YOUTH IS A STATE OF MIND

Youth is not a time of life—it's a state of mind. It is a temper of the will, a quality of the imagination, a vigor of the emotions, a predominance of courage over timidity, of the appetite for adventure over love of ease.

Nobody grows old by merely living a number of years. People grow old only by deserting their ideals. Years wrinkle the skin, but to give up enthusiasm wrinkles the soul.

Worry, doubt, self-distrust, fear and despair . . . these are the long, long years that bow the head and turn the growing spirit back to dust.

Whether 70 or 16, there is in every being's heart the love of wonder, the sweet amazement at the stars and the star-like things and thoughts, the undaunted challenge of events, the unfailing childlike appetite for what next, and the job and the game of life.

You are as young as your faith, as old as your doubt; as young as your self-confidence, as old as you fear; as young as your hope; as old as your despair.

So long as your heart receives messages of beauty, cheer, courage, grandeur and power from the earth, from man and from the Infinite, so long are you young.

When the wires are all down and all the central place of your heart is covered with the snows of pessimism and the ice of cynicism, then you are grown old indeed, and may God have mercy on your soul.

SCOUTING REPORT

IMPROVING TIGERS GO FOR SECOND STRAIGHT AGAINST BULLDOGS

The tangible benefits of a win tonight are few for the Fresno State Bulldogs. Coach Jim Sweeney's squad, 1-5 on the season and in the throes of a miserable five-game losing streak, is already 0-2 in PCAA play and virtually eliminated from the race to the inaugural California Bowl.

But when UOP and Fresno State get together, there doesn't seem to have to be any motivating factors. Pride will do—that and the natural rivalry that seems to exist between these two schools that inhabit opposite ends of the San Joaquin Valley. Despite his opponent's lackluster record, Pacific head Coach Bob Toledo expects the Bulldogs to be a stern test for his improving young team.

"Fresno State is really a good football team," said Toledo. "They've got some outstanding skilled people, a good quarterback and their defense plays hard."

"They've moved the ball against everybody they've played and when they put it all together are capable of beating somebody good—like they did against Oregon." The Oregon game, a 23-16 shocker, was the high water mark of the season for the Bulldogs—unfortunately, it was also their first outing.

The next week, FSU blew a big lead and lost, 31-28, at Oregon State, followed that with another close loss at Montana State, and then San Jose State supplied the coup de grace, a 65-33 romp, in Fresno. It was the first of three consecutive home losses for Sweeney's club. In contrast, Toledo's Tigers have seemingly matured, particularly during the last three weeks.

The transformation started at Washington State, where UOP had its finest offensive output of the season despite being shutout, 31-0. The following week, it was a heart-breaking, 17-14, home loss to Utah State—a game that saw UOP lead 14-0 at the half, outplay the Aggies throughout, but still fall. Then, the Tigers' perseverance was finally rewarded, in a 17-10 conquest of defending PCAA champ Long Beach State last Saturday. Toledo hopes the trend continues.

"We're young and I really believe we're getting better every week," said Toledo, whose team recorded season highs in points, passing yardage and total offense against Long Beach. "We had some guys make some big plays against Long Beach and that's what you have to do every game if you expect to score points and win."

Senior Harley Miller will be back at the controls of the UOP offense tonight.

Last year, UOP did little of either against Fresno State and came away battered and beaten, 27-3. During the course of the evening at Ratcliffe Stadium, the Tigers gained barely over 100 yards of total offense and lost the ball seven of the 11 times they fumbled it. The reminder of that game, "the worst since I've been here," according to Toledo, should provide plenty of incentive for UOP.

For the second week in a row, the Tigers will be led on offense by senior Harley Miller. Miller had a successful 1981 debut in the starting role against Long Beach, finding the mark on 22 of his 40 passes for 295 yards and two touchdowns. He also punted for a 43.5 yard average.

Fullback Gary Blackwell continues to be UOP's most consistent ground threat. He churned for a season high 87 yards against the 49ers. Tight ends Tony Camp and Paul Schreiner now have 24 receptions between them, including the latter's 55-yard TD play Saturday. Heady freshman Kurt Heinrich caught six passes against the Beach, the last for a 17-yard score that iced the game.

Defensively, linebackers Kirk Harmon and Mike Merriweather have continued to shine, along with nose guard George Dunlap. Free safety Kevin Greene was injured against Washington State, but senior Stan Shibata, the former starter there, has come on strong. He intercepted three passes against Long Beach and now has 15 in his UOP career.

Fresno State's offense, now relying more on the passes, is directed by junior Jeff Tedford, who like his UOP counterpart Miller, took over the starter's job at midseason. Tedford had the second-best game in Bulldog history, passing for 342 yards against Southern Illinois in a 24-18 loss.

His favorite targets are wide receivers Henry Ellard and Tony Woodruff. Both have caught 70-yard plus TD passes this year. The ground game is in the hands of tailback Steve Woods who missed the SIU game with a pulled hamstring, and fullback Ted Torosian, FSU's No. 3 all-time rusher.

On defense, Sweeney can call on defensive backs Steve Cordle and Tim Washington. Cordle tops the 'Dogs with four interceptions and Washington is the brother of Anthony Washington, a second round pick by the Pittsburgh Steelers in last spring's NFL draft.

THE SPANOS SPORTS QUIZ

Here's a chance to test your knowlege of UOP football, and have a little fun, too. All material is taken from the 1980 UOP Press Guide.

1. What player on the current UOP roster is ranked No. 9 on the Tigers' all-time pass receiving list?
2. What four states have schools in the Mid-American Conference, whose champion will play the PCAA champ in the California Bowl this December.?
3. Who was the only player in the 1970s to be named UOP's Defensive Player of the Year twice?
4. What are the only two teams in the current PCAA lineup that have never won a conference football title?

COACHING STAFF

THE HEAD COACH

In just two short years, Bob Toledo has brought UOP football prominently back into the minds of the Stockton community. With an exciting, high-powered passing offense (since his arrival, only one Division I team has thrown the ball more than UOP), some stunning upset victories and a youth-oriented squad that holds a very real promise for the future, Toledo is well on the way to his goal of bringing the Tigers their first-ever Pacific Coast Athletic Association title.

Although building with youth and a brutal schedule have made success on the field relative, Toledo has still managed to produce some of the brightest memories in recent UOP football history.

In 1979, his first year, the energetic, young coach was highly responsible for the more than 19,000 fans that poured into Pacific Memorial Stadium each game. That figure marked the largest average attendance at UOP in more than 20 years.

Toledo's club also pulled a shocker on the field, clobbering Iowa State, 24-7, to give UOP its first-ever win over a Big Eight school. Then, last fall, the youthful Tigers upended Washington State, 24-22, UOP's first win over the Pac-10 since 1969.

All of which brings Toledo to the next hurdle—winning the PCAA. And over the years, winning is something that Toledo has become very familiar with. He has been a winner at all levels and every phase of the game.

In all of his time as a player, assistant coach and head coach, Toledo has experienced just two losing seasons.

One of the nation's youngest head coaches, the 35-year-old Toledo spent three years as the secondary coach at USC prior to accepting the UOP post. His Trojan defensive backs picked off 56 passes in three seasons, including

BOB TOLEDO

28 in 1976 to lead the nation. Southern Cal won two Pac-10 titles, two Rose Bowls, a Bluebonnet Bowl and the national championship in 1978.

Before his stint at USC, Toledo spent three seasons at UC Riverside, the final two as head coach. The Highlanders were 15-6

An Update

COLLEGE FOOTBALL VS. THE PROS

by John Underwood,
SPORTS ILLUSTRATED

On a recent fall evening, while up to my elbows in a platter of stone crabs at a New York restaurant that specializes in high prices, I was surprised to learn that one of my dinner companions had given up pro football. That is to say, he had given up his most tangible link to the pro game. He had that very day, he said, sold the remainder of his season tickets to what he called "a younger fan."

He said an "epidemic of ennui" (his exact words) had spread through the group he sat with at the stadium—presumably jaded middle-agers—which led to a growing suspicion that Sunday afternoons might be more excitingly spent on, say, an incoming tide. Or nearer one.

He said he was the first to actually make the break, and that he felt strangely relieved, like a man giving up on a sweet but deteriorating romance.

His mood was lost, however, on the majority of us at the table, caught up as we were in the mechanics of a conspicuous consumption. The main course was under such a siege—shells and debris everywhere—that a passerby might easily have wondered whether the crabs were being attacked or were attacking. As a result, my friend was given only a polite commiseration ("Oh? Too bad . . . With six games to go, too . . . Hope you got full price.").

For me, however, his announcement amounted to a revelation.

I put aside the crab I had just disassembled and looked at him. He is a balding insurance executive with an enviable athletic background, and is a classic pro

ABOUT THE AUTHOR: A Sports Illustrated writer for the last 18 years, John Underwood's name is also recognized for his excellent books on sports. He has written My Turn At Bat, a Ted Williams biography—a best seller—Bear, the story of Alabama's legendary coach Paul "Bear" Bryant, and The Death of An American Game (The Crisis in Football), published last year.

football zany. On game days he wears the appropriate colored hats and numbered jerseys; he bets unwisely but profusely, and he actually subscribes to those giddy football weeklies. Selling his season tickets was tantamount to selling his birthright.

My own "impenetrable preference" for the college game (his words again) had always confounded him. When properly oiled, we could, and often did, debate the subject passionately. At those times, my arguments were spiked with logic and strong historical precedents, and were thus lost on him, a man who makes his living convincing others to burden their lives with high premiums so that their heirs will profit by their deaths. This, of course, made his obsession for the professionals that much more challenging.

Now he had apparently experienced a change of heart, with no help from me. Naturally, I wanted to know why.

"What happened?" I said.

"What?" he said, looking up from the anarchy on his plate. He had resumed his dinner offensive with a shell-cracker and was wielding it awkwardly.

"I thought you and pro football were wed forever. What made you see the light?"

"Don't start that stuff again," he said.

"What stuff?"

"That business about how much more 'meaningful' college football is. All that smaltz and rah-rah stuff you run on with."

"I didn't know you'd been paying attention."

"I know the whole spiel, backwards and forwards. Every argument Sports Illustrated ever let you peddle. I can hear you, in my sleep, droning away. How 'The College Game is Best.' How football 'started with the colleges.' How much you love the 'history' of it. The Poes of Princeton and The Gipper and the Seven Blocks of Concrete, running around in canvas pants and parting their hair in the middle to cushion the blows."

"Granite," I said.

"What?"

"Blocks of Granite, not concrete."

"Same thing. And how you just adore all those sock-o nicknames. The 'Saltine Warriors!' The 'Praying Colonels!' The 'Hokies,' for crying out loud. I'll bet not even a Hokie himself could tell you what that is."

He bore down with his cracking tool. The shell exploded and shrapnel flew around the table. Absently, he brushed a piece from his sleeve.

"I know you think it's a social and cultural uplift when college teams go out to play. I know you think it's terrific that the community gets involved with a college team. That the players are there because they want to play for Indiana or Penn State or the LSU Tigers, not because they got drafted into it, or are held in place by the money. I know you think nothing in this world could ever replace Blanchard and Lujack in the hearts of the brave old Army team, and that Bear Bryant is smarter than any seven pro coaches."

"Davis," I said.

"What?"

"Blanchard and Davis. Lujack played for Notre Dame."

"Same thing. I grant you, all that may be true. I know for one if I wasn't in the 50 percent bracket I damn well couldn't afford tickets to the pro games anymore, and I'm reasonably certain the money I give 'em isn't going to support the local library. As it is, the pros are gradually pricing themselves out of the market for large segments of the society that used to be their principal support."

He pointed the exposed crab claw at me and waved it like a scepter.

"Neither do I have to be reminded, especially by you, that the average pro player has no allegiance whatsoever to the 'home town fan.' That if given their druthers, the entire roster of the Philadelphia Eagles would probably prefer to be in San Francisco. But I accept 'em for what they are. Hired help. Talented mercenaries. It doesn't bother me because it's entertainment I'm after, not a loyalty oath. When I go see Al Pacino act, I don't need to believe he is living in my neighborhood to appreciate his ability."

"So what bothers you?"

He sighed and put down his crab claw, still mostly intact.

"The blandness," he said. "The vain repetition. Cookie-cutter offenses that look the same, team to team, week to week. Dull City. Not even Cossell can save 'em on Monday nights. I usually nod off before halftime. I'm beginning to think the pros have forgotten how dynamic football can be. Or should be."

"Well, you came to the right man," I said. "I know just the place you can go to—"

He stopped me with an upraised hand, and glanced around furtively.

"I already went," he said, lowering his voice. "I saw _____ play last week."

"The college team?"

"Not so loud. Yeah. And you know something? I stayed to the bitter end, something I haven't done in years. I got more fun out of that game than I—Why are you smirking?"

"I'm sorry. I just love death-bed conversions. What turned you on? The cheerleaders actually leading cheers instead of just providing them? That's what one SI writer calls the cheerleaders at the pro games: 'cheer providers.' Pro fans never cheer with the cheerleaders. They just watch 'em with lust-filled eyes."

"You're not listening. Forget the cheerleaders. Forget all the accessories. The game itself was more fun, don't you see? More—well, like you used to say, more diversified. It was filled with diversity. Best of all, it had running. Long, breath-taking runs, one of 'em for 80 yards. Real running attacks, not just off-tackle plays to kill time between passes. One team was using some kind of triple option, something we never see on a Sunday, and half the time I couldn't follow the ball. I missed two touchdowns completely."

He gave me a knowing look.

"I think I may be on to something. I think you oughta check it out."

"What you're on to," I said, "is the miracle of sight. It usually happens when you open your eyes."

"I'm serious. You used to say that the pros had million-dollar runningbacks and ten-cent running attacks. I think it's gotten that way again. I think you oughta update the argument. See if it still holds water. What's a good conviction if you don't keep it current?"

I started to tell him that although I may have backslid a little, I knew instinctively that in any statistical comparison with college offenses, the pro game would invariably suffer. That college teams always run more plays, average more yards, score more touchdowns. But I also knew he was right. I had been flying on instruments in recent years, avoiding a hard look at the terrain. At that precise moment, however, I was taken with the urge to relieve him of the crab he had unsheathed, my own supply being exhausted. I let him go on without interruption, more or less urging me to "get to work on it." My move on his plate escaped notice and I ate while he talked.

Finally I said I would, indeed, "work on it."

And I did, the very next week. And he was right.

The evidence was easy to find; I made a comparison of the daily statistics and standings that glut the metropolitan sports pages these days. It was, I felt, conclusive. At least for a convinced man.

At that point in the season, the pros had played nine games. On a "good day" of running the football, an offense—pro or college—should produce at least 200 yards. Top college running teams such as Nebraska, Oklahoma and Alabama would consider 200 a poverty-level figure, but it is a reasonable cut-off point. That weekend (October 17-20), only one of the 28 NFL teams rushed for 200 yards. Twelve did not even make 100 yards.

