier when you work things out!

CAPRICORN

All of our families can get to us every once in a while, but try to remain calm and let them know you care and think about them often. We all fight, have arguments, let our feelings get the best of us. Your family will always be there for you but your friends might not. Spend a little extra time and energy on your loved ones this week!

AQUARIUS

Be careful what you ask for, sometimes it just might come true. There is an action that will take place in the next two days of your life that will make you question what you really want and what you really need. Be careful.

VIRGO

Ever play the LOTTO? This may be your lucky week! The numbers are rolling in, and all help you pay for your trip Spring Break trip! Take that last minute upgrade for your flight and go First Class instead of Coach!

SCORPIO

Are sports problems interfering with your social life? Try taking a bowling class through Pacific or a Tai Kwon Do class! Doing things with your friends is a great way to relieve stress and a great way to learn something new. Have fun!

LIBRA

Life is full of unexpected turns, be prepared for plans to take turns for the worst. You will be able to fix this by keeping all your senses attune to your surroundings. These turns can be good if handled the right way. Good luck!
The Tigers baseball team went 1-2 by barely earning win on Saturday in thirteen innings.

In Fridays loss, the Dons came out strong and scored two runs in the first inning, the second gained off of a throwing error by senior Andy Willick. In the bottom half of the second with two on base and primed to score, Dons starting pitcher Kevin Rose had back-to-back strike outs and prevented senior Aaron Harper and freshman Mark McLaughlin from reaching home.

Junior Jordan Seiber gave the Tigers a boost in the 6th inning by scoring the first and only run of the game, and earning Seiber his seventh RBI of the season. Yet, the Tigers failed to come back, losing 3-1.

Saturday, the Dons came out strong, scoring first, with one run the fourth as well as the fifth innings.

The Dons would not hold this lead for long, as the Tigers answered with two runs in the fifth. With two runners on base and two outs, junior Andy Willick, with his first hit of the season, scored Junior Brandon Gottier.

Following Gottier's run, senior Adam Ringers single scored freshman Isaiah Lilly, the tying run.

The relief pitchers did not disappoint, with junior Gregg Reynolds gave the Tigers their win on the mound, his first of the season.

Sunday would not be as successful, though as the Tigers fell to the Dons. USF pulled ahead in the first inning with two runs. Yet again, Seiber would help the Tigers advance with a two-run double after the left field wall, tying the game. Junior Jesse Kovacs hit a single to the right to bring Seiber home and give the Tigers a momentum lead. Over the next four innings, however, the Dons pulled away with five runs, embarking on a 7-2 lead. Yet, the Tigers were not to be defeated easily. Lilly and junior Adam Ringer helped the Tigers with back-to-back singles, allowing fresh Mark McLaughlin and senior Octavio Amezquita plate the two respective.

With the game at 8-6, Kovacs hit the ball into centerfield to bring Mark McLaughlin home and the game to 7-5.

Though the Tigers seemed primed for a comeback, would fail in the end, the 8-6 loss.

With this series loss, the Tigers move to 9-6 on the season, while the 7-9 Dons move on with some confidence.

Women's basketball ends season strong

By Rob Schuh
Staff Writer

The women's basketball team ended its season last week with two wins on the road. Last Thursday the Tigers beat Cal State Fullerton and UC Riverside, bringing their overall record to 14-13 and 13-5 in Big West.

Against Fullerton, senior Gillian d'Hondt scored the game high for Pacific netting 21 points. Senior Corinne Wong earned a double-double with 10 points and 11 assists.

By halftime the Tigers had a lead and senior Nancy Dinges took over the Titans. Twenty-five points came from the combination of d'Hondt and Dinges led the team in scoring with 15 points, d'Hondt had 12 points and finally senior Andy Nederostek had 11 points round it off.

Coming off of the wins, the Tigers head to Big West Conference Tournament in Anaheim Monday 11-13.

Applications are now available for 2004---2005:

Business Manager
Editor-in-Chief
Managing Editor
News Editors
Perspectives Editors
Lifestyles Editors
Sports Editors

Applications are available at the Pacifican and are due March 25
For more information, call (209) 946-2115

Home Games of the week:

Today
Men's volleyball vs. UC Santa Cruz at 7 p.m.

Friday
Men's volleyball three game scrimmage vs. Utah at 7 p.m.
Women's tennis @ Cal Poly

Saturday
Men's tennis @ San Diego State
Women's water polo @ San Diego State
If It Handles Like A Performance Car, That's Because It Is.

