Dear Mr. Muir:

I observe that your "National Parks" is copyrighted by you, and not by the publisher. In consequence with Edwin Markham's review I should like to run some extracts from the book, particularly from the chapter on the animals of Yosemite. Will you kindly permit me to print about 2500 words? The "Atlantic" has always been willing. I am sure it will not interfere with the sale of the book. But rather attract attention to it and help a little toward creating public interest in it.

I ordered from a bookshop today a copy of Markham's latest book of verse, to be sent to you. You will probably receive it Monday or Tuesday. I feel instinctively that you will like "The Mendocino Memory" and the Driscoll marches verse. Speaking of marches, while lately in New York I asked Sidney Davis son, editor of Everybody's Magazine, why he didn't find and print something like his father's "Marches of Ellyon". He said it was hardly possible to find it, and that if he got it he wouldn't print it, as it was too good for readers of a cheap magazine. I suppose you are acquainted with Davis. I think his was a great soul.

Sincerely
Millard