By contrast, there were so many college teams over 200 that I didn't bother to count them. Accentuating the difference, Oklahoma that Saturday had rushed for 469 yards. A compilation of the season's statistics showed that not one NFL team was averaging 200 yards a game rushing. You had to go down more than 30 places on the list of college leaders to find a Division I team that was not rushing for at least that.

Moreover, the great NFL backs who as undergraduates had scorched the earth with their skill in an open field had produced only a handful of long runs. Many of them—Tony Dorsett, Lynn Cain, Delvin Williams, Chuck Muncie, Joe Washington, et. al.—had not made a run of more than 20 yards. On the previous weekend, Oklahoma's David Overstreet came close to averaging 20 a carry as he ran for 258 yards. His total exceeded the output of Dorsett, Williams, Franco Harris, Charles White and Ricky Bell combined.

As best I could determine, the excuse pro apologists were making for such disparities was that the NFL had been "concentrating" on the forward pass (even to the point of changing some rules to make passing easier) and in "opening up" their game they had to sacrifice somewhere. The size of the "opening," however, would seem to depend on the perspective. Not one NFL team was within 100 yards of the total offense leader of the colleges—Nebraska's 515 yards a game. More than 20 college teams were averaging at least 400 yards a game in total offense. Only one NFL team was doing that well.

It was clear, however, that the pros were still supreme in killing time—dragging in and out of huddles, standing around hoping for commercial breaks, etc. Ordinarily, increased passing (which is what the pros were obviously doing) will mean more plays for the fans' money because incompletions stop the clock. But even though they were throwing the ball less, the colleges were averaging up to 15 percent more plays per contest than the pros. And, as it developed, by the end of the 1980 season the average college game produced a record 303.7 yards passing (counting both teams). In total yardage, the colleges' average of 660.3 per game was the second highest in NCAA history.

Left to be answered, then, was "why"—why do the colleges run the ball so much better? Or at least so much more productively? If my friend was hoping for a complex answer, he wasn't going to get it from me. The answer was and is the same as always. The answer is coaching.

College teams run better because college coaches teach them better. Ever alert for new and improved ways to move the ball, college coaches adjust to the talent and to the times. The most successful now run from three- and four-back offenses: the wishbone, the veer, the power- and option-I, etc. Some of the more inventive combine elements of them all.

The pros, on the other hand, hire the talent to fit their specific needs, cling to the "pro set" and its one- and two-back rushing capabilities. (Pro quarterbacks and flankers are not considered "backs" in this sense because they don't run the ball). Whether the backs are split or in an I, the pro set is not as effective as, say, the veer because with only two running

Jackie Robinson

Four-Sport Letterman

by Mal Florence, Los Angeles TIMES

The UCLA baseball team plays on a new facility near campus known as Jackie Robinson Stadium. It is only fitting that the stadium is named after one of the school's most famous alums and a member of baseball's Hall of Fame.

Every black athlete is aware of the legacy that Robinson left. He was the first to break the color barrier in major league baseball with the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1947, opening the door for others of his race to perform in professional sports.

Robinson, who died in 1972, is remembered as a spokesman for civil rights and as a skilled baseball player who became the National League's Rookie of the Year at the age of 28 and, in 1949, the league's Most Valuable Player.

Robinson was and still is UCLA's only four-sport letterman. But the ironic thing is that baseball was his worst sport in college.

In the classic sense of the word, Robinson is probably America's greatest all-around athlete. Certainly, his accomplishments at UCLA stand alone in intercollegiate athletics.

Robinson came to UCLA from Pasadena Junior College (more about his exploits there later) in the fall of 1939 and teamed with the famed Kenny Washington to provide the Bruins with their first undefeated football season—although the team had four ties—including a scoreless deadlock with crosstown rival USC.

Robinson was an exciting broken field runner with his quick stops and starts (he used this skill to his advantage as a feared baserunner with the Dodgers) and excelled not only from scrimmage but as a punt return specialist and pass receiver.

A sampling of what he did in 1939:

—Against Oregon he caught a pass from Washington to set up a touchdown and later ran 82 yards to score a 16-6 win.

—He kicked the game-tying (14-14) extra point against Stanford after running 50 yards with an intercepted pass to position UCLA for its last touchdown.

—He scored on a 25-yard pass from Washington and ran 35 yards for a touchdown as UCLA beat Washington State, 24-7.

USC coach Howard Jones was so concerned about Robinson's breakaway ability that he assigned one of his players to follow Robinson on every play. So UCLA used Robinson as a decoy in the 0-0 tie before 103,000 fans at the Coliseum.

Robinson averaged an astounding 12.24 yards per carry with his inimitable pigeon-toed gait during the 1939 season and also averaged 20 yards on 14 punt returns.

WE ARE DRIVEN

THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE DEFENSIVE LINE

by Bob Hammel, Bloomington HERALD-TELEPHONE

If Andy Griffith ever cuts a sequel to his 1950s side-splitter, "What It Was Was Football," he might consider the topic, "What It Was Was a Five-Man Line."

Pick your man, any man, coast-to-coast, ask him what defense his team plays, and the odds are enormous against his saying anything but "the basic 50" or "50-slant."

If you're interested enough to ask, you know the 5 in the 50 means it all starts with a five-man line.

Now, pick a play, any play, in the next game you watch and count the number of men on what you would presume to be the defensive line. Do not, repeat not, be surprised if you come up with a number other than five.

What it is is modern math, football style.

For an explanation of what is really going on out there, we have, standing in for Will Durant, historian, one of today's most knowledgeable college football coaches.

"The alignment of the three, the four and the five, for just about everybody, is identical," he said.

"The three can develop into the four, depending on how many of the ends—or outside linebackers, whatever you want to call them—come in."

Of course you understand that. Play that one again in slow motion, coach.

"There are five men across the front," he said.

"If you send (rush) four, it's a four (-man line). If you send three, it's a three and the other two drop off for other responsibilities. If you send them all, it's a five."

There was a time when coaches played it honest. It's been a while, but

Defensive Line

The four-man line features two tackles and two ends with three linebackers close behind.

there once were two ends, two tackles, two guards and a center shoulder to shoulder across the offensive line, with a quarterback behind the center flanked by two halfbacks right behind him. And across from them was a 6-2-3.

It was the old "wide tackle 6"—General Robert Neyland's defense at Tennessee.

There was a six-man front: two guards, two tackles and two ends.

That was good enough for the 1930s and the early days of the T-formation in the '40s. Then the split-T came along, combining some of the virtues of a single-wing blocking with T-formation deception, and the pressure was on the defenses to find some new answers.

The "Oklahoma 50" was the answer, three decades ago. Bud Wilkinson was the head coach and Gomer Jones was the defensive wizard who concocted the defense that is the basis for virtually all defensive planning on the college and pro levels today.

Wilkinson and Jones changed the 6-2-3 to the 5-2.

"The ends became more critical. Now they had more than one thing to do. To stop the option, they had to be able to come up or cover the flat," our guide to football defenses explained.

The next move from the offense was the Houston veer or Texas wishbone. That was designed to beat the Oklahoma defense.

"And the best answer to that was the 50-slant that started at Arkansas (under coach Frank Broyles). They took their five-man defense and slanted it one way or the other away from their 'monster.'"

The monster was the new man on the scene. He's a strong safety, capable of playing linebacker or defensive back, as the situation requires.

"Basically, what the Arkansas defense did was give you an eight-man front to go against the veer or wishbone. That's a variation of bringing a cornerback up to linebacker."

Principally, that's where the game is today.

"The pros have gone almost exclusively to a three-man front because of the passing game," the coach said. "They don't have to be prepared to stop the option play and they never will have to be, because they have too much time tied up in their quarterbacks."

"But in college, just about everybody plays some variation of the 50."

Odd or even, defenses, three-man or five-man rush, the game's basics haven't changed for the 30, 40 or 50 years spanned by the Tennessee and Oklahoma epochs.

"When you get right down to it," our expert said, "the team that can run the football usually wins. That's true in our game; it's true in the pros; it's always been true."

"But right now, I would say the passing game is ahead because so many teams are going to the eight-man front."

"It swings all the time, back and forth between the offense and the defense. As a coach, you try to stay one phase ahead of it."

"In the future, I think we're going to see more and more multiple defenses—teams that are able to play all the different defenses and disguise them right up to the last moment."

"That puts even more pressure on the quarterback, because he has to be able to read the defenses on his way back to pass. To an extent in college football, what we do is determined by what the high schools are doing; what kind of quarterbacks are coming out, for example. But right now, the premium in looking for quarterbacks, I believe, is passer first, runner second. And that's changed a little in the last few years."

"There's one thing that hasn't changed and never will. If your players are a lot better than anyone else's, you can play anything you want to."

"We all do a lot with X's and O's, but 90 percent of the time, the game is won by the guy with the best players."

The 5-2 defense is the basis for virtually all defensive planning on the college level today.

backs it is difficult to get the counters and misdirection plays and inside and outside reverses that confuse a defense and keep it off balance.

The crux of the matter, of course, is that the pros don't run their quarterback. Options and bootlegs are anathema to pro coaches fearful of getting their quarterbacks hurt. College coaches, on the other hand, have made the option an art form. It is the core of the veer and wishbone and their various antecedents, including the spectacular "wingbone" fashioned by Emory Bellard at Mississippi State. The option is the toughest play in football to defend against, and is the most deceptive.

Pro running attacks, missing many of these necessary ingredients, are practically bereft of deception. Pro plays can be followed from anywhere in the stadium, up to (and some college coaches say including) the concession stands. Handoffs are simple and to the point; pitchouts tend to look ponderous. When a pro team runs a reverse, it risks a terrible embarrassment.

There is another reason for this disparity that seldom gets mentioned but which Bud Wilkinson found to be true during his somewhat abortive career as coach of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Wilkinson's national championship Oklahoma teams of the 1950s and '60s featured running attacks that thrived on imaginative and spirited blocking schemes. At St. Louis, coming out of retirement for a last hurrah, Wilkinson found what he suspected to be true: that pro linemen don't block as well for the run. With so much of their game oriented to the pass, their techniques suffer. They spend the majority of their time—at practice, in games—"rubbing bellies" to fend off the pass rush. Firing out and making the more aggressive (and more critical) run blocks becomes a lesser priority.

Limited though it may have been, my research convinced me that my prejudices were justified. The colleges clearly were still ahead of the game. At our next meeting, in Miami, I passed my findings on to my friend the insurance executive.

I rattled off the evidence confirming his suspicions, and thanked him for helping me get back into fighting trim. Once into the discourse, however, I found I couldn't resist adding a few filips. One factor he may have overlooked as his interest in the pro game atrophied, I said, was that he probably had wearied of seeing the same old faces, year after year. Did he realize, I asked, that there were always fresh faces to enliven the college game—players like Herschel Walker, teams like Florida State, coming from nowhere to vie for attention? Did he realize that Florida State was a girls' school until 1947?

"No, I didn't," my friend said in a far-away voice.

It was then that I noticed the glazed look in his eyes. The more I tried to reinforce the point, the less interested he seemed. Eventually, I got the picture. That Sunday his favorite pro team had knocked off the Steelers. He had pocketed a big bet, and although still hopelessly behind for the year, it had had a soothing effect. His jaw muscles were slack, his pupils dilated. He was, I realized, wearing a necktie knitted in the gaudy colors of his pro team.

"All this is very interesting, I'm sure," he said, and then took me by the elbow. "But hey, listen. The company's got a dynamite new policy I've been meaning to tell you about. For pennies a day, at your death we pay your son Jim's full tuition for four years at the Sorbonne. Or, for a lower premium, and if he's so inclined, a two-year course in crepes, fondue and foi gras at the Cordon Bleu in Paris."

"John," I said.

"What?"

"My son's name is John, not Jim."

"Same thing. How about it?"

Editor's Note: In 1974 John Underwood wrote a story for Touchdown Illustrated on the college game as compared with pro football. In this article he has presented an updated discussion of the subject.

He then used his stop-and-go speed to his advantage in basketball, becoming the leading scorer, 148 points, 12.4 average, in the Pacific Coast Conference's Southern Division.

Only in baseball did he lapse, prompting this trivia question years later: "What college player failed to hit .200 and later became the National League's Most Valuable Player?"

Although Robinson's batting average wasn't indicative of his ability in 1940, Reichle, UCLA's coach at the time, says: "I still feel Jackie had no equal. In my book, he is the greatest all-around athlete of all time. He had the quickest reactions of any athlete I ever saw—before, during or since."

Robinson was so consumed with baseball that he didn't have much time for track and field. But he competed in two meaningful meets, winning the PCC and NCAA long jump titles with leaps of 25 feet and 24-10 $\frac{1}{4}$.

The Bruins had Robinson and little else in football in 1940, when they lost 9 of 10 games. Still, Jackie was almost a one-man team. His biggest day came in UCLA's only win over Washington State (34-26) when he passed for one touchdown, ran 60 yards for another and, with the game on the line, reversed his field on a 75-yard touchdown run.

Robinson was a marked man but he still returned 19 punts for 399 yards for an impressive 21-yard average.

He dropped out of school in the spring of 1941, but not before he had one final fling in basketball, leading the PCC Southern Division in scoring again with 133 points, an 11.1 average.

Jack Roosevelt (named after Teddy, not Franklin) Robinson was born in Cairo, Ga. in 1919, but grew up in an impoverished area of generally wealthy and society-conscious Pasadena, with his mother, three brothers and a sister. He never knew his father.

Robinson, who would later speak out on civil rights and be tested and taunted by fans and players as the first black to play in the major leagues, was subjected to the indignities of being black in the mid-30s.

He could swim in the municipal plunge only on Tuesdays (that was the day they changed the water), could go to the YMCA only one day a week and had to watch the Saturday movie matinees from segregated balconies.

But Robinson, a quiet young man on the outside (who sometimes seethed on the inside) got his release in athletics. His older brother, Mack, finished second to Jesse Owens in the 1936 Olympic 200 meters, but Jackie would become even more famous than Mack.

He was a good athlete at Muir Tech High School but it was at Pasadena JC that he became somewhat of a legend. People still speak of his extraordinary accomplishments today.

In 1938 Robinson led Pasadena JC to an 11-0 record, scoring 17 touchdowns and 131 points. His performances attracted crowds never seen before or since at junior college games.

He ran for three touchdowns and passed for three against San Bernardino ... he scored two touchdowns and passed for another before a crowd of 40,000 for the Compton game ... he raced 82 yards to score on the game's final play against Glendale and, with 30,000 fans watching in a season-ending game against Cal Tech at the Rose Bowl, he contributed a 104-yard kickoff return to a touchdown.

Then, it was on to basketball in which he averaged 19 points a game and was named to the all-state team.

In baseball he hit .417 and stole 25 bases in 24 games and then climaxed his amazing four-sport spree by breaking brother Mack's national JC long jump record with a prodigious leap of 25-6. To put that mark in perspective, only three Americans, all older than Robinson, had jumped 26 feet or farther up to that time.

