Darling Helen:-

I hope your geraniums are all sprouting and reddening your little home.

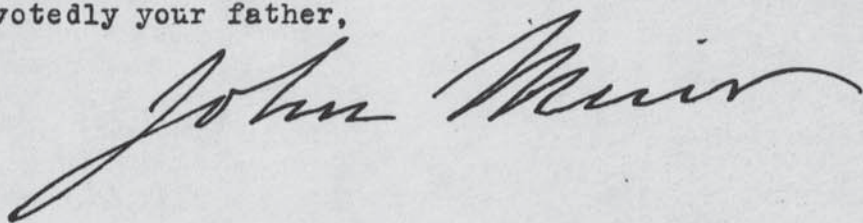

I have now been here about two weeks and am pegging away, as usual, on that Young Folks Book.

I want to hear from you to make sure that you are well.

I have not heard from home since I came down here, but no doubt they are all happy and industrious getting their grapes to market.

Remember me to Buel and all the other friends of your rosy cozy desert.

Ever devotedly your father,
