Darling Helen:

All's well here. The trip in the hot cars seem to have done me no ill, but the rain & the fog, the dimness & darkness & mud-and-ud are most mirey & melancholy - glad you're not here but in the dry rosy desert howling with healthy gales & gravel.

I hope to get word from you today that you feel no ill effect from that hurried walk to the station.

Here are two clippings, show them to Dick & the Judge, The light diet is good. Always acknowledge my letters giving dates, for I fear some may be lost by the irregular mail arrangements. I've sold three more Valona lots.

Ever your devoted father & friend,
John Muir