The day Robinson broke the long jump record, the Pasadena JC baseball team was playing some 30 miles away for the conference championship. So Robinson got into a waiting car, changed into his baseball uniform en route to Glendale and arrived by the third inning to help his team win a 5-3 victory.

Although Robinson was a superstar in athletics, a better-than-average student, and a member of the school's honor society (the first black ever selected), he had his rebellious side, too.

He was a member of the Pepper Street Gang—not the felonious type of gang we know today, but one that was certainly considered mischievous for the era. The gang was a mix of blacks, Mexicans and Orientals and included some whites, such as Warren Dorn, later to become mayor of Pasadena and a L.A. County supervisor.

"I remember we all looked up to Jackie because he could hide in the storm drain, run out on the golf course at Brookside, grab a ball and get back out of sight faster than any of the rest of us," Dorn said. "That's how we got our soft-drink money. We did things like that during the depression. We had to, to exist."

Dorn remembered that Jackie always seemed to get the worst of it from the cops, mainly for defending one of his pals.

A few years ago, his widow, Rachel, talked about Jackie's heritage.

"I think he was a model of courage, determination and commitment to certain ideas," she said. " 'Do it' was one of College days are usually remembered for the good times, the friendships that are developed, and the long hours that are spent in the library. But those men who played college football—and particularly those who achieved the status of All-America—also remember college for the lessons they learned in teamwork, discipline and striving for excellence. The former All-Americans in this article have used those lessons to make noteworthy contributions to their communities through their careers or outside activities, providing inspirational leadership off the gridiron just as they did on.

DONN D. MOOMAW was chosen to give the invocation at Ronald Reagan's inauguration as president—the latest in a long list of honors that Reverend Moomaw has accumulated. Moomaw, once an All-America center, is now the minister at Bel Air Presbyterian Church in Los Angeles, serving a congregation of 2,000.

Moomaw's football accomplishments at UCLA are impressive: consensus All-America in 1950 and '52 (injuries he received in '51 prevented a three-year sweep); All-Coast Conference first team in '50, '51 and '52; one of the 10 greatest athletes named in Who's Who in Sports in 1953; member of the Helms Foundation College Hall of Fame; member of the National Football Foundation College Hall of Fame; co-captain of his team in the Hula Bowl All-Star Game.

Despite his football talent, Moomaw decided to change his life's direction to the ministry. The roots of this decision were formed in college. "College football was a great teacher for me," Moomaw said. "It helped me in my formative years to face life as it was and was to become. I learned to take pain, learn from my mistakes, get up and get going again. I learned to discipline my body and my mind to go beyond normal limits and strive for perfection. It helped me appreciate what can happen when a group of people strive together for the same goals." He took his bachelor's of divinity at Princeton Theological Seminary in 1957 and later received a doctorate of divinity from Sterling College in Kansas. He has been at Bel Air Presbyterian since 1964.

Rev. Moomaw's community activities in the past years have included being a member of the California State Board of Education (1968-72), serving on the East Bay Boy Scouts Board of Directors—a position he held while in the ministry in Berkeley, California—and being a member of the President's Council of Physical Fitness and Sports, among many other involvements.

BYRON WHITE began his distinguished career as the University of Colorado's first All-America football player and went on to be appointed as a Justice of the Supreme Court in 1962.

"Whizzer" White was named to every major post-season team after leading Colorado to an undefeated season in 1937 and then to the Cotton Bowl. During that eight-game season he led the nation in rushing with 1,121 yards and in scoring with 122 points. In addition to his football talents, White was an all-conference basketball and baseball player and an excellent student, graduating as a Phi Beta Kappa and obtaining a Rhodes Scholarship. He spent a year at Oxford University in 1939.

LeRoy Bolden

Byron White

In 1942 White decided to turn to law and attended Yale's law school; however, his studies were interrupted by World War II. During the war he served on a PT boat, becoming friends with John F. Kennedy, and earned the Bronze Star for his combat service. After his discharge, White returned to Yale, finished his law degree and began practicing law in Denver. There he became involved in politics, serving as national election committee chairman for Kennedy's presidential race. That position led to the deputy attorney generalship, and later to the Supreme Court.

White has said that his football background gave him the "confidence (which) carried (me) on to other activities. You have to gain experience. When the whistle blows you have only a limited time to do what you have to do. You either do it then or you don't do it at all."

LEROY BOLDEN was an outstanding halfback for Michigan State University from 1951 through 1954. As a junior he made the first string All-Big Ten backfield and landed several All-America spots. He was a solid performer in the Rose Bowl and was voted by his teammates to receive the Governor of Michigan award as the team's most valuable player. The 1954 squad selected Bolden as co-captain of the team, and that year he led MSU in scoring with five touchdowns.

Bolden had to combat his small size—5-7½ and 163 pounds—to become one of the best running backs in Big Ten history, but he had the will to succeed. His MSU coach, Clarence Munn, said of him, "I got the impression that he could do everything. He had the desire and love of football that makes athletes great." Bolden later used his determination and drive to pursue a successful career.

Bolden served in the U.S. Air Force after his graduation from MSU, then played for the Cleveland Browns. He went on to become an educational psychologist, and by 1970 was the director of Project Learn Well for the Behavioral Research Laboratory of Palo Alto, California—a project which involved individually educating disadvantaged children. Bolden felt that he had been one of the lucky kids, largely owing to his athletic abilities which opened up other opportunities, and wanted to aid children who were caught in a cycle of going nowhere. Dr. Bolden is now assistant director of personnel at Hewlett Packard Co. in Palo Alto.

ROGER T. STAUBACH quarterbacked for the U.S. Naval Academy from 1962-64, went on to a highly successful pro career, and has become a successful businessman. He is involved with various charitable and community activities, such as the American Diabetes Association and the Salvation Army.

Staubach was named a consensus All-America in 1963 and received the Heisman Trophy that year, when he was fourth in the nation in total offense with 1,892 yards. During his college football career Staubach broke 28 school records, won the Maxwell Trophy and was the first Middle to win the Thompson Trophy three times.

After his graduation from the Academy, Staubach had tour duty with the Navy, including service in Viet Nam. He then played outstanding pro ball with the Dallas Cowboys for 11 years.

Staubach is being inducted into the College Football Hall of Fame this year and this spring received the Career Achievement Award presented by the National Football League Alumni. The award is presented annually to a recent NFL retiree—Staubach retired from the Cowboys in 1979—who has demonstrated through his career in football the "higher values of the sport—professionalism, teamwork, sportsmanship, citizenship and public service."

Staubach feels that his football background at the Naval Academy started him in the right direction. The disciplined atmosphere helped him learn "how to focus on objectives and get things done. That kind of training has certainly paid off, particularly now in helping me make the transition from my football career to my business career. Discipline has given me a sense of responsibility—to my careers, to my family and to the community."

DONALD E. COLEMAN, who holds several academic positions at Michigan State University, was the first Spartan to have his jersey, No. 78, retired. He was also MSU's first consensus All-America, in 1951.

Coleman was a first-string lineman for three straight years at MSU (1949-51). His college football honors included being named the team's Most Valuable Player in 1951, being voted outstanding lineman in both the East-West Shrine Game and the Hula Bowl Game, and playing in the College All-Star Game in 1952. He was inducted into the College Football Hall of Fame in 1975.

Upon graduating, Coleman served two years in the military, including one year in the Korean War. He later entered the educational field, beginning as a high school teacher.

Coleman moved up the academic ladder to eventually join the Michigan State faculty as an assistant professor in intercollegiate athletics in 1968, having received his M.A. in 1956. Coleman was named assistant director of student affairs in '69, and then, after receiving his Ph.D. in 1971, became director of the minority comprehensive support program of the College of Osteopathic Medicine. Dr. Coleman is currently assistant dean of The Graduate School, an associate professor, and continues to direct the minority program.

In addition to his academic responsibilities, Coleman has been active in the Urban League, is a member of the National Association of Minority Medical OTTO GRAHAM, now the U.S. Coast Guard Academy's athletic director, was an All-America back at Northwestern University in 1942 and '43.

Graham established a Big Ten passing record in 1942 with 89 completions out of 182 attempts for 1,092 yards, and he still holds the Northwestern scoring record for a single game, 27 points. He garnered eight letters in college—in football, baseball and basketball—was named Most Valuable Player on the football team in 1943, and played in the College All-Star Game in Chicago that year. In 1956 Graham was inducted into the College Football Hall of Fame.

He enlisted in the U.S. Navy Air Corps after his graduation and served as an officer for two years in World War II. After his discharge, Graham became a T-quarterback for the Cleveland Browns. He was selected for the All-Pro team for 10 consecutive years.

"Automatic Otto," as he was nicknamed—because of the amazing precision with which he hit his targets—retired from the Browns in 1955 and went on to establish a successful insurance company in Cleveland. He coached football at the Coast Guard Academy and was later named athletic director there.

Graham feels that his All-America days at Northwestern opened doors for him to pursue a successful career after college. Says Graham, "There is no question that any athlete who becomes (an All-America player) will find this notoriety very helpful in his career."

ALAN D. AMECHE is one of the University of Wisconsin's most famous football players. A consensus All-America in 1953 and '54, he scored 25 touchdowns during his college career and amassed a total of 3,345 yards. In 1954 Ameche was awarded the Heisman Trophy as the outstanding football player in the nation, and he was selected to the College Football Hall of Fame in 1975.

While playing for the Baltimore Colts (1955-60), Ameche started a chain of restaurants in Baltimore—a chain that has since expanded to over 350 restaurants from North Carolina to New England. Ameche now serves as secretary and vice president of community relations with that chain—Gino's, Inc.—and devotes much of his time and energy to community relations projects.

Ameche received a community relations award from the Philadelphia Jaycees and was one of five business executives nominated as "Man of the Year" in 1969. He is active in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes and with the Multiple Sclerosis Foundation in Philadelphia; served as the Philadelphia area corporation's chairman for the United Negro College Fund Drive in 1972; and has received an appointment to the Board of Directors of the Philadelphia Orchestra. Ameche has also been awarded an honorary doctorate of humane letters from St. Joseph's College, Philadelphia, for his services to the community.

GEORGE TALIAFERRO, now special assistant to the President of Indiana University, was well-known to Hoosier fans from 1945-48. He was Indiana's Most Valuable Player in 1948, the team captain, and was an All-America halfback in 1945, '47, and '48. His college football career is being honored this year with his induction into the College Football Hall of Fame.

Taliaferro played pro football after his graduation. He then returned to his alma mater, accepting the position of special assistant to the president. He is also involved in many other activities, including: member of the Greater Bloomington Chamber of Commerce Sports Task Force; life member of the NAACP; member of the Indiana State Employment Security Division Advisory Council; instructor of a course for the Department of Social Work at Indiana University; founder and president of the Board of Directors of Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Monroe County, Inc.; and counselor to athletes and other students at the University.

In addition, Taliaferro is chairman of the Special Advisory Commission to the Big Ten Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, a commission founded in 1972 and comprised of one graduated black athlete from each of the Big Ten schools. The commission is responsible for making recommendations to the Big Ten governing body concerning issues related to Conference athletes and staff members on and off the field.

Taliaferro believes that his college football participation has been most helpful in his career development. "My being named an All-America football player was achieved with the help of coaches and teammates (and) many hours of teamwork, cooperation, loyalty, pride and purpose." These values have carried over into his work, helping him to "achieve security and happiness."

THOMAS J. HAMILTON's impressive career as a naval officer, as a head football coach and as Executive Director of the Pac-8 Conference, began with his football accomplishments at the U.S. Naval Academy.

Hamilton earned nine varsity letters in football, basketball and baseball, starting in each of those sports all three years that he played. In 1926 he was named an All-America halfback.

Following his graduation in 1927, Hamilton received his Naval Aviator's Wings and served in torpedo and scouting squadrons. He returned to the Academy as head football coach from 1934-36. When World War II began, he directed the Naval Aviation V-5 Physical Training Program and was also Executive Officer of the USS Enterprise and USS Savo Island. Admiral Hamilton received the Bronze Star and two Legion of Merit citations for his combat service.

After the war Hamilton continued his head coach duties for the Middies from 1946-47, and was athletic director from 1948-49. Retiring from the Navy in '49, Hamilton then served as Director of Athletics and Physical Education at the University of Pittsburgh. In 1959 he accepted the position of Executive Director of the Pac-8 Conference, and held that job until his retirement in 1971.

Throughout his career Hamilton has been active in many organizations, including: Vice President of the National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame; member of the NCAA Council and Executive Committee; member of the Executive Board of the U.S. Olympic Committee (1948-64); Director of the Boy Scouts of America; President of the Collegiate Commissioner's Association; and a member of the Board of Trustees for the U.S. Naval Academy Foundation. Admiral Hamilton was inducted into the College Football Hall of Fame in 1965 and in 1970 received the NFF's Gold Medal, the highest individual honor bestowed by that organization.

Hamilton feels that his college football training was of great value to him. From college sports he learned "the fundamentals and necessity of teamwork. The ability to be a good team member, with all its challenges and responsibilities, is an essential in the Navy... the competitive training and personal relationships of sports help qualify a Naval Officer to train, coach and participate with his men at all stages of his responsibilities."

If there is a theme that runs through the lives of these former All-Americans, it is the importance of teamwork, discipline and pride—values that these men found through college football and which they have used to better their communities and their country.

THE LONG SNAPPER

by Mark Hyman, Philadelphia BULLETIN

It was, he recalled with devilish amusement, the first day of fall workouts. He was a freshman—a terrified freshman—and the enormity of this first brush with major college football had left him nearly paralyzed.

He was also a walk-on. Over the summer, he had written to the coach and asked for permission to try out for the team, a request that was later granted. He figured his chances to make the squad were far better than for most non-scholarship athletes because he was a long snapper, a position that requires a unique set of skills. In high school, he'd handled punt and placement snaps for four years.

At practice that first fall day, he floated around dreamily. He paced the field in a stupor, stopping every few steps to pinch himself back to reality. He sighed a lot, too. Though he stood among them, the dewy-eyed freshman had to keep reminding himself that he was weeks away from joining the coaches and players who make up one of the country's perennial top 20 powers.

Long Snapper

About midway through the first workout, the coach summoned him to a point near the endzone, and soon they were joined there by a field goal kicker and several other players. It didn't take the freshman long to size up the situation. This was it—his first, and possibly last, chance to prove his worth to the coaching staff.

"Thinking back on it now, it's pretty funny," said the player, now a senior and the regular long snapper on a college power in the East, "but back then, I was absolutely petrified. The very first snap I made—geez, I can see it now—went over the holder's head. The feeling was indescribable. I almost threw up."

Every long snapper has a story like this to tell. Not all are quite so dramatic and not every storyteller can look back in such vivid detail, but catastrophe is a place all players of this position have visited.

Long snappers learn to live with it, though. They learn to live with a lot that is unpleasant. In fact, just think about what this player has to contend with throughout a college career. Under ordinary circumstances, he might get into only seven to 10 plays a game. The short time he is on the field is spent with his head locked between his legs, arms thrust forward and backside pointed toward the heavens. It's the kind of pose that does nobody any good but America's chiropractors.