Daytona, Watkins Glen, Road America. These are just a few of the racetracks the Team Lexus IS has performed on. And won. Against competitors such as BMW, Porsche and Audi. But what's more intriguing for us nonprofessional drivers is that the

THE LEXUS IS
Is performs as well on the street as it does on the track. With its power-assisted rack-and-pinion steering, finely balanced weight distribution and sport-tuned suspension, you get the maximum in precision handling and cornering. So even driving down Fifth and Elm, you'll feel like you're behind the wheel of a race car. You may want to leave off the decals and the helmet. Ask your Lexus dealer about our lease or low APR financing.

THE IS E-SHIFT LEASE
OPTION 1:
$329 per mo. 42 mos.*
$3,429 due at signing
On approved credit Excludes applicable taxes, fees and dealer charges. No security deposit required. Amount due at signing is higher in NY and RI.

THE IS E-SHIFT LEASE
OPTION 2:
$399 per mo. 45 mos.*
$3,999 due at signing
On approved credit Excludes applicable taxes, fees and dealer charges. No security deposit required. Amount due at signing is higher in NY and RI.

See your local Lexus dealer about our special College Graduate Finance Plan.

LEXUS OF ROSEVILLE
300 Automall Drive, Roseville
(916) 783-9111

LEXUS OF SACRAMENTO
2500 Fulton Avenue, Sacramento
(916) 485-3987

VALLEY LEXUS
4320 McHenry Avenue, Modesto
(209) 575-3987

LEXUS.COM

"Only a limited number of customers will qualify for the advertised terms. See your participating Lexus dealer for complete lease program qualifications and eligibility. Not all graduates will qualify. 2004 IS 300 2-dr with 5-speed alloy wheels, Leather/Alcantara trim, leather hedge, trunk mat, wheel locks, rear spoiler and cargo net, plus delivery, processing and handling fee. Optional equipment may vary by region. Your month payment may vary depending on price, options, excess wear and tear. You also pay $0.20 per mile over 12,000 miles per year. $329 Lease Program Details: $4,079.00 due at signing for vehicles garaged in NY and RI. Your 42 monthly payments will total $16,524.50, plus taxes and fees. Your lease-end purchase option will be 41b.8M.54.50. plus taxes and fees. $399 Lease Program Details: $1,049.00 due at signing for vehicles garaged in NY and RI. Your 45 monthly payments will total $17,955.00. Your lease-end purchase option will be 31b.8M.54.50. plus taxes and fees. Not available in HI. Must take delivery by 3/31/04. Lexus reminds you to wear seatbelts, secure children in rear seat, obey traffic laws and drive responsibly. ©2003 Lexus.
Sports Briefs

Women's Tennis

The Lady Tigers won their sixth game in a row, earning a 5-2 non-conference dual match victory over Saint Mary's College last weekend, improving to a 6-2 on the season.

Women's Volleyball

Pacific men's volleyball team's record fell to 4-15 after they lost to #9 UC Irvine, 3-1. Game scores for the match were: 20-30, 30-19, 30-12, and 30-20.

Men's Basketball

Congratulations to Pacific senior guard Miah Davis who was named Big West Conference Player of the Year and head coach Bob Thomason was named Big West Conference Coach of the year.

Davis and sophomore Christian Maraker were both named to the All-Big West Conference First Team, while juniors David Doubley and Tyler Newton both earned All-Big West Conference Honorable Mention honors.

Men's Baseball

Tiger baseball dropped to a 9-6 on the season after losing to USF last weekend, 8-6.

The Pacifican

Women's Swimming

Seniors Robin Errecart, Shannon Catalano, Sara Marshall, and Kris Willey and junior Lyndsay McNamie will make up Pacific's participants at the NCAA Championships on March 18-20 at Texas A&M.

These five women will make up Pacific's 200 medley relay team, the 400 medley relay, 200 free relay, 400 free relay, and the 800 free relay.

Additionally, Errecart will swim the 500 free, 200 free, and 100 free. Catalano will be in the 100 fly, 200 fly, and 50 free. Marshall will swim in the 100 back, 200 back, and 100 fly. McNamie will swim the 50 free, 100 free, and 200 free, while Wiley will swim the 200 IM.

Miah Does It Again

Senior Miah Davis was named Big West Conference Player of the Year last Monday.

Summer Sessions 2004

Fulfill a GE Requirement...ON-LINE!

Courses offered in Summer I:

- Shakespeare in Love & Online 4 units GE II-A
- Human Sexuality 4 units GE II-A

For a complete listing of traditional and on-line courses available, pick up a Summer Sessions '04 catalog at the Registrar's Office, the Burns Tower Lobby, or download a catalog online at www.pacific.edu/cpce

Athlete of the Week

Name: Lennart Maack
Year: Sophomore
Sport: Tennis

Maack earned both doubles (8-1) and singles (6-0, 6-1) wins in Pacific's match against Saint Mary's on March 6. This sophomore from Doverden, Germany was an All-Big West Conference First Team honoree in both singles and doubles in his first semester at Pacific.