Darling Helen. How are you now?

I always think of you, especially in black foggy rainy lung-choking weather, This day is one of the darkest of the melancholy winter. How the rain pours & the Alhambra Creek roars after being silent for 3 years

I'm so glad these storms don't reach your desert.

I've been Guppi-choked several weeks but am getting better by keeping close to my den fire. I hope you got some grocery odds & ends I ordered a week or two ago.

Ever your devoted father

John Muir