Then there's the matter of notoriety. Most have never met a sportswriter, much less seen their name in print. And on those rare occasions when they do make the papers, it's usually because a poor guy who's gotten 1,000 snaps off without a hitch has cost his team a game by centering one over the punter's head.

It is definitely not a job for the faint-hearted.

"I don't know how other guys get into it, but my story is fairly simple," says a Division I snapper. "My family was living in Texas when I was in the eighth grade, playing eighth grade football. One day I was on a school bus parked next to a practice field when the football coach got on and asked if anybody thought they could snap for punts. Well, I watched some other guys do it, and being a new kid in the school, tried out for the position. I got the job right there."

"It was a question of there being no one else," a snapper from a Division III school said. "It's certainly not a glamour position or one a kid dreams about playing in college. But the more you get into it, the more you realize that not just anybody could do this. It takes a lot of practice and a lot of technique."

Actually, the art of long snapping is not easily mastered. There are many fundamentals to learn, nuances to grasp.

And the most basic of all lessons is how to grasp the ball. Most coaches insist their snappers hold the ball with two hands, though some one-handed snappers have made the grade and even prospered. Next, there is the matter of delivering the ball. There is a difference of opinion here. Some coaches teach their snappers to shove the ball through their legs directly from the ground while many others insist the ball must be lifted from the ground first and then delivered.

"I've always taught my kids to pick the ball up and then to center it," one veteran offensive line coach says. "To me, it's a simple matter of friction. If you rub the ball against the ground as you center it, it's not going to go back with the same speed. Lifting it first eliminates the drag and increases speed."

Speed. Along with accuracy, it is the watchword of the long snapper. Most coaches require that their snappers have the ball in the hands of the punter (who is standing 13 yards behind the line of scrimmage) in seven-tenths of a second. That's fast, but necessary when you consider that 11 guys from across the line of scrimmage are intent on getting to the punter's leg before the ball does.

Coaches will tell you that their long snappers come in a variety of shapes and sizes. At major colleges, they're often walk-ons who wouldn't be playing were it not for their special skill. At smaller schools, they often play other positions, though not the ones you'd expect. Defensive backs, wide receivers, even quarterbacks have served as snappers. Anybody with guts and a pair of iron wrists already has the basic tools.

Long-Snapper

Iron wrists and the ability to withstand pressure are two requisites for the long snapper.

But is it a fun position?

"I enjoy it," the long snapper from the eastern school says. "It gets me out on the field and on the road."

Is it a position for players who aren't big or strong enough to play anywhere else?

"Maybe, but I've kind of learned to accept that," he says. "I know there's a lot more to it than people think. The only way people are going to notice you is if you have a bad one (snap). But it's a position just like any other and it has to be filled. Not everyone has the capabilities to do what I do and that makes me proud."

"In a way, you could liken what I do to a placekicker. People generally don't understand what either of us do. It takes some explaining."

There is also the pressure, the gut-wrenching realization that the smallest of errors can undo what the rest of the team has been working toward for a game or even a season. Long snappers live with this, but try not to dwell on it. "I've learned to handle the pressure through concentration," he says. "It's the big key. I tell myself that whatever happens to me after I release the ball doesn't matter as long as the technique is OK for that split-second when I'm hiking the ball."

"Sometimes after I snap the ball, I don't get hit at all. Sometimes I get hit on one side or the other. It depends on who we're playing and the kind of defense they play. The crowd and all the cheering tends to take your mind off that. Plus, I know that day-in and day-out, I'm very consistent in practice. I have the mental knowledge that I can do the job."

That must be satisfaction enough for the long snapper. While the quarterbacks and tailbacks have to fend off reporters with hand grenades, guys like this often have to remind the team managers not to shut off the showers before they get a chance to wash up. But there are always a few friends upon whom the long snappers can depend for appreciation and understanding.

The guys who put their heads together to make field goals are very close. That's the snapper, holder and placekicker.

"When the holder says 'set,' I'm supposed to wait two seconds before I snap the ball. It's all in the timing. When the kicker hears, 'set,' he waits two seconds and then begins moving toward the tee. We want to get the ball off in 1.2 seconds, from the time I start the movement of the ball until the time he (the placekicker) kicks it. It's all technique."

"The last two years, the three of us (the kicker, holder and snapper) have been very good friends. We work as a unit and we treat each other that way."

What the long snapper cannot convey to those who ask is the occasional danger of his position.

"You get your bell rung occasionally on the line of scrimmage," he says, "and you don't know where you are. But that goes away in three or four seconds. I come in for five or six plays a game, so I have to be on."

And calm.

"Don't get me wrong," he says, "I'm nervous. The day I'm not nervous is the day I don't want to play. When the nerves are gone, the fun will be gone."

SAN JOSE STATE at UTAH STATE

Today's key PCAA match-up in Logan holds many things for many teams—including UOP. The game, matching the teams picked 1-2 in the pre-season, features two clubs that now have 2-0 conference records.

San Jose figures to have the edge, even though the contest is being held in the cool environs of Utah State's Romney Stadium. The Spartans, 5-1 on the year were impressive in whipping Fresno State, 65-33, and pesky Cal State Fullerton, 45-23. The Aggies, on the other hand, barely eked by the Titans, 14-9 early in the year, and needed a last second field goal to outlast Pacific, 17-14.

Quarterback Steve Clarkson, tailback Gerald Willhite and company have ramrodded to five consecutive victories, averaging 41.2 points per game along the way. Utah State's defense, not bad itself, should capitulate to the Spartan attack, nonetheless.

On the other side of the ball, it is doubtful that USU's offense, lacking some of the big play character it's possessed in recent years, can dent the Spartan defense with any regularity. The Aggies were able to muster just 200 yards of total offense against Pacific two weeks ago.

And while San Jose is coming off a less-than-inspired decision over Fullerton, the Aggies had to struggle to tie tough Texas Christian—a game that might have taken something out of Coach Bruce Snyder's troops.

For UOP, the significance of the game lies in the fact that the Tigers lost to Utah State. If UOP is to have any hope of going to the inaugural California Bowl, Utah State will have to lose two games or lose one and tie one. Today's contest would seem to be an opportune time for that to happen. But as all of the teams in the PCAA have come to know, anything can happen in Logan. Still, look for the Spartans to come home 3-0.

LONG BEACH STATE at CAL STATE FULLERTON

Call Cal State Fullerton the most improved team in the PCAA. Call Long Beach State a troubled champ, about to become ex-champ. An idea of just how far each has progressed/regressed should come out of this game.

Coach Gene Murphy's Titans, getting better every week, started reversing gears against Arizona four weeks ago. They led the heavily-favored Wildcats (who later conquered No. 1 USC by _____ at halftime but finally succumbed in the second half. The Titans then smacked Div. II power Cal Poly-SLO and one week later rallied to sting Fresno State, 13-10, in Fresno.

Murphy's squad faced the Goliath of the PCAA, San Jose State, last Saturday and although the Titans didn't slay the Spartans, they did give them a battle—something few expected. Fullerton has been riding the arms of quarterbacks Bob Caffrey and Tom. St. Jacques and the foot of punter Scott Vernoy.

Long Beach meanwhile, floundered in the pre-season, going 1-4, and then lost its PCAA opener at home, 17-10, to UOP last week. The Beach has now posted four losses in a row and another today could point the way to a devastating reversal of 1980's fine championship run.

The loss of 10 first team All-PCAA players and all but five starters from last fall's outfit has hurt more than head coach Dave Currey would care to admit. Biggest headache for the 49ers has been at quarterback, where soph Doug Disney and senior Angelo Gasca have each had unsuccessful trials.

The game has several implications for the two rivals, who are located less than an hour apart and recruit many of the same players. The game will be held at Titan Field, a "homemade" stadium on the Fullerton campus. The verdict is a very tough one to predict.

THE HEAD COACH . . .

during his head coaching reign and won two California Collegiate Athletic Association championships. In each of the three years, Riverside was ranked in the Top 10 nationally in total offense (Division II).

The outgoing, pass-minded Toledo earned a shot at the college ranks after compiling a 26-5-1 record in three seasons at Riordan High School (San Francisco) and capturing a pair of West Catholic Athletic League titles. He was an assistant at Riordan in 1969.

Toledo also enjoyed a standout playing career. He starred for San Francisco State in 1966 and 1967, quarterbacking the Gators to first place in the Far Western Conference as a senior and setting eight NCAA Division II records (six still stand).

He was second team All-America Div. II), NorCal Back-of-the-Year, first team All-FWC and led the country in total offense. He passed for over 4,000 yards in two seasons at S.F. State.

Earlier in his playing career, Toledo was a JC All-American at San Jose City College and started for three seasons at Lincoln High in San Jose.

Toledo is married (wife Elaine) and has three girls (Demetra 12, Christa 11, and Alissa, 5). He graduated from San Francisco State in 1968.

HOMECOMING NEXT SATURDAY

The Tigers will close out the 1980 home season a week from tonight in the annual Homecoming Game against PCAA rival Cal State Fullerton at Pacific Memorial Stadium.

Make sure to get your reserved tickets now for all the pageantry and fun of Homecoming. There will be a traditional 2:00 PM kickoff. For ticket information, call the UOP Athletic Ticket Office at (209) 946-2474.

TIGER PROFILE

POISED HOUT A LEADER UP FRONT

An offensive lineman has a real dilemma on his hands. Like any other red-blooded college football player, he likes publicity. The problem is, the only time an offensive lineman is in the limelight, it's the very time he wants to crawl in a hole—namely when the quarterback gets sacked.

When the QB goes down, the offensive lineman gets stripped of the anonymity that goes along with the job he does on countless other plays during the game. It's a time when UOP offensive coordinator and offensive line coach Bill McQueary is happy to have a guy like senior tackle Kurt Hout around.

"Kurt's just great, a real positive influence for our line in terms of maintaining poise, on the line of scrimmage and in the huddle," said McQueary. "When a guy gets beat or the quarterback gets sacked, most players tend to get overemotional or lose confidence.

"Kurt's a veteran and has the ability to bring them back up, settle them down and get things squared away." As the elder statesman of the front five (the Tigers regularly start four sophomores alongside him), Hout is well aware that it's a team game in the trenches.

"More than any other unit, the offensive line is five guys working together and you have to bring each other up," said Hout. "It's easy to get down and you have to have a lot of pride and discipline in not wanting to get beat."

The 6-4, 255-pound Hout doesn't get beat often, no matter where he's playing. "Kurt's played more positions than anyone on our football team," said McQueary, citing every spot up front as well as tight end on occasion. "It's a real credit to him that he can do it. He knows our entire scheme well enough to adapt and has the athletic ability, maturity and confidence to do well wherever he plays."

Hout started every game at center for the Tigers in 1980 and came out of spring ball touted as an all-conference candidate at snapper. But a rash of post-spring injuries at tackle left UOP barren and Hout was a logical choice to plug the gap, just as he had been when moved to center from tackle the previous spring.

"He shares a lot with the rest of us on the field," said sophomore Jim Hearn, who has assumed Hout's former niche at center. "He's played everywhere and is able to point out things we're doing wrong. He also keeps our morale going." Hout wouldn't trade his role for any of the more glamorous on the team.

"There are two types of offensive linemen," said Hout, a native of Concord. "Those that love it and those that hate it."

"I really love it. I think it takes a special kind of individual to play on the offensive line. We get a lot of self-satisfaction from beating our man, even though there's not a great deal of glory compared to some other positions." And practice for an offensive lineman is demanding—possibly tougher than any other area.

"The coaches work us hard but we've got to be ready to give maximum effort on each of some 80 plays a game," said Hout. "Time after time, there's an opportunity to get beat and we've got to be ready to meet that challenge."

An aggressive run blocker and an adept pass protector, Hout earned UOP Offensive Player of the Week honors for his performance earlier this year at Washington State and twice won Player of the Week accolades last fall. He's interested in pro football if the opportunity presents itself.

"If it's there, I'd like to try it," said Hout. "Everybody that ever played the game would be kidding themselves if they said otherwise." In May, the 21-year-old will get married and if his playing career comes to an end, want to stay in the game as a coach, first as a graduate assistant at UOP and then on the prep or college level. But for now, he's looking forward to finishing his Tiger career with a flourish. And Hout sees something special in this year's offensive line.

"As far as personnel goes, I don't think we have the raw physical talent we've had in previous years," said Hout, "but I think desire is what puts this line above the rest."

"Everybody wants to get better and we're improving each week." That's one of the things that make Hout stand out from the crowd, too.

"He's a guy who loves to play football and has just kept making himself better," said McQueary. "He's steadily progressed into a very tough, smart lineman." The kind any team would like to have—wherever he's playing.

Kurt Hout has played every position on the offensive line during his UOP career.

"The Country Store That Does More"

DOWNTOWN WILL SOON BE THE MOST PRESTIGIOUS BUSINESS ADDRESS IN STOCKTON

Right in the heart of Downtown, The Waterfront, a totally planned community will soon be rising, and turn one of our city's most neglected areas into a splendid new center of offices, shops, restaurants, promenades, homes, apartments and more.

In this very location of Stockton's colorful beginning, the roots of our history will soon blend with the new in one of the country's most spectacular urban redevelopments.

Office Towers: In a park-like setting, 4 five-story glass towers will give new homes to modern offices and shops, all surrounded by ample, convenient parking, and only a 5-minute-walk away from the court house.

THE WATERFRONT

The Warehouse: An open plaza will link the office towers with the historic Grocers Warehouse, situated along the Deep Water Channel with its new marina. Once painstakingly restored, this landmark building will come alive again with shops, restaurants and unique office space.

To work and live in this vibrant, new, yet historic center will be the aim of many. We at Schmitz Development, Inc. are proud to be able to make The Waterfront a reality.

We invite your inquiry. For information concerning The Waterfront Office Towers and the Grocer's Warehouse, please contact Mr. John Dubois, Schmitz Development, Inc., 1545 St. Mark's Plaza, Stockton, California 95207. (209) 477-2671.

TIGER PROFILE

TIGHT END NO PROBLEM FOR TIGERS

Tight Ends Paul Schreiner (84) and Tony Camp (85) have been giving fits to Tiger opponents.

Tight end has been an evolving position over the last decade. Formerly inhabited by players more akin to an offensive lineman than a receiver, the new breed at the position is one who can almost literally "do it all"—block, catch passes, run with the ball and fight off opposing linebackers.

In 1981, the UOP football team has one of the best tight ends on the West Coast—twice over. With senior Paul Schreiner and sophomore Tony Camp on hand, head coach Bob Toledo has a 1-2 combination that leaves him free to worry about things other than his tight end situation.

"Without a doubt, tight end is the most solid position on our football team," says Toledo. "I feel very comfortable with either one in there and between them, they've made the tight end position the No. 1 receiver on our club."

To date, the 6-2, 235-pound Schreiner has caught 10 passes for 179 yards while the 6-5, 240-pound Camp has snagged 14 for 153 yards. They became tight ends in different fashion. For Camp, it was a natural.

