January 15, 1913.

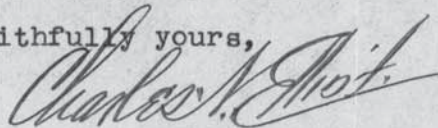

Dear Mr. Muir:-

The copy of your little BIG book "E.H.Harriman" arrived last week. I had not expected you to send me one yourself, but hoped merely that you would write the publishers to consider me a librarian, to the end that I might obtain a copy. Needless, however, for me to say how much more I prize this book which has been handled by its author and which contains the inscription in his handwriting. I truly thank you.

I trust that you will receive the little calendar which I had my daughter, Romaine, paint and make up for you. It is nothing - but let it be, as it is, a small but visible token of the love and admiration in which you are held in our household.

With sincere regards, believe me, ever

Faithfully yours,
