book. May we put you on record as having liked it, or is there anything that you would care to say yourself? The book is having a good sale for its first season, and a second edition is in progress, — hence the circular.

It may interest you to know that "John Muir" is on my list of recommended reading which I use in my Freshman Composition, and that his work and his interpretation of wild nature have won more than once the spoken of in my classes. I am trying to make them feel, among other things, the beauty of the out-of-doors, and "John Muir" is one of my means to that end.

Sincerely yours,

My dear Mr. Muir:

Some time since I sent to you for your contemplation a copy of my book of address papers, entitled "Around an Old Homestead", the receipt of which you very pleasantly acknowledged. The publishers are now about to issue a new circular of it, and wish to include the names of a few of those who have liked the