"My older brother Mike (now at Colorado State) was a tight end and I kind of followed in his footsteps," said Camp, who caught 24 passes and scored four touchdowns as a freshman last fall. "It's an ideal position in that you're involved all the time but don't always have to handle blocking. Catching the ball adds excitement."

Schreiner, on the other hand, is a tight end via fullback, a position he played his first two years at Pacific. But even then, he was an adept receiver, hauling in 28 passes during his fullback stint and once getting nine in one game.

"It's better than fullback for me because I feel my physical abilities are better suited to tight end," said Schreiner, who had 20 receptions (3 for TDs) in his first season at the new position. "I like being able to run longer routes and being able to get the ball out in the open with room to run." He showed his skill in the open field last week, going 55 yards for UOP's first touchdown.

Last year was an adjustment for both. "It (1980) was difficult," said Schreiner. "It takes some time to adapt and this year I'm finally feeling like a tight end instead of just a converted fullback. My blocking techniques, concentration and patterns are all starting to come around." For Camp, it was a change from prep to college ball.

"It's a lot more intense here," commented Camp, whose Estancia High School squad had only 30 members. "Everyone is good and you have to work hard all the time, particularly in practice. There was a lot more to learn in terms of plays, audibles and responsibilities."

While Camp has advantages in size and quickness and Schreiner the edge in strength and straight ahead speed, the pair have many similarities.

"They're both outstanding blockers and have excellent hands, the best on the team," said Toledo. "Our scheme really helps them utilize their skills."

Both have had outstanding single game performances for the Tigers. Last year, Schreiner caught six passes for 131 yards and UOP's only score against Arizona State. The Napa native currently ranks ninth on Pacific's all-time receiving list with 58 career catches.

Camp had his biggest game against Arizona a year ago in Tucson, accounting for seven receptions and two TDs. He had six catches against Cal State Fullerton in the 1980 finale and had a UOP 1981 high of six against Oregon. Their big efforts against top competition have not been lost on tight end coach John Ramsdell or UOP's opponents.

"Tony and Paul are as fine a set of tight ends as you'll find in the PCAA," said Ramsdell, now in his third year at UOP and fourth in the PCAA. "Every coach I've talked to has commented that they really like our tight ends." Until they have to face them, that is.

College Nicknames

It's All in a Name

Ever wonder which nickname is the most popular in college football? Of course you have. The winnah—by a wide margin—is Tigers. There are 27 NCAA football teams with that nickname—ranging from Auburn to Wittenberg.

You probably guessed that one, but can you name No. 2? It's the Bears, 17-16 over the Bulldogs. Then come the Eagles (13), Wildcats (11) and Indians (9).

Twenty-one other nicknames are listed by at least five teams—the Cardinals, Rams and Panthers eight each; Huskies, Pioneers, Raiders and Vikings seven each; Aggies, Bisons, Bobcats, Devils, Lions, Scots and Yellow Jackets six each; and Broncos, Colonels, Crusaders, Dutchmen, Knights, Spartans and Warriors five each.

The funniest or most unusual? That's strictly in the eye of the beholder—if you're a fan of that team it probably isn't either funny or unusual to you. You can do the picking in this category—and answer the irate fan letters.

If you're looking to tune up your voice and diction, though, the P's provide precise practice—Pacers-Paladins-Peacocks-Penguins-Pioneers-Pipers-Pirates-Plainsmen-Poets-Presidents-Prof-Pumas-Purple Aces. Try those at high speed.

How many different nicknames are there among the country's 487 NCAA football teams? That's a good question, and there's no perfect answer. By our system, probably not a bit better than yours, there are 223, counting as one each those with slight variations (Hurricane singular and plural, Wolfpack one word and two and Bison-Bisons). So many different nicknames start with "Fighting," "Golden" and various other colors that we decided to list them under the second part of the name, as in Bears (Golden), Irish (Fighting), Tigers (Blue), Devils (Red), Eagles (Bald) and so on.

But it would never do to list the Ragin' Cajuns of Southwestern Louisiana as the "Cajuns (Ragin')," and the one and only Battling Bishops of Ohio Wesleyan as the "Bishops (Battling)"—would it? Of course not. And in case you're wondering why the Sun Devils of Arizona State aren't listed with the various other Devils, well, the Sun Devils are just too hot (102 in the shade is a cool day there).

THIS WEEK'S OPPONENT

HEAD COACH Fresno State

Jim Sweeney is currently in his second year of his second term as head coach at Fresno State University. During Sweeney's previous two years at FSU, 1976-1977, the Bulldogs compiled a 14-8 record. FSU finished second in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association in '76 and first in '77.

After the 1977 season, Sweeney moved on to the NFL making one year stops with the Oakland Raiders and the St. Louis Cardinals. He then came back to FSU in 1980, taking the team to a 5-6 record.

Sweeney has had a long, successful coaching career. He started coaching in 1951 at Butte Central High School in Montana, his alma mater. In three years at Butte, his teams won two state class A championships. From there he went to Flathead County High School for five years. His last two years at Flathead (1958-59) his teams were undefeated and won class AA state championships.

In 1960 Sweeney went to Montana State University as an assistant coach, and took over the head coaching reigns in 1963. MSU won the Big Sky Conference title four of five years Sweeney was head coach. They twice played in the Camellia Bowl (the NCAA Division II National Championship), winning in 1964 and losing in 1966. At MSU Sweeney was named District 8 Division II Coach of the Year and was runner up for National Coach of the Year, both in 1966. He was also Big Sky Coach of the Year three times.

From 1968 to 1975 Sweeney was head coach at Washington State University. In 1972 he was named District 10 Coach of the Year. That year he also coached in the Coaches All-American game in Lubbock, Texas. The very next year he was head coach for the West squad in the East-West Shrine Game.

Sweeney then came to FSU where in 1977 he led the Battlin' Bulldogs to only their second league championship since 1961. For the next three years Sweeney will serve on the West Coast Coaches All-American Committee and the Football Rules Committee. Both are Division IA selections.

Sweeney graduated from the University of Portland in 1951. He and his wife Lucille have eight children.

Where would a wise investor seek sound advice, attentive service, unbeatable information, and unmatched financial strength?

Merrill Lynch says, close to home.

Don't misunderstand. There's nothing wrong with searching far and wide for investment ideas. It's not easy to get rich these days.

But to search on your own is a full-time job-and-a-half. You have to read everything, digest it all, analyze the information, act on it...and do it fast, because opportunities become ancient history in precious little time.

Meanwhile, some of the best investment ideas are sitting practically on your doorstep, at a nearby office of Merrill Lynch.

We have the resources and the people to know, really know, investment opportunities as diverse as oil drilling partnerships and Treasury Bill futures, options and retirement plans.

Our research team is the best on Wall Street—in Wall Street's own opinion. And we make it easy to use that unrivaled resource: computer terminals at every Merrill Lynch office can instantly print out up-to-the-minute opinions on more than 1200 stocks.

Best of all is the way we tailor our advice to your requirements. Before offering a single suggestion, your Merrill Lynch Account Executive will spend a long while listening. Finding out what you really need. Because the smartest investment plans—the plans most likely to succeed—start with a clear definition of where they want to go. Are you looking for security or the opportunity to speculate? For current income or capital growth? What you tell us determines in large part what we tell you.

So we make a point of developing, for each customer, a sound long-term investment strategy, and we encourage you to stick with it and not be sidetracked by investment fads or temporary market aberrations. And we give you the security of knowing that we're going to stick with you and see you through to your goals. Merrill Lynch has more than $800 million in capital resources working for you, and we plan to be advising you long after all those fad investments have been written off.

So drop in at a nearby Merrill Lynch office and look over some of the brochures that explain our philosophy and way of doing things. Don't worry...we won't ask you to buy anything. In fact, we probably won't even let you, until we get to know you better.

The Saga of a Football Fan

by Herb Michelson, Sacramento BEE

To understand the story of Ralph (Frothy) Rabid, you must first try and perceive the forces which guided him. Ralph (Frothy) Rabid meant no one any harm; let that be clear at the start. His motives were pure, his heart as big as a sunrise, his goal rife with nobility and decency. All Ralph (Frothy) Rabid wished to do, in his oh-so-bountiful way, was care about his alma mater's football team. As the little styrofoam marker says over his little Astroturf grave in the tiny cement block cemetery just outside of Kinderhook, Michigan; RALPH (FROTHY) RABID, 1932 — 1981, CARED. What follows will tell you how much. . . .

In the last exam in the last class on the last day of his last year at Kinderhook Consolidated H.S., Ralph, in 1950, passed his government course by acknowledging that President Harry S. Truman did not use a period after his middle initial. Ralph's grade of 76 on this exam ranked him 38th in his graduating class of 77, putting him in the upper half and eligible for acceptance to Wicket State College. He was graduated from Wicket in 1954, ranked 1,813th in a class of 3,627 and thus was eligible for acceptance as a junior underwriter with the Benton Harbor, Michigan branch of the Great Beyond Life Insurance Company. As you might have noticed, nothing ever came particularly easy for Ralph Rabid.

Because his family was poor, he'd always had to scrape for after-school work both in high school and college. He had no time, ever, to play games or watch them, or even to read about them in the newspapers or hear of them on the television. Ralph, because he didn't know what else to believe in, believed fiercely in the work ethic.

By 1975, the year he was 43, Ralph Rabid had worked so hard and so long—as long as 19 hours a day and 16 on Saturdays and Sundays—that he'd never had any time to start a family or even get married. By 1975, Ralph Rabid had sold life insurance policies to 1,437,619 people in Michigan, 85 in Toledo, Ohio, and 12 in Windsor, Ontario, and had become chairman of the board of the Great Beyond Life Insurance Company. When his secretary said to him one morning, "Mr. Rabid, you are worth 16 million dollars and should have a diversion," Ralph Rabid said, "You are right, Miss Leffingwell. Suggest one." She said that everybody seemed to enjoy football a lot.

Well, Ralph Rabid was too old to play. And he did not own a television set (he'd never had time to watch T.V.). But he did receive a monthly copy of his alumni magazine, which carried a coupon for purchasing season football tickets.

By the end of the 1975 season he had seen every home game, not completely certain what he had seen but enjoying the identification of FAN. He had never been identified as anything but INSURANCE MOGUL, and because he had done that work so obsessively, so successfully, he determined to absorb himself with equal passion in his new occupation.

It took him until the end of the 1978 season to read every book ever written about football. It took him until the beginning of the 1979 season to memorize every name, every statistic, every tidbit of game lore connected with his alma mater. He was now ready to become his team's leading fan, the initial step toward becoming the leading fan in the Big Eleven, preparatory to becoming the leading fan among Division I schools, en route to becoming the leading fan in the NCAA, on the road to becoming the leading, best-known fan anywhere in all of the U.S.A.

During each home game the public address announcer told everyone in the stadium they were invited to a party immediately following the game in the stadium which Ralph Rabid had leased. Ralph paid for everything. "You're some fan," they would tell him. "Not just some fan," Ralph would say. "You're right," they would chorus. "You're a super fan."

By the end of 1979, when Ralph Rabid spent $1,674,893.12 on sandwiches and beer, he was known throughout all of Michigan as SUPERFAN.

He dressed in nothing but Wicket State's colors—green and white. He drove a green and white car into a green and white garage adjacent to his green and white home in the heart of a green and white forest he had planted while wearing green and white gloves.

He arranged, for the 1980 season, to charter a fleet of green and white airplanes to fly him and 2,000 friendly fans to the away games of his alma mater. To the women he gave purses shaped like footballs; to the men he gave wallets made of pigskin. He hired bands to play when the planes took off and bands to play when the planes arrived. He dressed the bands in green and white togs, gave them all instruments and often directed their music himself. They played but one song—the team's Fight Song.

Throughout the nation stories were being written about Ralph Rabid. He appeared on "Real People," "20/20," "Sixty Minutes," "That's Incredible," "To Tell the Truth" and 186 TV, magazine and talk shows. He was offered an appearance on a beer commercial and a dealership for any Michigan-made car of his choice. But Ralph Rabid told the world that college fans, just like college athletes, must remain Simon pure. "I give; I don't take," Ralph said.

In the off-season he sat around all hours of the night drinking creme de menthe and cream and rehashing great moments in Wicket football history. "Remember that one play in that great 1979 game?" he would say. "I'll never forget it," he would answer. He reminisced about bowl games he'd never seen, about announcers he'd never heard, about pre-game barbecues he'd never even scented.

He roamed the state passing out television sets to the indigent who could not afford to attend games in person, and then he established a closed-circuit cable network so they could see these games on the sets he'd given them. He was named Alumni of the Year, Honorary Cheerleader, Twelfth Man on the Field and Wicketeer II. A sandwich in the stadium concession stands was named after him: The Rabid Dog. He had his picture in the program, his own jersey and helmet and a private box high above the 50-yard line. No one in the stadium sat until Ralph Rabid sat. No one stood to cheer until Ralph Rabid stood.

It was said, by the 1981 season, that no one was coming to the games anymore to see the game. "Fans," editorialized a small weekly newspaper on the Upper Peninsula, "are not supposed to be fans of a fan. When a fan becomes more important than the event he or she is a fan of, then what is there to be a fan about?"

Miss Leffingwell hid the editorial when Ralph Rabid came to his office that morning for the annual board of directors' meeting. Miss Leffingwell did not mind that she was required to use green ink in a white pen or sit behind a desk under a goal post and show a ticket stub to the guard at the gate when she arrived at Great Beyond each morning. But she did mind that Ralph Rabid was so diverted by his fandom that he was no longer letting her run the company, as any wise employer lets his secretary do.

"Mr. Rabid," she audibilized, "when you were worth 16 million dollars in 1975, I suggested you should have a diversion. Now, six years later, because of bonuses and dividends you are worth 36 million dollars."

"You mean? . . ."

"That's right, sir. Your diversion has been so successful that you are right back where you started, only more so. You are working longer days and longer nights. And you have discovered the basic truth, sir—that you can't win 'em all."

"And sometimes," he said, "I even play to a tie."

"You must," she said, "find another diversion."

The last words of Ralph (Frothy) Rabid, as best as Miss Leffingwell can remember were: "Is that all there is?" She also remembered that his face turned green, very green, and his hands white, very white.

The pathologists were dumbfounded, but not Miss Leffingwell.

The Saturday after he was gone she used his ticket to the Wicket game, sat alone in his box.

She looked down to see if the crowd was looking up. And she observed that all they were doing was watching the game. She left at halftime.

ATTACKING THE ZONE

by Frank Boggs,
Colorado Springs SUN

An old, former college football coach was talking to a young, present college football coach. His advice was brief.

"There are only two things in this world you have to do to be a good football coach," he said. "Run off-tackle effectively and understand pass defense. The rest of it will take care of itself."

It is Part II that keeps most of us sitting in the stands, rather than standing on the sidelines.

Part of pass defense is called The Zone. It sounds easy. In theory, it is. The field is divided into zones, and defenders keep passes from being completed in those areas.

