Berkeley.

My dear Mr. Muir,

Thank you
many, many times for coming on Saturday evening. I am grateful for the pleasure you gave to me and my friends. They have expressed themselves as having heard a tale never to be forgotten.
What a way you have of de-lighting people!

I have regretted that some friends were unable to hear you, as Prof. Clapp, Bradley, Gayley, Le Conte, and Prof. Anderson from Palo Alto, in whose family Typhoid fever has had sway for six weeks. He wants

To bring Mr. Hügel to meet you, and asked if I would ask you if he might. Well I did!

I was awfully sorry you wandered about Berkeley in search of my abode, but why did you not let me send some one for you?
I did not want to be neg-lectful of my valued guest.

The grapes arrived in delicious condition. Thank you for them.

I hope you are all well, and that Mrs. Streitzel improves.
Give my love to the precious children. I hope to see them soon again.

Has the new book arrived?
I went into the bookstore last evening, hoping I might find a copy, but it evidently was so rare.

Again thanking you for this kindness, as well as the note in which you asked I dear Jane and myself, I am

Sincerely yours

Mathematic Graydon.
