Wednesday afternoon

I scribbled a few words to you this morning while the train was moving back and forth at the station. Georgie had written ~~one~~ ^{letter} and picked up mine in a hurry and gave them to the porter who ran to the post office with them. She must have sent the 2 cards that were directed to John, as I cannot find them, but how ridiculous to send a card without writing on it. We leave in the midst of the great Mahan desert, and how do you think I feel when I think of 1849