That's how it sounds. Doing it is something else.

The number of its disguises is astronomical. Remember, the defensive brain trust is doing all it can to befuddle the quarterback who's planning to throw the football.

Basically, the zone defense does this: It divides the area to be defended against the pass into halves, or thirds, or fourths.

If the defense commits seven players to defend against the run, that means four players are standing back there to defend against the pass. So, if there are four, they each have one-quarter of the area to patrol.

If the defense commits eight to the run you'll wind up with a three-deep zone—so their part of the field becomes chopped into thirds. And if the defense has assigned nine to the run, two are left to defend the pass; consequently, they

All right! Pontiac's new specially equipped J2000 High Mileage Coupe is here. And with its standard four-cylinder engine and manual transmission, and without air conditioning and power steering, it offers you the kind of economy that makes road work a sheer pleasure.

Use the estimated mpg for comparison. Your mileage may differ depending on speed, distance, weather. Actual highway mileage lower. This coupe is not available in California, where the best J2000 highway estimate is 43, and EPA estimated mpg is 26.

Now the joy of our new J2000 Coupe doesn't end with good mileage. Once you ease into the cockpit, you'll know exactly what we mean. The standard fully reclining front bucket seats, striking instrument panel and floor-mounted 4-speed manual transmission with overdrive make it a driver's delight. There's also standard side window defoggers, a Delco-GM AM radio with integral digital clock (may be deleted for credit) and multi-function lever awaiting your every command.

Suddenly, driving is fun again. Standard front-wheel drive, rack and pinion steering and a taut suspension system help our J2000 Coupe uncurl corners and smooth out rough spots.

Of course, we knew you'd want a car that looks as good as it feels. So we gave this sporty new J2000 a wedge-shaped design that not only helps make it aerodynamic, but stylish as well. It adds up to one high mileage car you won't ever want to park.

So come on. Treat yourself to the new Pontiac J2000 High Mileage Coupe. Or any of our other exciting new J Generation models—2-door coupe, 3-door hatch, 4-door sedan, and 4-door wagon.

are dividing half the area.

Sounds simple, but a Big Eight Conference coach put it all into perspective.

"If you think it's complicated to write about," he said, "you oughta try to play it. Or coach it."

As you sit in the stadium, you should be able to spot the zone defense in passing situations. Become a real expert and

Johnny Jones at the left side of the field, Billy Bob Brown in the middle and Sammy Smith on the right. Now then. Close your eyes and picture a line between Jones and Brown. Jones is responsible for preventing a completion in his zone—up to that line—and Brown is responsible for his area—up to that line. That line is the seam and if the receiver

When the quarterback has time enough to spot his receivers, no defense can work to perfection.

you can impress your stadium neighbors by talking about "flooding the zone" or "splitting the seams."

Sure, some of them will want to argue. Some of them will tell you that the only way you can flood a zone is to have the skies open and four inches of rain fall during the second half. And your very own spouse might think "splitting the seam" is something that happened when his or her pants caught on the splintery stadium seat.

To flood a zone, the offense attempts to maneuver its receivers in such a way that there will be more people in an area trying to catch the football than there are defenders to keep them from it.

In a zone defense, there are seams. Unfortunately for those of us who only sit and watch, these are not marked on the field by men who paint or chalk the fields. But, there are imaginary lines between each zone being defended. Let's suppose it is a three-deep zone, with can wend his way onto that imaginary line it means Jones and Brown are going to have to travel farther to reach the intended receiver. The receiver, then, is "splitting" the seam.

Keeping those seams to a bare minimum is a high priority among coaches who use the zone defense.

Exploiting them is an offensive coordinator's dream.

"What you try to do is throw right on the boundaries of the defender's responsibilities. In other words, you throw on the fringes of the zone," said one coach.

"Whenever we know a team is going to run a two-deep zone, we feel we have to do something to attack the middle of those two zones," he concluded.

The problem, of course, is in knowing what's going to happen before it does.

Coaches get eye strain studying game films, looking for tendencies. They then try to plan an attack that will exploit defensive inclinations. The odds of successfully attacking the zone increase tremendously when an experienced quarterback, one who is able to read the defenses, leads the charge.

Just as the offense studies defensive tendencies, a defense must know, or try to know, its opponent. This is another reason for all the late-night studying prior to each game.

"If you're playing an offensive team that can't throw the ball with sophistication," says a Big Sky coach, "you are much better off using a two-deep zone because you then have nine men committed to defending the run."

"Now, if the team you're playing can only throw the football—and can't generate much of a running offense—then you're better off in a defensive concept committing only three or four people to the run and using seven in a zone defense."

A coach may also decide to give up certain zones, simply because he feels the offense isn't good enough to take advantage of them.

As you can see, chess was a game invented by football coaches.

College teams probably use the zone defense 80-85 percent of the time. But geographically, there don't appear to be any trends in teams that do, or do not, primarily use the zone.

All coaches agree—because it is fact—that no defense can work to perfection if the quarterback has time enough to spot his receivers.

"If a quarterback has all day," says a Big Eight coach, "he's going to find a receiver and complete the pass. I don't care what kind of defense he's facing and I don't care how well that defense is doing its job."

Sometimes, after more than 59 minutes of battle, everything comes down to the desperation bomb.

In the closing seconds offenses often will try a "numbers pass." Maybe that number is the five-yard line, the 10, the 15. Maybe the goal. Whatever the number, three receivers light out for it. They'll all meet there and hope one of them winds up with the football firmly grasped.

Two will go up for the ball and one hangs around for the rebound. The ball is just lobbed into the area. There will be at least two receivers there and one or two defenders. Or it could be three of each, or three and two. Whatever the number involved, it's the play that television thinks is the most exciting play in football.

"So do coaches, but we'll never admit it," says one mentor. "I guess that's because it's difficult to yell and act too excited when a lump is stuck in your throat."

TAILGATING AT THE GAME

Tailgate parties are one of the things that make college football so much fun. The game itself is important, of course, but the pre-game picnic is also something that fans look forward to.

And what would tailgate picnics be without the tantalizing smells that arise from all those barbecues! Many tailgaters are turning their pre-game get-togethers into real feasts by setting up their gas- or charcoal-burning grills and barbecuing all sorts of meats and vegetables.

A little creativity is all that's needed to produce exciting tailgate meals on your barbeque. Charmglow, the makers of the Bantam portable gas barbeque grill, have discovered lots of recipes that will make you the most successful tailgating barbequer in the parking lot—or wherever you're picnicking.

FLANKER BACK

1 flank steak for 4–6 people
½ cup chopped onions (green, red, white or combination)
1½ tsp. dill weed, oregano or curry powder

4 slices bacon

Turn grill on medium. Place bacon slices long way on steak. Sprinkle onions and spices over bacon and steak. Roll steak up longways as tightly as possible and secure with toothpicks. Cut between toothpicks into slices of desired width. Cook 5-6 minutes a side to desired doneness. 4-6 servings.

FOWL PLAY

6 boneless chicken breasts, skinned salt, pepper, garlic powder, oregano
3 small lemons cut in half

Turn grill on high. Pat chicken breasts dry with paper towels. Sprinkle both sides with spices. Sear chicken 30 seconds on each side. Turn grill to low. Cook chicken 4 minutes on each side. When done, squeeze juice of ½ lemon over each breast. May place chicken between hamburger buns or french rolls with sliced tomatoes, lettuce and relishes. 6 servings.

WELL-PLANTED KICK

1 large eggplant (sliced ½" thick)
1 cup olive oil
salt/pepper

Turn grill on low. Dip eggplant in olive oil and sprinkle salt and pepper on each side. Grill slowly, turning frequently, from 4 to 5 minutes on each side. 6 servings.

What the college coach is looking for in a high school recruit

by Marino Parascenzo, Pittsburgh POST-GAZETTE

The coach knows where to find that ideal football recruit. The kid's in a phone booth, stuffing himself into a button-down shirt, trying to hide the big red "S" on his blue jersey.

Coaches are ready to hand over the secret school cheer just to know where that phone booth is, though. In the meantime, they'll be content to settle for something less than Superman—"something less" being defined generally as the youngster who is big, strong, fast, quick, agile, intelligent, and so finely coordinated he can brush his teeth on the dead run.

high school recruit

continued

This concept of second best, upon examination, is the ideal. Alas, for the coaches he does not exist either, not with all of those qualities wrapped into one person. It is this truth that makes the recruiting of a football player part-science, part-art, part-prayer, and part-coin flip.

"We all go after the athlete. The great athlete is not hard to find. Everybody knows who he is," said one prominent eastern coach. "It is the sleeper who makes the difference."

Given the press of time and recruiting budgets, and more important the National Collegiate Athletic Association's limit of 30 scholarships per season, a coach must zero in quickly on prospects. Each prospect must meet certain ratings for the coach to spare the time and trouble even to consider him. Coaches, like eligible males, are wary of blind dates.

A running back, for example, should be over 5-0, weigh more than 180 pounds, and take less than 4.5 seconds to run the 40-yard dash. Offensive linemen should be at least 6-2, 240 pounds, and run the 40 in about five seconds. Defensive tackles should be taller and heavier, and can be only a bit slower. All of this—rough guidelines—falls into the art and science of recruiting.

Coaches will make exceptions, of course. That's where the prayer and coin flip come in.

"It happens every year," said a noted Southwest Conference coach. "We were in one young man's home. He wasn't real big or real strong, and he came from a small high school, which means his competition was suspect. When I left his home I thought, gee, he can never play for us. But my predecessor had pretty much committed the school to the kid, so I felt we had to take him."

"So what happens? This will be his third year as a starter."

The coach also recalls the year his quarterback corps went bankrupt.

"We had one chance," he said. "The kid was tall enough, about 6-feet-2. But he was skinny, only about 150 pounds. And he had no other scholarship offers, which tells you what the others thought of him."

"But his brother had been a great quarterback, and I knew that his family was late in maturing. So I thought, what the heck, let's take a chance."

The coach is still congratulating himself.

The reverse happens with about the same frequency. The case of the "can't-miss" player who misses is less spectacular—because he's never heard from—but equally surprising. A famed midwestern coach is still shaking his head over one player who was recruited by a cast of hundreds.

"The kid was everything we wanted. He was big enough and fast enough, and his statistics would simply overwhelm you," he said. "But when he came to us, nothing happened. I don't think there's a coach who hasn't experienced that."

"It puzzled me for some time. Then we finally figured it out—I think. The kid had had a great team around him in high school, and they played in a very weak league. His shortcomings never had a chance to show."

Another time this coach found happiness gambling at the other extreme. The prospect had enough qualities to tempt him, but also enough deficiencies to scare him away. He decided to have one last look. The kid was playing basketball. His team was getting whipped. But the kid led a fourth-quarter rally with a spirit and skill that nearly pulled the game out. The coach was witnessing one of the "intangibles" that coaches speak of, and he decided to take a chance. And he ended up with an All-America receiver.

Size, speed, weight—all can be measured. Agility can be seen. But there are other attributes that have to be sensed. Coaches call these "intangibles." They are difficult to define, perhaps impossible to measure.

"Coachable" is one of these. A Southeastern Conference coach gave his working definition of "coachable."

"The kid has to have a degree of intelligence and be willing to grow and extend himself," he said. "I don't mean a nicey-nicey yes-man, but a responsive kid."

Another eastern coach speaks of "athletic presence."

"A kid may not be the fastest guy, may not look as good," he said, "but there's a maturity, an athletic sense you try to find."

Said another coach from the South, "A kid who does what you tell him the first time, who doesn't make the same mistake over and over—he's coachable."

Maturity—or rather its onset—is perhaps of greater concern in the Ivy League than anywhere else, because freshmen cannot compete there.

"So," said one Ivy League coach, "we try to find players whose best football is ahead of them, starting with their sophomore year."

Coaches, gambling with precious scholarships, will look in every corner for a hint that they're on the right track. Sometimes even the family situation is useful.

"One thing that stood out in one home I visited," said a Pacific-10 coach, "is that there was a pretty good family spirit. There were a mother and father with good eye contact. Whether that's related to the kind of kid we're seeking—well, we'll find out."

Visiting a prospect in the comfort of his home can also reveal another kind of valuable information.

"Sometimes I leave a home and I say, I don't want that kid," the Southeastern Conference coach confessed. "He has a negative attitude. He might be a fine physical specimen, all right, but he might be a big problem, too."

The southern coach fleshed out that sentiment dramatically. "If the kid's a heck of a player on Saturday, but doesn't show up for practice, I don't want him," he said.

That may sound suspiciously old-fashioned, something out of Depression days, but the Pacific-10 coach finds it up-to-date.

"Yes, times change and this is a different time," he said. "But a 17-year-old kid is still a 17-year-old kid."

That's life in Division I football recruiting. Life is not a great deal different on the lower levels, though. It's just a matter of degree. The players in Division II and Division III are generally smaller, lighter, and perhaps a step slower. But, as the Ivy League coach puts it, "It's the size of a kid's heart that's important."

At a Division III school in the East, one with a towering academic reputation, the coach, rather new on the job, has produced a football reputation to match.

His recruiting approach is simple. He wants as much size, speed, etc., as he can get, but he does not waste his time chasing obvious Division I-caliber prospects. He is also limited by his school's academic standards, which have left him an unusual mix—50 percent of his players are engineering majors, 40 percent business majors, and the other 10 in such studies as drama, design, and architecture. It is a comparatively rare kid he pursues.

"And these," he said, "are my guidelines: football intelligence, willingness to work, ambition, dependability, and positive mental attitude."

"These are my own ideas, but I never pretended to be the first to have had them. And a funny thing happened. I was in our library one day and came across a newspaper story about a coach who spoke here once, and he listed those things as his guidelines."

"That newspaper story was 51 years old. And the coach who gave that speech was Knute Rockne."

- In 1865, rival New Jersey schools, the College of New Jersey (later Princeton) and Rutgers, disputed the rights to a Revolutionary War cannon; they agreed to settle the dispute via a football game—thus, that cannon can be considered football's first trophy. The two schools' football match was held on November 6, 1865. Some 25 students participated on each side, and Rutgers prevailed, 6-4. It is now generally agreed that this was the first intercollegiate football game.

- Walter Camp, known as the "Father of American Football," was responsible for numerous firsts. Among them:

- He was Yale's first football coach, in 1888, and later went West to become Stanford's first coach.

- While coaching at Yale, he used still photos of his players as a means to study and analyze their style of play; he is believed to have been the first coach to use photography as a coaching aid.

- Camp wrote the first national magazine story on college football, and also wrote the first book published on that subject.

- He collaborated with Caspar Whitney, editor of The Week's Sport, in selecting the first All-America team, in 1889.

- Army and Navy's football teams first met in a football match in 1890.

