Martinez, Nov. 23. [1907]

Dear Mr. Colby:

That is a capital reply of yours to the Call editorial. I didn't think they would publish it, or take any notice of it. They did, however, in another editorial in the Sunday Call, wh. [which] I suppose you have seen. It is very feeble and apologetic, and can do us no harm.

Charlie Keeler was invited to the Berkeley promotion banquet, but stayed away because he did not care to listen to Manson, and felt that he could not volunteer to speak, and was not requested to do so.

I was in S.F. yesterday with Helen to see Dr. Moffitt. She is still feeble, and was hardly able to walk from boat to cars, and to the Doctor's upstairs office. She is going to see him again Friday. He is not yet able to report, but spoke encouragingly.

I will let you see the Stanislaus letter when I can lay my hands upon it.

John Muir.
