Selected Developments in California Law

Introduction

The editors and staff of the Pacific Law Journal are pleased to present Selected Developments in California Law, a new section of the Journal devoted to analysis of significant new California case law. The impetus and groundwork for the new section came from our predecessors, the Board of Editors of Volume 16, and has been implemented under the supervision of the Comment Department of Volume 17.

The primary purpose of the Pacific Law Journal at its inception seventeen years ago was to provide analysis and commentary concentrated upon California law. Although the scope of the Journal has expanded to serve a broader readership, the editors are mindful of our tradition of special service to the California Bar. To parallel the analysis of recent state legislation found in our annual Review of Selected California Legislation, the new Developments section will focus on recent significant decisions in California courts. The intent of the Board of Editors is that the addition of this section will enable our readers to utilize the Journal as a resource for the full scope of California legislative and judicial developments.