Famous Firsts In College Football

- The members of the first All-America team were:

E Hector Cumnock, Harvard
T Hector W. Cowan, Princeton
G John Cranston, Harvard
C William J. George, Princeton
G Wm. W. Heffelfinger, Yale
T Charles O. Gill, Yale
E A. Alonzo Stagg, Yale
Q Edgar Allen Poe, Princeton
H James T. Lee, Harvard
H R. H. Channing, Jr., Princeton
F Knowlton Ames, Princeton

- John Heisman may have been the first college football coach to be paid a salary, when he went to Clemson in 1900. Prior to that, coaching was a volunteer position.

- The first modern national champion in college football is considered to be the Yale team of 1900, coached by Malcolm McBride; Yale had a 12-0-0 record that year.

- The first Rose Bowl Game was played on January 1, 1902, between Michigan and Stanford; Michigan won, 49-0.

- Coach Amos Alonzo Stagg was the first to number players' uniforms and the first to award letters to his players.

- In 1915 it was decided that numbering players' uniforms should be mandatory for all college teams.

- The first Homecoming game was played in 1910, with Illinois hosting Chicago.

- In his first year as head coach at Michigan, in 1948, Bennie Oosterbaan won the national championship.

- Fordham University and Waynesburg College played in the first televised football game, on October 5, 1940.

- The first Heisman Trophy winner was Chicago's Jay Berwanger, in 1935.

- Doc Blanchard of Army was the first player to win the Heisman as a junior, in 1945.

- The first time that football uniforms were worn by a college team was in an 1875 Yale-Harvard game.

- Helmets were worn for the first time in 1896; before that, players simply wore headbands to keep their hair out of their eyes.

- Dr. William Conant was the first team doctor, for Harvard in 1890.

- The first college team to use the two-platoon system was Michigan, in 1945 under Fritz Crisler.

- A scoring point system was first established in 1883.

- The first Outland Trophy winner was Notre Dame's George Connor, in 1946.

The "my kid fooled with the alarm" nightmare.

The "I need to know the weather and every station's playing music" nightmare.

The "two different wake-up times, one alarm clock" nightmare!

The "there's a power failure and my clock doesn't know what time it is" nightmare.

The last thing you should lose sleep over is your clock radio. That's why when the time comes, make sure you buy a Panasonic. We have AM/FM clock radios to solve every problem a clock radio could give you.

Our clock radios do just about everything but tuck you in. Many are equipped with Sure Time—Panasonic's battery backup system* that keeps time internally even if there's a power failure. Most models have childproof controls to make sure you wake up when you planned. And a fluorescent digital display. There's a model with two alarm settings for couples who get up at different times. Another gives you 24 hours of continuous weather.[†]

All models have a doze alarm. A sleep timer to smooth your way into slumber. Great sound, of course. And every Panasonic clock radio has something you won't get from anybody else—a two-year warranty.^{††} We want you to rest easy, even when you're not sleeping! You see, what time you go to sleep is your business. But what time you get up—that's ours.

HOW THE OFFICIALS PREPARE

Watching two college football teams going through their pre-game calisthenics on the field, most fans are aware of the spartan training habits the young warriors have undergone to prepare themselves for the upcoming combat.

Here are two teams with a combined total of more than 100 people, all of whom have been drilled many hours for this moment. Their coaches have honed their abilities into razor-sharp readiness. At kickoff time, 11 players on one end of the field will race toward 11 on the other end. The orderly chaos will begin.

But what of the men who make order from this chaos? Has one fan in the stadium thought about the six men on the field in the zebra-like shirts; how they, too, must prepare for this moment?

Fans might be surprised at how diligently these men work and train, both physically and mentally, in an effort to attain near-perfection in plying their trade.

For most officials, conditioning is a year-round process. Some stay in shape by running, jogging, playing tennis, golfing and swimming. Some walk a lot. Many work out in health spas, lifting weights.

"The games are physically and mentally exhausting," admits one official. "If I weren't in top shape, I couldn't make it through the fourth quarter."

In the spring, most conference offices send rules changes to all officials so they can review them during spring training. Later, in the summer (the timing may vary from conference to conference), the conference offices mail new rules books, incorporating all the changes that have been made. At the same time, the officials take written examinations (approx-

Stress can rob you of vitamins

What is stress?

Severe injury or infection, physical overwork, too many martini lunches, fad dieting—any condition that places an unusual demand upon your body constitutes stress and may cause B and C vitamin depletion, if the diet is inadequate.

Vitamins the body can't store.

Your body absorbs two kinds of vitamins from the food you eat: fat-soluble and water-soluble. Substantial reserves of the fat-soluble vitamins are accumulated in body tissues. But this is not true of most of the water-soluble vitamins, B-complex and C. They should be replaced every day.

When your vitamin needs are increased by stress, your body may use up more B and C vitamins than your usual diet can provide. When that stress is prolonged, a vitamin deficiency can develop.

STRESSTABS® 600 High Potency Stress Formula Vitamins can help.

STRESSTABS® 600 has a single purpose: to help you avoid a B-complex and C vitamin deficiency. With 600 mg of vitamin C, and B-complex vitamins, high potency STRESSTABS® 600 can help restore your daily supply of these important vitamins.

STRESSTABS® 600 also contains the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance of vitamin E.

A stress formula to meet a woman's need for iron.

STRESSTABS® 600 with Iron combines the basic STRESSTABS formula with 150% of the Recommended Daily Allowance of iron, plus folic acid and more B₆, to help satisfy the special nutritional needs of many young women.

STRESSTABS® 600 with Zinc.

Because zinc requirements have also been found to increase during various forms of stress, it has recently been concluded that there are times when your body may need more zinc.

STRESSTABS® by Lederle. The Stress Formula Vitamins preferred by physicians.

Doctors have relied upon the quality of Lederle medicines, vaccines and research for over 70 years.

Today, that same quality goes into STRESSTABS®, recommended by doctors more often than any other stress formulas.

imately 100 true-false questions), which they must answer and return to the conference offices.

Once the season begins, an official's job intensifies. Meanwhile, the conditioning continues, especially during the week before an official must hop on a plane for his assignment.

The six-man crew (referee, head linesman, umpire, field judge, line judge and back judge) usually meets on a Friday evening for dinner. They talk football, discuss rules, review what someone heard or saw in a game the week before. It's a general session, but it's mental preparation, too.

"We'll usually relax and go to bed early if it's an afternoon game on Saturday. If it's a night game, we'll all watch the televised game. Each of us watches his own position and reviews what's going on. It helps prepare us for our own game coming up," says one referee.

Officials meet at the stadium prior to a game about four hours before kickoff. Once again they go over the rules and each man's responsibilities.

"Everyone knows where to be, but this keeps it fresh in our minds," says one official. "It adds to the team effort. We go over all the new rules changes, particularly early in the season. We discuss new bulletins sent out by the conference office. For instance, looking at a game film the week before they may have noticed the head linesman leaving the line of scrimmage too fast, that there was movement and no one was in position to see it.

"A cardinal sin in officiating is being out of position and missing a call. That and the inability to detect a foul. That's really bad and that's why it's so important to review areas of responsibility."

About an hour before gametime, the referee and umpire go to each coach's dressing room. They remind the coaches of technical things—that players must have their mouthpieces in and headgear snapped, that the captain is the only player who can call a timeout.

"We also inspect injured players in their dressing rooms with the trainers," says one referee. "We do not discuss the other team's problems."

"We also ask about any unusual plays so we can be ready for them. Some coaches will tell us about using unbalanced lines on certain plays, quick pitches on certain occasions, running post patterns on kickoffs, punt returns with exchanges and the like. We remind them of what's necessary on these occasions."

Officials have run into problems by using a "quick" whistle. In an attempt to prevent an injury, officials have missed proper calls because of blowing the whistle too quickly.

"We stress that," says one official. "We are not to blow our whistles until we actually see the ball loose and then recovered, for instance, on a fumble."

"In the past few years, there has been a tendency to confer with other officials on difficult plays. One official may see a 'trapped' pass catch that is blocked from view by another official. It helps eliminate the doubt element in the fans' minds. But there have been some calls or non-calls that would have been better off if one official had immediately called them."

Because of television, today's football fans are more sophisticated and knowledgeable, so an official can't afford to be caught out of position.

During every game, a conference observer is on hand to grade each game official. Any game official getting a low grade by the observer is called for a conference with the league commissioner. Any time a coach questions an official or the behavior of an official, the commissioner also meets with the official for discussions.

tool."

Most officials have intense pride in their work and, confides one, "It is a labor of love. That's why most of us welcome any way we can improve."

"Many times the criticism is leveled at officials that 'Well, this is just a weekend job for you, it's not your livelihood.' But I have to say in all honesty that we are just as dedicated as every team that walks out onto the field. Toward that end we prepare as thoroughly and professionally as we can."

So, today when you look down on the field and see the teams preparing for the game, take a minute to reflect on the men in striped shirts, their thoughts, their preparations and their responsibilities and how difficult their jobs are.

What separates the champions from everyone else is the ability to duplicate their achievements.

XEROX

The College Football Hall of Fame

Imagine, if you will, a Hall of Fame devoid of musty little rooms where memories hang heavily along drably painted walls and trophies lose their glitter in dim-lit shadow boxes.

Visualize, instead, a football Hall of Fame which honors its great players, coaches and personalities in bright attitudes of achievement. Picture tele-screens bringing men and matter to life, where the late Knute Rockne "talks" of legends and "Red" Grange gallops again. See yourself matching wits with history's most successful coaches or testing your knowledge of the game in a computer quiz.

These experiences are reality at the National Football Foundation's College Football Hall of Fame at Kings Island, the 1600-acre family entertainment center, situated along Interstate-71 north of Cincinnati. The facility promises more than a past-tense presentation of gridiron glory. To the contrary, you will discover football excitement in a modern mood, blending multimedia concepts in a unique, fun-filled learning process.

Aligned with the National Football Foundation's dedication to educate and inspire Americans through the principles of football, the building, dedicated on August 3, 1978, has been hailed as the Hall of Fame of the future.

Jaques Cattell Press, in its recently released The Big Book Of Halls Of Fame, foresees the visitor getting "to know the game of college football intimately within 2-3 hours" or attaining "in 10 minutes a first-name kind of friendship with a famous college football star of the past."

Indeed, this personalized approach is an integral part of the Hall. Exhibits bring the total college football experience to life via action-oriented attractions which invite your participation. Within a campus-like framework of Georgian-Colonial architecture, the building houses a wonderland of fact and fun certain to appeal to each member of the family—male and female, young and old.

For example, a touch of the telescreen keyboard conjures up the legends of Jim Thorpe, Tom Harmon, Bronko Nagurski, "Whizzer" White, Pop Warner or any of the 453 players and coaches enshrined in the Hall. The computer gives you ready access to information on the Hall of Famers, according to name, school, state or season.

You may want to meander through the "Time Tunnel," which traces the history of football from its earliest beginning as a Greek game called Harpaston, played in 478 B.C., to its modern version. Walk along the cobblestones of Merry Old England and learn how King Henry II outlawed the sport when his archers spent more time kicking a ball than drawing their bows. Leave the ancient days of football's development, passing through a Civil War tent and into the blossoming evolution of the game as a uniquely American sport.

Four theatres provide cinematic insight into great teams and individuals, classic contests, bowl highlights and rib-tickling football follies. Wide-eyed youngsters can enjoy Hanna-Barbera's Fred Flintstone in an "explanation" of football rules. A 250-seat Grandstand Theatre records the game's Golden and Modern eras in film and slides.

And, yes you will witness Notre Dame's legendary Knute Rockne—in a specially-produced animated form—deliver his famous pep talks in the "Locker Room," sponsored by Chevrolet. The reincarnated Rockne urges you to "Win One For The Gipper" or "Fight, Fight, Fight," recalling some of the most inspirational moments in football. That's not all! Many other coaches are featured in Locker Room screenings.

The computerized "Strategy Room" is set to offer exciting games to test your skill and judgment in situations familiar to the nation's coaches. Tackle a computer quiz and "make the team," moving from Recruit to Coach, all based upon your knowledge of football and its history.

Or, for some real fun, step up to the tee and kick a "game-winning" field goal. Be careful, though! There are cheers if you make it, boos if you miss.

The new Hall of Fame offers college football's color, excitement and pageantry as an extension of the already popular family entertainment theme of Kings Island. Taft Broadcasting Company, owner of Kings Island, is managing the Hall of Fame under the direction of the National Football Foundation.

The traveling gourmet can enjoy the Island's International Restaurant; the golfer, a tour of the Jack Nicklaus Golf Center, site of the 1978 Ladies Professional Golf Association Championship.

Overnight guests can relax amid the Swiss chalet charm of the 300-room Kings Island Inn or use the Kings Island Campground.

FOOTBALL FACTS

You may be your team's No. 1 fan, but how knowledgeable are you when it comes to the rules and regulations of college football? Below are a few of the rules set forth by the NCAA, for your edification.

- The football used in college football must meet strict specifications, among them:
 - Cover consisting of four panels of pebble-grained leather without corrugations other than seams
 - Natural tan color
 - Inflated to the pressure of 12½-13½ pounds
 - Weight 14 to 15 ounces
- Illegal equipment is equipment worn by a player which, in the umpire's opinion, would confuse the player's opponents or endanger other players. Such equipment includes artificial limbs.
- As opposed to current practices in pro ball, college players may not wear any slippery substance, such as grease, on their skin or clothing.
- Every player must wear a number at least 8-10 inches in height on the front and back of his jersey, and if his jersey is torn so that the number isn't visible, he must either leave the game for one down or be charged with a team timeout to repair or replace the jersey.
- No incoming substitute or replaced player may be on the field while the ball is in play, and substitutes who become players must remain in the game for one play.
- A team may play legally with fewer than 11 players if the following requirements are met:
 - At least five men are within five yards of the restraining line when receiving a free kick.
 - At the snap, there are at least seven men on the offensive scrimmage line.
- If live-ball fouls by both teams are reported to the referee, the penalties cancel each other and the down is replayed.
- The referee has general oversight and control of the game, while the umpire has primary jurisdiction over the equipment and conduct of the players.

THIS IS PACIFIC

PROUD TRADITION, BRIGHT FUTURE

Founded in 1851 as California's first chartered university, University of the Pacific has developed a reputation as one of the finest academic institutions in the West.

The only private school in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association, Pacific offers a diversity of programs that would normally be associated with a much larger university than the 6,000 students currently attending classes at the main campus in Stockton, Sacramento and San Francisco.

Pacific is now comprised of 10 schools and colleges, including a dental school in San Francisco and McGeorge School of Law in Sacramento. On the main campus in Stockton are two liberal arts colleges and schools of music, engineering, education, pharmacy, business and public administration and a graduate school.

The liberal arts colleges include College of the Pacific, the largest arts and sciences college with more than 50 major programs and Elbert Covell College, the only Spanish-speaking college in the United States.

Throughout Pacific, the emphasis is on teaching, although research is recognized as having a need in the various disciplines.

The students at the university are represented on nearly all policy-making committees and the Associated Students play an active role in campus life through social and cultural programs for the community. The Stockton metropolitan area, with a population of more than 175,000, is also the scene of many programs that take the students off campus in a multitude of community involvement and work experience activities.

