Dear Mrs Parsons:

I fondly hope you are bravely making your way through this weary lonely pilgrimage sustained by God's grace & hope of glad meeting in the Better Land.

Let nothing I said in my last letter influence you in the least against your own judgment. & the advice of the Cobbs. Should you conclude to go on the Club outing in July it would make no difference in your work on my book

For I'm writing all of it over again, with few exceptions and therefore August will be soon enough to begin copying

Ever Your Friend John Muir