The university athletic program has excelled in conjunction with its proud academic heritage. Such names as Amos Alonzo Stagg, Eddie LeBaron, Dick Bass, Tom Flores, John Gianelli and Ron Cornelius have graced the UOP athletic fields and courts.

In 1981, Pacific will dedicate the 6,000-seat Alex G. Spanos Center. This on-campus facility, named for UOP regent and benefactor Alex G. Spanos, will be the home of several Tiger athletic teams as well as other university and community functions.

The University has been directed by President Stanley E. McCaffrey for the past 10 years. McCaffrey is currently on a one-year leave of absence as President of Rotary International. Serving as acting president will be Dr. Clifford Hand.

Stockton, renowned for its inland, deep water port, is located in the Central Valley of California, 75 miles east of San Francisco and 50 miles south of Sacramento. It is within easy driving distance of Lake Tahoe, the scenic national parks of the Sierra Nevada, the picturesque wine country of Napa and Sonoma Valleys and the Bay Area.

ATHLETIC DIRECTOR

Since taking over as UOP athletic director from Dr. Cedric Dempsey in July of 1979, Elkin "Ike" Isaac has set the Tiger athletic department on a course that is sound financially and on the athletic field.

Isaac's two years guiding the UOP program have seen an upgrading of the football program, the opening of the 6,000-seat Spanos Center on campus, the rise to national prominence of the women's volleyball team under Coach Terry Liskevych and the vast improvement of the entire women's program.

Isaac, 58, a professor of kinesiology and trainer at UOP for four years before becoming first interim and then full-time athletic director, is not new to his current position.

He served in a similar post at Albion (Michigan) College for 15 years (1959-74). Before stepping up as Albion's athletic director, Isaac was the school's head basketball, track and cross country coach for seven seasons (1953-59), winning one league basketball championship, seven track titles and four cross country crowns.

Isaac received a B.A. from Albion in 1948 and earned his masters there in 1950. He is married (wife Edith), has a son (Ron) and a daughter (Sue).

THE PCAA

A CONFERENCE ON THE MOVE

The Pacific Coast Athletic Association is moving all right. It's moving up. With each passing year, the young PCAA continues to increase its prestige in the world of intercollegiate athletics.

In just its 13th year of existence, the PCAA includes six member schools in football—University of the Pacific, Long Beach State, San Jose State, Utah State, Fresno State and Cal State Fullerton. The competitive balance of this lineup is amply demonstrated by the fact that during the past four years, four different schools have won or shared the conference crown in football.

In addition to being competitive on the gridiron, the PCAA is also one of the most exciting conferences in the nation. Known nationwide for the pass-oriented philosophies of its teams, the PCAA ranks among the best in the country at throwing the football, year-in and year-out.

The league has developed some impressive credentials in a number of areas. Its teams and individual stars consistently show up in the NCAA's Statistical Rankings, during the past two seasons teams such as Iowa State, Washington State, Baylor, Utah and Oregon State have fallen to PCAA teams and over that same span, 19 PCAA players have been drafted by the NFL clubs.

Under the dynamic guidance of Commissioner Lew Cryer, the conference has earned a reputation of excellence on the field and innovative thinking off it. In Cryer's term, the PCAA has expanded to its current eight schools (UC Irvine and UC Santa Barbara do not play football), became the first conference in the West to play a postseason basketball tournament to pick its representative to the NCAA Playoffs and seen its teams win two NCAA championships (UCSB in water polo and Cal State Fullerton in baseball).

...and in 1981 the California Bowl

For the first time, in 1981, the Pacific Coast Athletic Association champion will go to a postseason bowl game. On Dec. 19, at 1:00 P.M. (tentative kick-off), the PCAA titlist will face the champion of the Mid-American Conference in the inaugural California Bowl in Fresno.

The contest, the newest of the nation's 16 bowl games will be played in the new, 30,000-seat Fresno State Stadium and will be televised by the Mizlou Television Network out of New York.

The new facility was funded by community donations and features natural turf, a computer-operated scoreboard and a field 37-feet below ground level, insuring a good view from all seats.

Sponsoring the California Bowl is the Greater San Joaquin Valley Sports Association. Retired Congressman B.F. "Bernie" Sisk is the organization's President, Ron Metzler serves as Executive Vice-President and Winslow "Wink" Chase is the Executive Director (Chase was formerly Assistant to the Commissioner for the PCAA).

The Valley Children's Hospital and Guidance Clinic has been designated the game's official charitable beneficiary and will receive any profit derived from the game.

The winning team will receive a sculpted trophy designed especially for the California Bowl.

TICKET OFFICES

The Tiger Ticket Office in the athletic department building on campus is open from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday—Friday, and from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. on game Saturdays (8:30 a.m.—11:00 a.m. on day games). The ticket booth southwest of the stadium on Pershing Avenue is open two hours before kickoff on game days. Ticket Office phone number is 946-2474.

LOST AND FOUND

Lost and found items should be given to a stadium usher or brought to the pressbox on the west side of the stadium. During the week, check with UOP Security.

LOST CHILDREN

Lost children should be brought to the pressbox on the west side of the stadium.

PUBLIC ADDRESS SYSTEM

All announcements must be approved by the Sports Information Director. No special announcements will be made except in case of gravest emergency. Any other announcements should be cleared with sports information office (946-2472) the week prior to the game. Those expecting emergency calls should leave word with the SID or at the pressbox during the game.

REST ROOMS/ CONCESSION STANDS

Rest rooms and concession stands are located on the rim of the stadium behind sections O, H, and ZZ.

FIRST AID

A trained nurse is present throughout the game at the pressbox on the west side of the stadium. In addition, the UOP team physician is present on the field with a mobile life support unit in cases of severe medical problems.

PACIFIC CLUB

The Pacific Club, a 1972 gift to the University by alumnus and regent Alex Spanos, is on the east side of the stadium and is one of the finest stadium club facilities in the country. Club privileges, as well as theatre-seating below the club, are reserved for members of the Pacific Athletic Foundation. For information, contact PAF Executive Director Mike Milhaupt, 946-2472.

ATHLETIC FEATURE

IMPROVED ATTACK PROMPTS FIELD HOCKEY SUCCESS

With the 1981 season just two thirds over, the UOP field hockey team has already put itself in the record book for the most wins and most goals in a season. With a 9-4-1 record and victories over opponents like Stanford, UC Davis and defending NorCal champion Chico State, Coach Carla Konet's Lady Tigers are a team of the present and future. They've even managed to get some votes in the NCAA's top 10 poll.

The difference between this and last year's team, which finished 5-8-2 and wound up last in NorCal is scoring—or more precisely, players who can put the ball in the net. Nine different Lady Tigers have tallied at least one goal to date, compared to five all of last year.

Leading the way have been junior JC transfers Nance Mercado and Laryl Belles with four apiece. The pair transferred to Pacific along with Denise Dickinson from the Golden West JC team that took the 1980 State JC title.

"Nance and Laryl have played together for two years and have an excellent background in fundamentals and have played on a championship team," said Konet. "And Denise has been our most consistent player. She's a definite All-NorCal candidate."

Other new faces have also been instrumental in the Lady Tiger surge. Freshmen links Luci Lagrimas (three goals) and Veronica Aguilar (one goal and two assists), both from San Diego, have helped add offensive punch.

"Luci and Roni are the two best freshmen in the conference," said the third-year coach. "They have strong fundamentals and are aggressive and fast."

Konet was able to concentrate on offense during recruiting because the entire defense returned from a team that allowed just 22 goals in 15 games. The defensive backbone then and now is senior goalkeeper Megan Brick. She has lowered her goals against average from 1980's 1.47 to 1.00 and has blocked 194 shots.

"Megan is the best goalkeep in NorCal," said Konet matter-of-factly. "She has all the attributes of a top quality player—confidence, experience and good technique."

Playing in front of Brick are seniors Mary Cusick, a four-year starter, and Diana McCue and sophomore Carmela Villafuerte. McCue starred in UOP's 1-0 upset of Stanford at the Long Beach Invitational in September.

"Diana is an offensive-minded defender who causes things to happen," said Konet. "She's got an excellent shot and can dominate a game."

Other key players for the Lady Tigers are captain and four-year starter Pat Mushrim, sophomores Laura Kuhn and Ruth Young and freshmen Laura Brown, Sandra Saunders and Shelly Wenger.

Another important addition has been full-time assistant coach Karen Prochaska, a standout player from Ohio State, who's worked primarily with the defense and conditioning.

How successful Konet's squad can ultimately become will be determined over the next few weeks when the Lady Tigers face the toughest portion of the schedule. This weekend they are playing in the prestigious Cal Invitational against such top teams as Stanford, Long Beach State, Washington State, Chico State, UC Davis and Cal.

Although Pacific now stands 1-2 in NorCal play and will be hard pressed to win the loop title, they still have an outside shot at receiving an at-large bid to the AIAW championships to be held in Connecticut in mid-November.

BOOSTER PROFILE

DR. CLARENCE LUCKEY

Since coming to Stockton 34 years ago, Dr. Clarence Luckey has supported University of the Pacific and the Tiger athletic program in a variety of ways. Most important has been his personal effort on behalf of those athletes (and students) who have suffered injuries requiring orthopedic treatment beyond the scope of the school's regular trainers and physicians.

One of the area's finest orthopedic surgeons, the 67-year-old Luckey has devoted countless hours over the years to treating the wide range of back, knee and shoulder injuries that have stricken young people at Pacific.

Born in Nebraska, Luckey attended Medical School at University of Nebraska, interned at Alameda County Hospital in Oakland and did his orthopedic training at the prestigious Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minnesota.

He's a member of the American Board of Orthopedic Surgeons, the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons, the Western Orthopedic Association and is a founding member of the American Society for Surgery of the Hand.

In addition to his time and effort spent on UOP athletes in his profession, Luckey has donated several valuable pieces of equipment to the Pacific football weight room, helping make it one of the finest in the country. The nautilus compound leg press and the AMF hip and leg press machines, as well as 2,000 pounds of free weight—all of which can be used in rehabilitating knees and legs after injuries—were gifts from Luckey. In other words, the doctor has done a lot of good things for a lot of fortunate Pacific students for a lot of years.

Luckey has two daughters, Judy and Janet, and a son, Tom, who is a developer in Stockton and also a supporter of UOP.

CALIJA MAKES SPANOS CENTER OPENING A SMOOTH ONE

New buildings and Ellis Calija just seem to go together. The 34-year-old manager of University of the Pacific's A.G. Spanos Center has spent the last seven years opening new facilities, breaking them in and getting them running smoothly.

A native of Sacramento, Calija (pronounced Cah-LEE-uh) joined the UOP staff in August and was immediately faced with the task of getting the building and support staff ready for the Sept. 11-13 opening and then a women's volleyball game Sept. 14. It doesn't sound too easy, but to the outside observer, things came off without a hitch.

"It was pretty hectic, because we did everything in such a short time," said Calija, who is responsible for the box office, concessions, coordinating security and ushering as well as scheduling and booking in the 6,000-seat complex. "The whole opening was actually coordinated in about two weeks time." Calija's background and expertise made the job easier.

A 1971 recreation administration graduate of Sacramento State, Calija was working as a recreation coordinator for Special Youth Programs in Sacramento when he got his first real taste of the profession becoming Events Coordinator of the new Sacramento Convention Center in 1974. After two and a half years putting together concerts, trade shows and conventions there, he was named manager of UC Davis' newly-constructed, 9,000-seat Rec Hall.

After hiring all staff, forming policies and procedures and directing the operation of Rec Hall for three years, Calija was hired as the stage manager at Caesar's newly-acquired casino in Lake Tahoe. It was a position he accepted with mixed emotions.

"It was different from any other work I had done and didn't really utilize the skills and experiences I had developed," said Calija, who coordinated all of the technical requirements (sound, lights, special effects and needs) for some of the biggest shows in Tahoe. "It dealt a lot with public relations and isn't what I was really cut out for." Calija left the bright lights, stars and salary of the casino, hotel, convention center complex for the more low-key atmosphere of UOP.

"I applied for the Spanos Center position because I felt I would be more involved in all aspects of the building operation and not just one like I was at Caesar's," said Calija. "My experience is in multi-use facilities and here, I'm doing more than ever." He's impressed with his new surroundings.

events will be on tap in the near future.

Ellis Calija, manager of the Spanos Center

"Architecturally, the Spanos Center is one of the nicest I've been in." . . . "It has a very intimate atmosphere and design, a very comfortable building."

"Architecturally, the Spanos Center is one of the nicest I've been in," said Calija. "It has a very intimate atmosphere and design, a very comfortable building." And as manager, he hopes to have it filled often.

"Hopefully, we'll be able to make it as flexible as possible and attract as many people as we can in the future," he said. "Within reason, we'd like to have as many events as possible."

"We want to provide a variety of programs for the community and students and meet their needs as well as possible." UOP basketball and volleyball are the primary inhabitants of the facility now, but concerts, conventions and special

The $7.0 million facility seats 6,000 for sporting events and has the capacity to expand to 8,000 seats in the future with minimum alteration. Three thousand seats are bleacher style and the remaining 3,000 feature chairbacks.

Built by F&H Construction of Stockton, the building has four main entrances on the concourse level, 20 feet above the floor. The structure includes team rooms, referee quarters and area for two cross courts.

Glue-laminated beams (instead of steel) have been used to support the roof of the Spanos Center and the longest of these timbers spans 248 feet.

The arena is being paid for through private donations and monies raised by community volunteers comprising the Spanos Center Steering Committee.

The complex is named after UOP benefactor Alex G. Spanos, a Pacific graduate and Stockton-based businessman. He is a member of the University's Board of Regents.

MATT WALDRON

Tipping Off the Spanos Center Era

Fourteen exciting home games, including the first annual Casaba Club Classic, will be on tap for Tiger basketball fans in 1981-82 as the UOP basketball team moves its home to the beautiful, 6,000-seat A.G. Spanos Center.

Although the Tigers lose All-American Ron Cornelius, their all-time leading scorer, Head Coach Dick Fichtner is looking forward to another successful season. He has good reason, with nine players returning, four of them starters.

Leading the way will be talented, 6-7 senior forward Matt Waldron, who finished second to Cornelius in both scoring and rebounding last year. An All-PCAA candidate, Waldron be joined by fellow starters Laurence Held, Ralph Scozzafava and Norm Edwards.

Besides Waldron and Held, Fichtner can also call on senior captain Rick Paulsen, junior Steve Howard and sophomore Graham Taylor in the frontcourt. Highly-regarded sophomores Jeff Andrade and John Leidenheimer will battle Scozzafava and Edwards, both seniors, for starting spots in the backcourts.

Fichtner will also have four freshmen recruits on the 1981-82 roster. The best known of the newcomers is local star Rich Anema, a 6-8, forward from Lodi. His freshmen teammates are forward Kevin Crabtree, swingman Andy Rodgers and 6-11, center David Karkenny.

Get your season tickets now by calling (209) 946-2475. That's UOP Basketball at the A.G. Spanos Center.
